A hotel in New York is run on the principle of "You touch the button and we do the rest." Electricity furnishes the light, heat and power required. A servant can be called by electricity, but a guest has little need of one, for he has his room lighted, heated, cooled or ventilated simply by pressing a button. Eggs are cooked and dishes are kept hot on the table by means of an electric coil; the elevator is called and operated by electricity; a refrigerator supplied with an electric current freezes cream and cools water. A patron does everything by electricity except tipping the waiter and paying his bill.

South Americans say baked bananas are an excellent substitute for meat. For those weary of meat (during warm weather nearly all of us would gladly do without it), it would be well to try the baked banana. It is easily procured, requiring no work to prepare it for the table. Each end should be cut off, the jackets being left on, after the fruit is washed. From twenty to thirty minutes are needed for baking. They are placed upon the table in their jackets, and one served to each person instead of his usual piece of meat. They should then be split lengthwise and buttered, which improves the flavor.

LATER NEWS.

Terrible Explosion.

San Francisco, July 9.—At 9:23 o'clock this morning this city was shaken from end to end by a terrible explosion. What it was, or where it occurred no one could tell. The explanation had hardly been arrived at when at 9:30 there occurred a terrrific explosion that shattered windows all over town, blew in skylights, broke plate glass and caused people to rush into the streets as though a convulsion was about to tumble all the buildings about their ears.

Along the east side of San Francisco bay are a number of powder mannfactories, which have been scenes of periodical explosions in which a number of lives have been lost. At Highland, about half a mile from West Berkeley and north of Berkely and Oakland, are located the works of the Giant Powder company, consisting of chemical works, mixing and packing houses, five large buildings in all, together with three large powder magazines and a number of small ones, and it was here that the explosion occurred this morning.

Three men who were working in the nitro glycerine house were killed. They were John Bowe, Wallace Dickerson and Charles Guberlige. Their bodies were found. The head engineer of the glycerine house was blown twenty feet and knocked senseless. The first explosion gave the men in other departments warning, and they ran in time to escape. The bodies of two Chinamen have also been found. It is almost impossible to estimate the loss, but $200,000 will probably be the outside figure for the damage to the powder works. The San Francisco Chemical works, owned by Egbert Judson and J. L. N. Shepard, were almost completely destroyed, and their loss is not far from $150,000.

An explosion of gasoline occurred in a grocery store of George Wilms, Peoria, Ill., the night of the 9th. Two men were seriously if not fatally injured.

The Great Northern railway will run harvest excursions Aug. 30th and Sept. 27th, at one fare for round trip.

The latest estimates of the fire at St. Johns, places the loss at $25,000,000 and has rendered more than 10,000 persons homeless.

The Great Northern railway has reached Spokane, Wash., and will soon begin running trains from St. Paul and Minneapolis.

SIX WERE KILLED.

A Half Dozen Lives Lost by the Explosion of Giant Powder Works Near San Francisco.

San Francisco, July 11.—By a series of explosions Saturday morning at the works of the Giant Powder Company and the San Francisco Chemical works at Highland, 12 miles from this city, property worth about $350,000 was destroyed and an unknown number of persons were killed. There were over 100 persons, mostly Chinamen, employed at the powder mills. Six persons—three whites and three Chinese—were killed. A great many others were wounded. The pecuniary loss is over $200,000.

The explosion occurred at 9:30 a. m. It shattered windows all over town and blew in skylights, broke plate-glass windows on Montgomery avenue, California street, Montgomery street, Kearney street and other thoroughfares, and caused the people to rush into the streets as though a convulsion was about to tumble all the buildings about their ears. At the Palace hotel there was great fear among the guests, and all over the city there was created a feeling of alarm. The intensity of the shock can be appreciated when it is known that it was distinctively felt at Sacramento, 80 miles distant, and that windows were cracked at Napa and other points along the bay shore, 25 miles from the scene of the explosion.

Along the east side of San Francisco bay are a number of large powder manufactories which have been the scene of periodical explosions in which a number of lives have been lost. At Highland, about half a mile from West Berkeley, and north of Berkeley and Oakland, are located the works of the Giant Powder Company, consisting of chemical works, mixing and packing houses, five large buildings in all, together with three large powder magazines and a number of small ones, and it was here that the explosion occurred. It began in the nitro-glycerine works, and concussion soon caused the explosion in one of the magazines. Flames also broke out to add to the danger, and though a wrecking train had promptly been sent from Oakland the efforts of the crew were confined to a large extent in keeping off the great crowds of people that pressed forward to the scene, for within 200 yards of the flames, unknown to many, was a magazine containing 300 tons of black powder, the explosion of which would have caused a terrible fatality. The cause of the explosion is said to have been the upsetting of a bottle of acid in the office, which set fire to the building.

Three white men who were working in the nitro-glycerine house were killed. They were John Bowe, Wallace Dickerson and Charles Guberlige. Their bodies were found. The head engineer of the glycerine house was blown 20 feet and knocked insensible. The first explosion gave the men in the other departments warning and they ran in time to escape.

Mrs. Painter, of West Berkeley, who was sick, was so affected that she is believed to be dying. A boy named Borchero was blown through the roof of the buildings. He is suffering from concussion of the brain and may die. The body of a Chicaman was found on the railroad track half a mile from the works. The remains of a Chinese boy, frightfully mangled, were found near the scene.

THE CONVENTION ENDS.

Last Days of the Christian Endeavor Meeting in New York.

New York, July 11.—The last day of the great convention of Christian Endeavor societies began at 9 o'clock Sunday morning with a prayer meeting in the Madison Square garden, conducted by Mr. H. B. Pennel, of Boston. About 10,000 delegates were present, and after several prayers and much hymn singing the meeting adjourned at 10:15 o'clock to enable the delegates to attend regular services in the different evangelical churches of the city. The afternoon session at the garden began at 2 o'clock, President Clark presiding. Fully 15,000 delegates were in attendance despite the intense heat. After the prayer and praise meeting brief reports were received from the committee conferences under the direction of Mr. William Shaw, treasurer of the United society, who reported that the greatest enthusiasm had been manifested by the delegates at the different denominational rallies held during the convention.

Addresses were made by Ira D. Sankey, John G. Woolley, of Minnesota; E. R. Young, of Toronto, and Rev. Dr. Barrows, of Chicago. The convention then adjourned to meet next year in Montreal.

Saturday's meetings were devoted to reports of missionary efforts by individual delegates. Vice presidents were selected to represent each of the state and provincial unions. In the afternoon denomenational rallies were held in nearly two dozen receptions. The evening was devoted to receptions at nearly all the state headquarters.

Raised the Cash.

Chicago, July 11.—The completion of the $1,000,000 subscription for the university of Chicago by July 10, on which conditional contributions of large amounts depended, was accomplished at noon Saturday by Maj. H. A. Rust, vice president of the university and a member of the board of trustees, pledging himself to give $50,000.

To Enforce the Exclusion Act.

Washington, July 9.—Secretary Foster has signed the regulations which have been prepared to govern treasury officials in registering the Chinese population and carrying into effect the exclusion act. Copies have been forwarded to all government officers charged with the enforcement of this act.

Aid for Justices' Widows.

Washington, July 11.—The senate has voted to appropriate $10,500 to Chief Justice Waite's widow and $10,000 each to the widows of Justices Miller and Bradley.

Overcome by Heat and Smoke.

Louisville, Ky., July 11.—A fire at the tannery of Wedkind, Hallenberg & Bros. Sunday morning caused a loss of $200,000, insurance $58,000, and the serious injury of three men. These men fell from a fourth-story window, overcome by heat and smoke, just as rescue was at hand.

Nine Lives Lost.

Paris, July 9.—The Dix-Neuvieme Siecle publishes the information that the Dahomeyans have burned the Catholic mission buildings at Porto Novo, and that six missionaries and three nuns perished in the flames.

DOOM OF ST. JOHNS.

The Capital of Newfoundland Almost Entirely Destroyed by Fire—Over 600 Buildings Burned—Twenty Lives Lost—Property Valued at $12,000,000 Swept Away by the Flames.

St. Johns, N. F., July 11.—Authentic data relative to the great fire show that in some respects the previous reports were overrated, while in some cases the facts disclose a worse state of affairs than even rumors indicated. It develops that the magnificent Catholic cathedral was not destroyed, and the Union bank is also safe.

The fire was the result of a lighted match being carelessly thrown down in a stable at the head of Long's hill. No rain had fallen for several weeks previously and the flames, carried by a strong wind, made rapid headway. So rapidly did the flames spread that hardly was there time for the people to flee for their lives, while buildings hundreds of yards off were being fired in every direction by the flying embers. The burned area extends from Beck's cove to Hoylestown, every business house in this section being destroyed. From the military road to the water's edge nine-tenths of the houses are burned.

It is known positively that twenty persons perished. Six were drowned, while eight men and six children were burned to death. Probably the fatalities amount to a great many more. At this time it is impossible to learn the names of any of those killed. Inquiry is being made on every side for persons who are missing.

The losses will amount to about $12,000,000. The insurance will cover about one-half the loss.

The flames raged all of Saturday, sweeping on before the wind and claiming for prey everything in their path. At 10 a. m. it seemed to have ceased, but again started and raged throughout the day more fiercely than ever. The shipping was saved by towing it beyond the confines of the harbor as soon as the fire was seen to be sweeping that way and that it was beyond control. The waters of the bay are covered with the charred and half burned articles that were carried out by the wind, and the air is filled with blazing particles. A great pall of smoke hangs over the site of the ruined city and adds its depressing influence upon the suffering people. The distress of the populace is terrible, and unless relief is at once received much sickness and death will result.

The following streets were wiped out: Military road, Duckworth street, Prescott street, Queen's road, Cochrane street, Gower street, King's road, Cathedral hill, Long's hill. The principal buildings, houses and hotels burned are as follows:

Bryden's, Bowring Bros., J. & W. Pitts, Goodfellow & Co.'s, Ayre & Sons, G. Knowlton, Baine, Johnson & Co.; Baird's, Thornburnets, Tessier, Cliftwood & Co., Hearns & Co., the City club, Harvey & Co., Stott's grocery, Mo Murdoc & Co., chemists: Atlantic hotel, the American consul office, the Gordon house, H. P. Welsh, Ryan & Co., the Army and Navy depot, Bearnes & Co., Aldridge's hotel, the Royal hotel, the Market house, the courthouse, custom house, March & Sons, Shea & Co., Booking's premises, Pitt's steamer wharf, soap and tobacco factory, St. Johns tannery, Costal steam wharf, Lindberg's brewery, Union and Commercial banks, Commercial exchange, all the law offices and doctors' residences, the school of art, the principal home mission, and merchants' offices and insurance agents' offices.

The fire stopped on Water street west of Browning's. From Cochrane street west of Browning's, once thickly studded with dwellings, there is now nothing but a forest of chimneys. It is estimated that the insurance on the buildings destroyed and on stock will amount to $6,000,000.

The progress of the flames was told in Saturday morning's dispatches. Men, women and children ran about in terror, and thieves, taking advantage of the confusion, entered houses that had been deserted by their occupants and stole whatever they could lay their hands on and carry off.

There are 15,000 people absolutely nomeless, with no shed even to shelter them and no food to eat. The men are suffering most, for they have fought for hours the terrible flames without food to eat or a second to rest, and that in a heat so frightfully intense that hundreds of them, brawny, brave, seafaring men have fainted from exhaustion. Physicians cannot attend the suffering men, they are so numerous, and unless some one sends food to the people at once the terrors of the calamity will be even greater.

From Hearts's Content, the cable station on Newfoundland, comes word that a village called Cats Cove, consisting of twenty-eight houses, and 7 miles from St. John's was wiped out of existence Saturday night. The flames had been carried there by the burning forests.

The fires in the forests are sweeping with terrible effect along the country, and the villages in the path of the flames cannot be saved. The condition of affairs is thus made terrible to contemplate. Nowhere is there anything like order, and the passing vessels are anchoring off the coast and sending their crews ashore to assist the people, who are so thoroughly demoralized and exhausted that they cannot help themselves. There are all about St. John's many villages, large and small, that, if wiped out, will make the total loss much greater, and the few reports seem to indicate that nothing can save them in the path of the flames raging in the forests.

KILLED HIS DIVORCED WIFE.

After Murder, Oscar Wissinger Blows Out His Own Brains.

Springfield, O., July 11.—Oscar Wissinger, a well-connected tinner here, 60 years old, who was divorced three months ago from his wife at her petition, returned Saturday night from Indianapolis, where he had been working. He went to his wife's house, had a few words with her and then shot her twice with a 38-caliber revolver, once through the heart. Wissinger then put the gun to his own head, fired it and fell back dead. He has been regarded as insane for some time. The couple leave eleven children

Nineteen Killed.

Geneva, July 11.—On the lake of Geneva the boiler of one of the steamers at her pier at Ouchy exploded Nineteen of those on board the steamer were killed outright and forty were injured. Many of the passengers were blown into the lake, from which they were rescued by small boats which put out from the shore.

Increased the Pension Bill.

Washington, July 11.—The total amount of the pension appropriation bill as agreed upon in conference is $146,787,350, or $11,912,284 greater than the amount voted by the house.

RIFLES AND BAYONETS.

To Be Used in Upholding the Law at Homestead—Pennsylvania's Entire Militia, Numbering Nearly 8,000 Men, Ordered to the Scene of Action—Strikers Will Not Resist.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 11.—The entire division of the national guard of Pennsylvania, about 8,000 men, has been ordered to Homestead to support Sheriff McCleary in suppressing the riots at that place. This action of the governor was taken on receipt of the following dispatch:

"Pittsburgh, Pa., July 10.—To Robert E. Pattison, Governor, Harrisburg, Pa: The situation at Homestead has not improved. While all is quiet there, the strikers are in control and openly express to me and to the public their determination that the works shall not be operated unless by themselves. After making all efforts in my power I have failed to secure a posse respectable enough in numbers to accomplish anything, and I am satisfied that no posse raised by the civil authorities can do anything to change the condition of affairs, and that any attempt by an inadequate force to restore the right of law will only result in further armed resistance and consequent loss of life. Only a large military force will enable me to control matters. I believe if such force is sent the disorderly element will be overawed and order will be restored. I therefore call upon you to furnish me such assistance.

"William H. McCleary, Sheriff.

Gov. Pattison, as commander in chief of the national guard, at once issued the following order:

"George R. Snowden, Major General, Commanding National Guard of Pennsylvania: Put the division under arms and move at once, with ammunition, to support the sheriff of Allegheny county at Homestead. Maintain the peace. Protect all persons in their rights under the constitution and laws of the state. Communicate with me.

"Robert E. Pattison, Governor."

Gen. Snowden, with the adjutant general and quartermaster general, at once proceeded to formulate the orders for the mobilization of the guard. Some troops will be under way early this morning.

Late Sunday night Maj. Gen. Snowden issued the following order:

"To Brig. Gen. Robert P. Dechert, Philadelphia, Commanding First Brigade: In compliance with orders from the commander in chief you will concentrate your command in camp at Mount Gretna by to-morrow (Monday) afternoon and there await further orders. Battery horsed. Take with you your three days' rations and all ammunition on hand First troop mounted will move on first train available on Pennsylvania railway bound west."

An order was issued to the second brigade to concentrate at a point Gen. Snowden declined to make public (presumably Homestead) and await orders. The third brigade was ordered to concentrate at Lewistown and move west. Telegrams were sent to all the regimental commanders.

The national guard of Pennsylvania consists of one division of three brigades, numbering about 6,700 men. The first brigade is commanded by Brig. Gen. Dechert and the headquarters are in this city. The First brigade musters about 2,000 men and is the smallest in numerical strength of the three. The Second brigade is the strongest in the division—about 2,500 men. It is commanded by Brig. Gen. Wiley, with headquarters at Franklin. The Third brigade musters about 2,100 men and is commanded by Brig. Gen. Gobin, with headquarters at Lebanon.

Homestead, Pa., July 11.—The news that the governor had ordered out the state troops created great excitement here Sunday night. It was not received until 11 o'clock and most of the strikers had gone home. Those who remained on the streets hastily gathered together and discussed the meaning of the new move. "Will the soldiers protect the 'black sheep' if Carnegie tries to start up with non-union men?" was the chief question. Many of the men who lingered on the streets refused to believe that the troops had been called out and said that it was like all of the wild rumors that had been circulated every night.

The hot-headed strikers were at first disposed to be a little defiant, and there were occasional declarations that even the militia would be opposed, but when it was learned that the division ordered out numbered 8,000 men, these declarations promptly gave way to: "Oh, well, we have beat the Pinkertons, anyway; they did not dare to come," and thus consolation is found in the reflection that the most hated enemy of organized labor—the Pinkerton guards—had been obliged to confess defeat and give up the battle. The leaders of the strikers were unusually uncommunicative. "We cannot talk," was the response to all interrogations. Later the opinion was freely expressed by the rank and file that the militia would be received by no hostile demonstration and that an armistice would be declared until after their departure. "But they will have to go away some time," said the leader of a little group near the depot, "and when they do we would like to see them run the mill non-union."

The most important announcement made by the local committee Sunday was that the men here do not wish to submit their cause to arbitration now that the Carnegie company has taken such a decided stand against the Amalgamated association. The communication from the Universal Peace union offering to provide an impartial court of arbitration does not meet with favor.

They have been receiving hundreds of letters and telegrams from labor unions all over the country urging them to stand firm in the fight against Carnegie. Pledges of money and provisions have come from almost every state in the union. Campaign clubs have forwarded telegrams denouncing the protection barons.

PENCILINGS OF ART.

The clay model for Mr. Elliott's equestrian statue of McClellan, which is to be unveiled in Philadelphia next September, is virtually completed.

Charles Stewart Smith, president of the New York chamber of commerce and trustee of the Metropolitan museum, says the art treasures of the latter amount in value to $7,000,000.

The empress of Germany has requested the minister of public instruction to prevent the admission to the art museums of Berlin of young girls unless under the guidance of teachers or parents.

The late Alfred Grevin, one of the most distinguished caricaturists of Paris, began his career as a clerk in a French railroad office, where he made comic sketches for the company to use in its advertisements for the local newspapers.

The small guild of draughtsmen who have the franchise to draw pictures on the London pavements have suddenly taken to cultivating a higher style of art. They have improved greatly in their profession and are going into political caricature, something they never used to do at all.

Sisters Are Out.

Mrs. Mary D. Phillips does not believe in banks as safe depositories for money. She came into possession of some money recently, and sewed two $1,000 bills and four $200 bills into the lining of one of her skirts for safe keeping. This was done in the east before she came to St. Paul to visit her sister, Mrs. Cornelia M. Thomas. Both women are divorced from their respective husbands. They are also very handsome and have been most affectionate until Mrs. Phillips caused the arrest of Mrs. Thomas for stealing one of the $1,000 bills from its hiding place.

The Soldiers' Home.

Secretary Beebe, of the soldiers' home, has submitted his June report on the finance of the institution. It shows that the amount expended from the home support fund during June was $4,278.44, leaving a balance of $5,529.75. Of the soldiers' relief tax levy the amount expended during June was $4,563.16, leaving a balance undrawn of $27,165.54. For repairs, $25.50 was expended, leaving $4.50 in the treasury. There are 594 veterans receiving temporary relief at present, amounting to $3,254 for June.

Pardoned a Life Prisoner.

Ole Nortrom, a life convict at the state prison from Traverse county, has been pardoned by Gov. Merriam, after having served over fourteen years. Nortrom's crime was one of the most cold-blooded affairs ever occurring in Minnesota. He murdered his father, concealing the corpse under the floor and then gave a dance in the house next evening, literally dancing over his murdered father's body.

Bicyclists, Beware.

The city council of Winona, in view of the large and increasing number of bicyclists in that city, and corresponding increase of careless riding, has passed an ordinance limiting the speed to six miles an hour, excluding the machines from sidewalks in business streets, and providing that both bell and lantern shall be used. A fine of $50 or imprisonment for ninety days is the maximum sentence for violation.

A Fatal Shot.

Mrs. A. M. Smith (colored), of St. Paul, shot and killed an unknown white man at Lake Owosso. The trouble arose over the fencing of part of the lake by Charles Heneige, a market gardener, for whom Mrs. Smith was housekeeper. The man was fishing on forbidden ground, was warned away, and in a fight with Heneige was killed by Mrs. Smith.

The News Briefly Stated.

John L. Omre, a stonemason at Montevideo, committed suicide by taking rat poison.

Hans P. Slette, of Granite Falls, was given $4,100 for injuries sustained while in the employ of the Great Northern railroad.

A barber named Peck was nearly killed in a quarrel with Manager King in the Eureka club gambling rooms at St. Paul.

At Third River Falls two brick yards have commenced operations and are turning out the finest quality of red brick at a rapid rate.

The office of F. E. Collandon, manufacturing jeweler at St. Paul, was burglarized, the safe forced and goods worth $1,500 stolen.

Fire destroyed the sawmill at Minneapolis owned by Smith & Richardson and damaged the mill of Joanin & Hanson. Loss, $88,000; insurance, $85,000.

They are still threshing last year's wheat crop in Marshall county.

Mrs. John A. Logan was tendered a reception at Minneapolis by Mr. and Mrs. Morrison.

While hunting near Pine Knot C. A. Pierce accidentally shot and probably fatally wounded his son.

The Riverside cooper shop at Little Falls was burned. Loss, $1,200 to $1,000; insurance, $1,500. Ten men employed lost kits valued at $250.

The stone work on the Indian school has been completed at Pipestone.

President Harrison has granted a pardon to W. E. Covel, of Minnesota, convicted of employing an unlicensed engineer on a ferryboat.

John Holt, of Oscar township, was bound over to the grand jury for attempted criminal assault upon his cousin, a girl of 14 years.

Walter Lea, residing at Woodland, was killed while engaged in sawing pickets by being struck in the abdomen by a flying piece of plank.

The Chandler mine on the Vermillion iron range will ship 600,000 tons of ore this season and the Minnesota will ship 500,000 tons.

The Farmers' Alliance party met in St. Paul and nominated Gen. James H. Baker, ex-secretary of state, for governor. No other nominations were made.

Thomas Blake, a 9-year-old boy living at Rosetown, was drowned in Bass lake.

While Walter Bernhart and Alfred Jensen were crossing Lake Miltona at Alexandria their skiff was accidentally overturned and Bernhart, being unable to swim, was drowned.

G. L. Hollowell, who had been engaged in the grocery bsuiness in Winona for twenty-five years, has filed an assignment. Assets about $1,500; liabilities, $4,000.

At Lake Minnetonka Laura Lewis, Ida Swanson, Rufus Hogan and Oscar Sandell were out rowing when the boat capsized and the two girls and Hogan were drowned. They lived in St. Paul.

J. M. Gilman was divorced from his wife at Duluth on the ground of bigamy. He claims she was never legally divorced from Hugh McFaden. She says she was and that the records are lost.

A SUMMER SHOWER.

Patter, patter on the pane—
Hear the melancholy rain,
As it falls with sad refrain!
Nature's face is bathed in tears—
E'en our own full sad appears.
Yet to Heaven's will we bow,
Though we're weather-bound just now.
Patter, patter on the pane—
Hear the melancholy rain.

Patter, patter on the pane—
Hear the soft, refreshing rain,
As it falls with glad refrain!
Nature's creatures, one and all,
Seem the gladder for its fall.
See the daisies how they smile,
Though so sad and parched erewhile!
Patter, patter on the pane—
'Tis a soft, refreshing rain

Patter, patter on the pane—
Now no more we hear the rain.
Lo! the sunshine reappears;
God is smiling through the tears,
Thus, though life may have its shower,
'Tis directed by His power.
Though it patter on the pane,
Though it fall with sad refrain,
God is smiling through the rain.

ON THE SUNSET TRAIL.

The Fate That Befell a Faithful Mail Carrier.

Danny Redmond was the mail carrier on the Sunset trail, and he fully realized the importance of his position. Traffic might stagnate, civilization might pall, but the United States mail must go right ahead, and on schedule time at that. As for the Sunset trail, it wound its way far over the dreary plains of Kansas, across the Cimmarron, and on and on into the great state of the Lone Star.

But Danny's route only extended to Crooked Creek, a town consisting of a grocery store. At this time the population of Ford county could have been easily corralled on a quarter section, and had comfortable standing room at that. Danny was an apostle to these lone settlers, and only one who has experienced the appalling loneliness of existence in those thinly-peopled plains, where you can see your next-door neighbor's shanty on clear days only, can realize the joy with which they heralded this blue-eyed, brown-haired bunch of turbulence.

"Two o'clock," would comment some unkempt denizen, consulting the sun. "Danny'll be here in ten minutes."

Then they would look till their eyes ached afar to where the Sunset trail tipped over the roll of prairie at the horizon. Soon their watching would be rewarded, and steadily and swiftly would the bay mare, Dolly, bear her rider down the trail in that swinging, indefatigable gallop of the mustang.

Perchance some settler coming into the post office would appreciate the best side of the road and jog along in the path that Danny chose.

"Git out o' the way of the United States mail!" would come the warnipg, and he would prudently "git" to the other side of the road, for Danny could and would shoot, and, besides, didn't he have everyone of those fellows down at the office to stand at his back to the last shot? So no matter how much of a fire eater the obstructer might be, he switched off when the carrier demanded the right of way.

And that was often. For that lad had the idea inculcated into his bing that all other powers, terrestrial and celestial, were secondary considerations when the United States mail was concerned, and he seized every opportunity to exercise his authority.

How longingly and expectantly those eager pioneers would watch the letters distributed! Though, perhaps, they had no grounds for expecting a letter, yet their hope did not sink until the last one was put away.

Then the return mail would be made up, and at the exact minute Danny would vault into the large Mexican saddle—almost as large as he or Dolly—and with the all-potent mail securely strapped to the girdles on each side, he would recommence his long ride, never stopping as he tried a flying shot at some unwieldy rattlesnake that had dragged its mottled form out on the rail to loll in the sun, and who would not be able to wiggle into the tall grass ere the United States mail was upon him. Along the route the settlers would come out of their shanties half bent and wave their sombreros and cheer the buoyant rider.

Wabash was the only stop. It was of the same importance as Crooked Creek, only there were two houses instead of one, or rather, a double house; for the owners of the claims that joined up there occupied a shanty of two compartments, one on each claim. Somehow or other the scamp would sit straighter in the saddle and pull Dolly's head up higher when they approached Wabash, and a pretty little peach of a girl would come out and chat with the carrier while her spectacled father's attention was riveted on the letter package. Dolly would probably think that Danny was getting rather weighty on one side as he bent low in the saddle, dangerously close to that pink sun bonnet. And the scoffing gopher that sat up conveniently close to his burrow would wonder for what reason a fellow would want to bite a pretty girl like her. But Rosie didn't seem to mind the punishment a bit. Ah, I fear Danny would feign have lingered longer at the unprepossessing post of Wabash, but—the United States mail must be carried on.

One day a cowboy came into the fort with a jaded mustang and a slash across his cheek and reported that he had been chased by a band of Arapahoes. These children of nature had grown insolent with well feeding and little work. They often became thus at irregular intervals, and breaking from the reservation swept north upon the the scattered settlers of the plains, considerably depopulating those sparsely inhabited districts. Their great father in Washington, they complained, was not giving them enough blankets, and, in consequence, they were compelled to trade their moccasins for "fire water."

Danny was preparing to start upon his route when the news came.

"You oughtn't to go, Dan," they said, "for they'll strike right up the Cimmarron like they allays do, an' mor'n likely fall afoul of you. If you do your scalp'll dangle from some red nigger's belt before mornin'."

"I'm not skeert," replied he, settling himself in the saddle, "and, besides, the folks at Wabash and at the Crick ought to be warned. And you know the mail has to go as long as it's anyways possible."

The spur touched Dolly's flank more often than usual, but she kept up bravely, and Danny clattered into Wabash ahead of time. Imparting the alarming intelligence to old man Beck, the postmaster, and cautioning him to get the family ready and start for the post without further delay, he rode on toward Crooked Creek.

"Jewhillakers!" exclaimed one of the watchers. "What's Danny ridin' so allfired fast about? Must be suthin' up."

They soon knew, and scattered for their respective claims to prepare for flight ere the storm burst.

Danny clinched the saddle tighter and looked to his weapon ere he mounted for the home ride. He was not afraid. Had he been a coward he would have remained safely at the fort. But an ominous dread fell upon him as he thought of the dark Cimmarron. He arrived at Wabash and looked in at the open door of the Beck and Lartan households. Everything was topsy-turvy as left in the hurry of departure.

"Well, Rosie is safe anyway," he confided to Dolly, with a sigh.

Their flying shadows grew longer and longer, and finally night dropped on the plains. Before him loomed the Cimmarron. He could see the misty vapor rolling up like smoke.

"If they're anywhere they'll be down there," he mused. "They'll want to lay along the trail and catch some of the settlers makin' for Dodge. Wonder if I hadn't better cross further down?"

It was a good idea, and he turned Dolly from the trail and directed his course further down the river.

The reins changed from right to left as he entered the mist, and his right fell upon the protruding butt of a revolver in his belt. A twig cracked under the horse's feet and gave the rider a start. Down into the waters of the Cimmarron they splashed. Dolly pulled at the rein.

"No, no, Doll; can't drink this time," he murmured.

He climbed the bank on the opposite side and rode out on the plain, breathing easier.

"Spang!"

Dolly bolted forward, and a flame of light flashed in the darkness up the river.

"Yip-yip-yip!" It was the war cry of the Arapahoes. The fight and flight was on. With a yell of defiance he fired at the dark mass tearing after him, and bending low over the saddle horn spoke encouragingly to the horse:

"Dolly, if you ever run, do it now. You're faster than any of them, Dolly, if you'll only try—look out for gopher hills—that's a good horse. Whew! that one was close. Now you're gettin' down to it, Dolly. We'll beat the red devils yit. On, Doll. Remember, we've got the mail, and it must be saved. Here's the trail. Now see how fast you can run. Ouch! Oh, God, I'm hit, and hit home at that. It's all with you, Dolly; it's all with you."

And he clung to the saddle horn and gave the mustang free rein.

Horse sense: we hear it alluded to in a jocular way. Did Dolly realize that in her fleet feet lay her master's only salvation? I think so, you may not. But she ran like a frightened antelope, hardly seeming to touch the ground, while Danny with closed eyes and clenched teeth clung to the saddle horn with the desperation of death.

"Halt, who comes there?" challenged the guard as a horse and rider came lounging into the fort.

"The United States mail," came the faint reply, and Dolly galloped up with blood in her nostrils, and blood on her flanks, quivering like an aspen.

"Dan, are you hurt?" queried the soldier, lifting him from the saddle.

"I'm hit dead," he replied, with a moan. They carried him into the barrack-room and the surgeon was summoned, but there was no hope, he said. It was a wonder he had lived as long as he had. Soon the news spread to the camp, and the rough soldiers and fugitive settlers gathered around him, watching with breathless interest for the end to come. A girl came pushing her way through the crowd—a scared-faced girl, wringing her hands in agony. She bent down and took the sufferer's hand.

"Rosie," said he, with a pained smile, "I'm a goner, I guess. Good-by, Rosie; you can have Dolly, and take good care of her, for she did all she could to save me. Good-by, boys. Yonder's th Cimmarron. That's a good horse, Dolly."

"Delirium," said the surgeon.

"Get out of the way of the United States mail—"

The end came. Another daring spirit had passed along that unknown trail that leads through the dark, dreary desert of death.—Charles Maurice Crayton, in Chicago Inter Ocean.

THE FAITHFUL DOG.

He Is the Most Sincere Friend a Man Can Have.

I do not blame any man or woman for being fond of dogs. The dog is the most faithful friend that a human being can have, and it matters not whether the four-footed friend be stately St. Bernard, an aristocratic greyhound, an intelligent spaniel, or a homely mongrel, once won, his affections are constant till death. Lord Byron was an enthusiastic admirer of dogs, as witness the beautiful lines he wrote on the death of a favorite pet, and his glowing declaration that it is "sweet to hear the honest watchdog's bark, bay deep-mouthed welcome as we draw near home." Prince Bismarck is always attended by his huge boar hound, and any number of distinguished personages, including the peerless diva, Adelina Patti, are warmly attached to dogs. I must confess, however, that I dislike to see women fondling and bestowing the most loving attentions on the black-muzzled, stupid pug and the insignificant poodle. Indeed, I don't care for small dogs at all, but greatly prefer mastiffs, great Danes, Newfoundlands, spaniels, pointers, setters and the much libeled bulldog even, all of whom are intelligent and, as the old Yankee said, "sizable." In all candor I am constrained to admit, though, that some men carry dogfancying to an unwarrantable extent, and then it becomes simply brutalizing. Just think, for instance, how lost to all sense of manhood men must be who train dogs with a special view to making them savage, and then turn them loose in a pit to fight to the death. The dogs who tear each other's flesh into shreds are infinitely more respectable than the men who incite them to do battle, and yet the inhuman pastime is called "sport" and decent people wink at it. We rail at the barbarity of our Spanish and Mexican cousins who patronize bull fights, and at the same time say never a word in protest when we read that "Jack" and "Turk" fought viciously for an hour and twenty minutes the night before.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—Having sold his famous cruising cutter, the Valkyrie, to the Archduke Stephen of Austria, Lord Dunraven has decided to fit out his other yacht, L'Esperence. This vessel was built last summer for a fishing boat, but was sailed in several matches, including the queen's cup.

—A Mr. Stokes once asked Tennyson: "What do you think of Browning?" The Laureate replied: "I would rather not say." Tennyson is a great admirer of Gray and Burns, and once said that he would rather have written the "Elegy in the Country Churchyard" than any other poem.

—The reconciliation between Annie Besant and her husband, Rev. Frank Besant, if it is consummated as is expected, will be a great triumph for the daughter of the estranged pair, who is devoting all her energies to the bringing together of parents whose names have become public property.

—The oldest known journal of the weather was kept by Rev. William Merle, rector of Driby, Lincolnshire, England, from 1337 to 1344. The journal had been deposited in the Bodleian library, and was mentioned by Dr. Plot, of the Royal society, in 1685, which mention led to its recent discovery.

—Speaking of a snowstorm, Kipling, in the Boston Transcript, says: "Mother Nature is beautifully tidy if you leave her alone. She rounded off every angle, broke down every scarp, and tucked the white bedclothes till not a wrinkle remained, up to the chins of the spruces and the hemlocks that would not go to sleep."

—Minister Thomas, who represents Uncle Sam at Stockholm, is acquiring a great reputation as a sportsman. He went out to one of the small islands in the Baltic near the Swedish capital recently and in the course of an hour or two shot twenty-one eider ducks—an unprecedented achievement in that part of the world.

—Commodore William Wallace Hunter, who died in New Orleans recently at the age of 90 years, was a native of Philadelphia. He received his appointment to the navy in 1822, and resigned from it when the civil war broke out for the purpose of going with the confederacy. He was in command of a United States man-of-war at the time, and, sailing it to the Brooklyn navy yard, he turned the vessel to the commandant, obtained a receipt for all government property for which he was responsible, and then sent his resignation to Washington.

—The constant recourse of the American dramatists to-day to the French stage makes noteworthy the reminder that as recently as 1620 there was only one theater open in Paris, the Hotel de Bourgogne, at which Corneille was first employed. His great play "Le Cid" was an adaptation from the Spanish, and gave rise to the proverb, "As beautiful as 'The Cid.'" Ruy Diaz, who gave the play its name, was acknowledged "Seid" or lord by five Moorish chieftains whom he conquered in turn in one battle. It is one dramatic classic which has as yet not been burlesqued in farce comedy.

The Ruling Passion.

A gentleman found himself one evening in delightful tete-a-tete with a fair graduate of a well-known finishing school for young ladies. She showed him the curriculum of the institution, and he after simulating a profound interest in the matter and knowledge of the subjects, being in reality a little awed by the evidence of her large stature, asked her rather hesitatingly, with reference to the various courses of study, in what she had graduated. "Oh," she said sweetly, "I graduated in white Swiss."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—To freshen salt fish, lay it skin-side up, and always in an earthen vessel.

—Spiced Beef: Mince fine the steak and a small piece of suit; season with Salt, pepper, sage and thyme or a little summer savory; add an egg and one or two spoonfuls of cream; mix and work into a roll with enough flour to keep it together in a pan like roast beef. Slice when cold.—Good Housekeeping.

—Flour should be kept in a cool, dry place. If possible, have some kind of a close receptacle for it, and do not provide too large a quantity, as it sometimes spoils by keeping too long. It should be watched to see that it is free from mites, as these are more destructive than mice.

—Drawn Butter Sauce: One-half cup of butter, one pint of hot water, one-half cup of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla or the juice of one lemon, one tablespoonful of flour or corn starch made to a smooth paste. Turn into the rest and let it boil five minutes; add a little grated nutmeg.—Boston Budget.

—To Tie a Shoestring: Proceed exactly as if you were going to tie an ordinary bow-knot; but before drawing it up pass the right-hand loop through the knot, then give a steady and simultaneous pull on both loops, and your shoestring will be tied fast. When you wish to untie it pull the right-hand string, and you will have no difficulty.—Ladies' Home Journal.

—Cockle shells have recently been utilized in the decoration of hall lamp shades. Groups of these small and exquisitely-marked scallop shells are set on clear glass shades, interspersed with knobs of colored glass in different colors. The light shining through the shells displays their exquisite delicacy of coloring, and altogether the arrangement is unique and effective.—N. Y. Tribune.

—For mutton broth take three pounds of the scrag end of a neck of very fresh mutton, cut it up in several pieces, wash in cold water, and put them in a saucepan with a quart of water, place it on the fire to boil, skim and add a couple of turnips cut into slices, a little parsley and a little salt. Let it boil slowly for an hour and a half, skim off the fat from the surface, strain through a fine sieve into a pitcher and keep for use.—Boston Budget.

—Buffalo Cream Cake: One egg, one cup of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, two-thirds of a cup of milk, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one and two-thirds cups of flour, a small pinch of salt; season with nutmeg or vanilla and bake in jelly-cake tins. Cream—Heat one pint of milk; add one tablespoonful of cornstarch (or two of flour), dissolved in milk; two eggs, one cup of sugar, all beaten together; boil until it thickens; split the cakes; when cold add the cream.—Detroit Free Press.

—Cream Cakes: Two cupfuls of boiling water, one cupful of butter; boil up and add two cupfuls of flour. When cool add six unbeaten eggs. Cook twenty-five minutes in a hot oven. A wet spoon takes out the batter neatly. To make the cream, heat two cupfuls of milk; mix together one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of flour and two eggs, and add to the hot milk. When thick, take off; add one teaspoonful of butter, and lemon flavoring to the taste. This makes four dozen small cream cakes.—Good Housekeeping.

—Chocolate Pudding: For one quart of sweet milk take a teacupful bread crumbs, two-thirds cupful of grated chocolate, the yolks of four eggs and one teacupful sugar. Heat milk and crumbs to moderate warmth and stir into them the sugar, chocolate and yolks, well beaten together with a tablespoonful of corn starch previously moistened with a little milk or water. Stir until scalding hot, then pour into a dish and cover the top with the egg whites beaten stiff and sweetened. Bake brown. Serve cold.—Orange Judd Farmer.

SILKEN UNDERWEAR.

A Luxury That Is Much Cheaper Than Formerly.

Many women of refined tastes who in times past longed for the delightful luxury of silken underwear can now revel in it, for in all the stores are to be found good strong surahs and washing silks, white and tinted, at astonishingly low prices, and these silken garments are so easily cleaned and freshened that the price that was asked for freshening the old style rattling starched skirts, bedecked with flounces, frills and insertion, is saved over and over again by the adoption of the silk garments in their place. The modistes hail these skirts with great satisfaction, for there are few toilets that do not look and hang better over silk skirts, and the present sheath style of gown really demands them. Of course there is, and always will be, a sense of neatness and freshness about fine linen and muslin underwear, and in their place for certain uses they have no rival. In morning dress, for example, many women still prefer them daintily laundered, however, and "done up" in the new method, with only the very thinnest of water starch, which only gives them a slight body and no stiffness whatever. Still, for general uses silk is supreme.—N. Y. Post.

Luxurious Bathroom Appointments.

Immense powder-boxes, as large as a good sized flower-pot, of Coalport china are the latest addition to the bathroom furniture. They are without covers for two reasons, first, because the covers are continually being broken, and second, because the newest powder-puffs have handles which are truly works of art. Small carved statues of ivory or silver surmount these puffs and it is not to be wondered at that the owner's like them to be seen. Almond meal sifters are convenient but expensive, twelve dollars being the price for one of cut-glass with a peforated top of solid silver. Individual ice-breakers, with handles of ivory or bone, are useful things, either for the bathroom or to take away with one during the summer.—Philadelphia Press.

Silk Dresses.

Summer silks make pleasantly cool dresses that need not cost much if made at home, as only twelve yards are needed, and many pretty silks are to be had for seventy-five cents or one dollar a yard. There are good India silks at such prices, but it is poor economy to buy cheaper qualities than these. The shot surahs with small figures, flowers of natural colors, or white dotted lines, are a favorite choice, and the striped and speckled taffetas are being made up for house dresses. The trimmings are ecru, white or black lace in open patterns, and satin ribbons of the color prevailing in the silk, or else white or black to match the lace.—Harper's Bazar.

An Unjust Suspicion.

Matilda Snowball, the colored domestic in a Harlem family, was suspected of helping herself to some wine.

"Own up, Matilda, that you have been drinking out of this bottle of Rhine wine," said the lady of the house.

"No, mum, I nebber has been near dat bottle."

"Are you sure?"

"Ob course I is. Catch me a-drinking dat ar sour stuff what puckers up yer mouf. No, mum, I has got better sense dan dat ar."—Texas Siftings.

Old-Time Weather.

Old Lady—Dear me, what a wet rain this is! The streets are like streams.

Little Girl—Once, when I was little, it rained hard as this all day, an' the streets didn't get wet at all.

"Impossible, my pet, impossible."

"I saw it."

"You are certainly mistaken."

"No, I isn't. Fast as it came down it froze."—Good News.

A Safe Investment

May be shortly defined as one guaranteed to bring you satisfactory results. Among investments which come up to the standard are these:

A ticket over "The Burlington" from Minneapolis or St. Paul to Chicago and points east.

A business lot or a good home in any of the many hundred thriving cities and towns located on the Burlington lines in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and Wyoming.

A ticket over "The Burlington" from the northwest to St. Louis and all points south.

A cheap farm selected from the fertile lands of Kansas, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Oregon or Washington, taking "The Burlington" as the best route to get there.

An application to your local railroad agent for your ticket via "The Burlington."

A sheet of paper, envelope, and a two cent stamp, expended in writing to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn., for further information on the above points.

A SENSITIVE old bachelor says that pretty girls always affect him just as ornamental confectionery does—they give him the heartburn.—Once a Week.

"THIS is an application for relief," as the man said when he stuck the porous plaster on his pain.—Philadelphia Record.

Caught at Last

In the toils of dyspepsia after imposing on the stomach for years, how shall the sufferer restore his much abused digestion? By a resort to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, coupled with an abandonment of eatables and drinkables calculated to injure the digestive apparatus in a feeble state. Nothing like the Bitters for conquering malaria, bilious and kidney trouble, rheumatism and liver disorder.

All the year round is the time when Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery works the best.

It purifies the blood.

It's not like the sarsaparillas, which claim to do good in March, April, and May; you can depend upon it always. That's why it is guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case for which it's recommended, you have your money back.

No other medicine of its kind says as much—but no other does as much. It cleanses, renews and invigorates the entire system. For all skin, scalp and scrofulous affections, as Eczema, Tetter, Salt-rheum, White Swellings, Hip-joint Disease, and kindred ailments, it's a positive cure.

The proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy offer $500 for an incurable case of Catarrh. It isn't mere talk—it's business.

They mean to pay you, if they can't cure you. But you'll find that they can.

"August Flower"

"I am Post Master here and keep a Store. I have kept August Flower for sale for some time. I think it is a splendid medicine." E. A. Bond, P. M., Pavilion Centre, N. Y.

The stomach is the reservoir. If it fails, everything fails. The liver, the kidneys, the lungs, the heart, the head, the blood, the nerves all go wrong. If you feel wrong, look to the stomach first. Put that right at once by using August Flower. It assures a good appetite and a good digestion.

You Can't Keep Cool

while you're rubbing away over a tub of steaming clothes. If you want to keep comfortable and save your health (think of inhaling that fetid steam) and strength, stop the rubbing—and the steaming. Pearline does it. Pearline; cold water; no boiling; little work; that is the programme for hot-weather washing.

This taking away of the rubbing is more than a matter of saving work. It's a saving of needless and ruinous wear and tear to all your summer clothing.

Direction for this easy, safe and economical washing, on every package of Pearline.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 353 JAMES PYLE, New York.

—Don't forget the School meeting at the school house to-morrow night, Saturday July 16.

—One of Leon Frazie's driving bronchoes committed suicide the other day while being unhitched from the wagon rearing up and coming down on the neck yoke which stood on end stabbing itself to the heart.

—A Democratic caucus will be held at the City Hall in Delano, ou Tuesday, July 26th, to choose 8 delegates to the County Conventiot at Buffalo, to be held the 29th.

—George Cunningham's lead horse, a fine large colt, was taken suddenly sick on Tuesday, being paralyzed in his hind legs and unable to walk. He died this morning.

—Mrs J. C. Hitz a few days ago had on exhibition a few days ago some fine strawberries purchased frome W. D. Freeman, they were as nice as we ever saw anywhere large and luscious.

—John Steffes denies the report which has been broadly circulated that he has rented Jim Younges Hotel and says if he had any notion of becoming a "landlord" he should occupy his own building on River Street for the purpose.

—John Brasie undertook to hitch up his bronchos without blinds on Wednesday morning for which treatment they took him a ride out of town on the tongue while his conscience had full sway for a short time. John was bruised some and considerably scared.

—The Eagle accuses us of being an incubus. We would not be surprised if the old bird after having her attention called to some matters occasionally by the GAZETTE would, now that she is growing old, have slight compunctions of conscience but we did not suppose she was troubled with nightmare. Perhaps she wants to set; turn incubator.

—Nothing is of more importance to the average American citizen than the education of the rising generation. It is from them our future great men are to come, and their education is dependent to some extent, at least, on the schools they have the privilege of attending. See to it that every one of you who can vote for officers are present to-morrow, Saturday evening and cast your ballot for the two best members of the board that our district affords.

—On Satarday evening the chairman of the republican county committee at the earnest solicitation of Squire Bilings come over and assisted in gathering a crowd of former "Blaineites together and by his earnest and persuasive eloquence instilling into them, the necessity of sending delegates to the county convention to assist in nominating a state ticket. We understand he predicted, perhaps this was taffy that this would be among the banner towns of the G. O. P. The delegates chosen were J. C. Buckley, George Sutton, John Cunningham F. H. Lindsley and Dr. J. S. Shrader.

—One day recently a good natured old German lady of our village visited the cities returning on the evening train, and a few days afterward while narrating her experiences to us said She came home and there was about 12 cars in train, nobody call Delano. I was in hind car, me no see out every body stand up, when train start me see Coolins lumber yard. Me know Delano. Cars no stop. Me tink jump in the river. Pretty soon come Montrose me go in hotel pay 25cents. Me sleep nothing. Me tinks me no more see Delano, any more, me come home bes fiye o'clock next mornin. Me want no more to go to Montrosc, me stay home.

—The financier of the School board as usual failed to meet his promises and as was the case so many times while building the school house when calling for the "last bonds" to be voted is still after 10 years calling for more bonds to pay off the old ones. This time all that was needed was to vote $10,000 bonds and he would place them for 5 per cent interest. The bonds were voted and when it came time to place them the financier announced to the part of the board present on the rainy night that it was impossible to "place" them without paying $192. bonus! It strikes us as it did several years since, that a financier that new what he could do before he told the people, or that was honest in what he told the people would be an improvement upon the one who has succeeded in keeping the district so badly in debt for the past decade thereby depriving the children of privileges to which they are entitled and preventing the district from having the best school in the county.

—Call at Green's for an enlarged photograph of any photo you may have on buying $15.00 worth of goods.

—That bicephalous avis up street we understand, suppressed a communication this week from a lady in defence of the Democrat's action in procuring their pole.

—The latest fool move our village conncil has made that we have heard of, is to fill up a vacant lot with gravel If they would get a surveyor and establish some grades and do a little draining as they ought they would not have the opportunity of wasting the village gravel in filling up private property.

Is This Right?

On July 5th, 1892, I wrote J. W. Parsons the following on a postal card:

J. PARSONS, ESQ.,

DEAR SIR: I shall hereby ask you to call and settle your house rent for one half month. Please remit at once,

Yours, THOMAS SHAW.

After receiving the above Mr. Parsons employed Mr. Billings who came to me and represented to me that the sending of the above was a violation of law for which he demanded of me $10 or he would at once prosecute me, believeing I was liable I paid Billings $10 I make this publication to warn the public in the future.

Personals.

H. C. Parslow, Jr., of Rockford, visited home on Wednesday evening

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Frazee, of Buffalo, visited friends here over Sunday.

Mr. Fairbanks, of Independence, preached, at the M. E, church on Sunday evening.

G. U. Miller, of the firm of Miller & Son, Watertown, was a GAZETTE caller on Tuesday.

Messrs Drew, of Minneapolis, shipped a carload of cattle from this place on Tuesday.

Mr. Walter St. John, and Mr. and Mrs. C. Kohler, of Watertown, were in town Tuesday.

Charley Cunningham is home from the cities and will help on the farm during haying and harvesting.

A party of 24 Delanoites took a trip to Howard Lake yesterday and visited with Mesdames Staples and Brandon and families.

John McGary, Independence's unterrified was a caller yerterday. We suspect him of having a weather-eye out for the Legislature.

Mrs. Norman Webb, of Birmingham, Alabama, came to town last Saturday, to visit with her sisters-in-law, Mesdames Chance and Mulford.

Peter Wagner, who has been sick at John Leudasher's, returned home, near Loretto, on Sunday, much improved and on the road to recovery.

George Plattner and August Leiter two of Franklin's rising young farmers were among the visitors to the Sawdust city on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Henrietta M. Coffin, of St. Peter, accompanied by her daughter Edna, came over on Tuesday evening to spend the summer with her brother Dr. Catlin.

M. Couzet, of Greenwood, was over on Wednesday he figures that this is a good year for Democrats but objects to having it announced that Columbus discovered America.

John W. Mounts Rockford's old war-horse, was in to see us yesterday. He says he has moved into a larger house and now has room for Democrats, whenever they come his way.

Mrs. May Hunter, who has been visiting at John Cunningham's, for a few weeks past, started on her return home on Tuesday. Miss Julia Cunningham accompanied her as far as the cities.

County Cullings.

The Judge of Probates office would be a good one for some live democrat to wrestle for. Judge Alley has held it down in the almost exclusive interert of the G. O. P. about long enough.

Democratic timber for county attorney is said to be confined to three individuals. Joseph Wendell, M. A. O'Hair and John F. Collins. While W. E. Culkin is expected to run on the republican ticket.

LATER, we learn that the present incumbent is a candidate for re-nomination.

All the talk about county Attorney Cutting being out of the race for a renomnation is set at naught by that gentleman's annoucement of his determination to come before the voters on the issue of standing up for the rights of the county and favoring economy he claimes that if he is beaten on this issue that his future successors will never dare to trv to maintrin the law.

A new departure in Wright county politics was the presence at the republican county convention at Buffalo of candidates for congress and their workers. Clerk of court Eddy of Glenwood Polk county and D. W. Bruckhart, attorney at law of St. Cloud were looking after Judge Searles fences while H. C. Kendell superintended his own affairs and it is said that some of the Searles men turned out to be Kendell strong when time for voting for delegates came.

All the powwow the republicans make about being liberal and dividing the offices among the best men regardless of politics in mere bosh as is to be seen on most occasions where there is the least show. They manage to have a candidate for every little office even in town and village and school district and succeeded by hook or crook in making those having the appointive power believe republicans are the only men fit that will accept or by waiting for rainy nights when a part of the board is necessarily absent they succeeded in putting in good straight reliable party men.

Republican Convention.

The Republican county convention was held at Buffalo on Wednesday. J. T. Alley was chosen chairman and made a short speech thanking the convention and telling them he was proud to belong to a party with a noble record; a party of freedom; a party opposed to class legislation and in favor of protection to American homes and people.

C. R. C. Johnson was made secretary and committees appointed as follows:

On Credentials, N. Warner, F. H. Lindsley, Wm. McDonald, C. A. Pidgeon and R. S. Holmes.

On Permanent organization, J. A. McVeety, Ole Mattson and L. S. Pratt.

Adjourned till 1:30, P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The temporary was made the permanent organization. C. A. French was made assistant secretary.

Report of committee on credentials adopted.

Delegates to State convention were chosen as follows:

At large, W. E. Culkin; 1st, dist., A. A. Jewett and S. A. Howard; 2nd dist., A. Y. Eaton and A. O. Bryant; 3d dist., D. R. Thompson and L. V. Kyte; 4th dist., R. S. Holmes and Levi Bowman: 5th dist., A. P. Peterson and D. E. Christopherson.

18 Congressional delegates were chosen. Both delegations were instructed to observe the unite rule.

HISTORICAL FACTS.

Pioneer Days In The Region North of Lake Minnetonka.

Written for the BUFFALO GAZETTE, by HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

GREENWOOD.

In the record of the procedings of the "Commissioners Court" (Session of board of County Comissioners.) of Hennepin county for the year 1857 the name of Samuel Allen appears as having served as a road supervisor for the Greenwood precinct, and the name of J. F. Powers appears in the same record for the year 1858, as having also served as road suprevisor for the same precinct. The office of road supervisor existed under territorial laws and conditions, and its duties were similiar to shat of road overseer under the present statutes of Minnesota.

The following is an extract from the record of the proceedings of the Commissioners court of Hennepin county for April 6. 1858: "In conformity with the requirements of an act passed by the State Legislature entitled "An act for Township Organizations" the board took up the matter of dividing the county into towns,"

The meeting of the board on that occasion continued through several days and the territory in the western part of the county was not reached until April 10. 1858, when the townships were established as described in the GAZETTE of July 1, 1892.

These proceedings on the part of the Legislature and County Commissioners were to enable localities or communities to adopt themselves to new and better political conditions which was soon to take place by the admission of the state into the Union, supereceeding an unorganized or chaotic situation, by township organizations. The state Legislature authorized by the constitution adopted by the people for the admission of Minnesota, being in session several months previous to its admission as a state on May 11, 1858, passed various acts amongst which was the one submitting the amendment to the constitution authorizing the five million loan.

In conformitv to the proceedings of the County Commissioners on April 10, 1858, townships were organized, viz:

GREENWOOD.

On May 11, 1858, the citizens of Greenwood organized their township. Officers elected were: Supervisors, J. R. Ames, chairman N. D. Ferrel and Wm C. P. Hawk; Clerk Thos R. Briggs; Assessor, Benj Lawerence; Collector R. W. Courier: Overseer of the poor, Andrew Thompson; Justices, D. R. Farnham and Clinton Home; Constables John Omeara and Volney S. Britt. Sometime afterward J. R. Ames resigned and N. D. Ferrel was appointed chairman of board of Supervisor, who in turn was supperceeded as overseer of the poor by Kelsey Hinman,.

INDEPENDENCE.

Rob't M. Mills, present Town Clerk of Independence has furnished the writer with a copy of the records pertaining to the organization of Independence, from which the following extracts and information are taken.

"Legal Voters of Independence met agreeable to a Notice at the House of J. Wilson on Tuesday May 11. 1858, elected Richard McGary chairman, Robert Stinson, Moderator, Wm E. Hazelton was elected Clerk. Polls opened for votes for three Supervisors One Town Clerk, One overseer of poor, one assessor, One Collector, Two Justices of the peace, two Constables, one overseer of Highways· At 12 o'clock adjourned, (no account of convening again) at 5 o'clock polls closed, votes canvassed." Officers elected were: supervisors, Irwin Shrewsbury, Chairman, Dan'l Styner and E. Brandon; Town Clerk, Nroman Shook; Assessor, W C. Hazelton; collector, N. E. McGary; overseer of the poor, Moses Brandon; Justices, Robert Stinson and Henry Swingle, Constables, Wesley Hall and Earl Hoisington; overseer of Roads, John M. Williams. The total vote was 18, and with the exception of chairman there was but one set of candidates voted for. The vote on Chairman stood: 12 for Irwin Shrewsbury and 9 for John B. Perkins. Moses Brandon refused to serve as overseer of the poor and John B. Perkins was appointed to fill the place.

June 6, 1858, a special town meeting was held, to enact certain town lines, a privelege allowed then, to towns, under the act pertaining to to vnship organizations. The few laws enacted on that day by the town of Independence have since become embodied in the general law of the state.

GERMAN HOME MINNETRISTA.

The town of German Home remained unorganized during 1858. The following extract from the proceedings of the board of Commissioners of Hennepin county is an important link in the history of that township:

"Sept, 8 1858. In compliance with the petition of S. D. Grant and W. E. Forster and twenty six others claiming to be the inhabitants of the town of German Home, it was ordered, that the name of the town of German Home be and the same is hereby changed to MINNETRISTA.

The name is said to be derived from the Dakota language, Minne (meaning water) and trista (crooked alluding to the peculiarly shaped lakes and waters within the town.

EXCELSIOR.

Allusion is made to the first organization of the township 117. Range 23, being territory on both the north and south shores of Lake Minnetonka and, some of which is within the present limits of ORONO and Wayzata. The town of EXCELSIOR was organized May 11, 1858, at the house of John Greene, Dr. E. Snell was chosen, Moderator, and M. H. Pease clerk for the The officers elected were: Supervisors, R. B. McGrath, chairman Lewis Thomrson and E. Bennett; Town Clerk, C. B. Shelden; Asssessor, Wm. B. Jones; Collector, Stephen Hull and Orville Wilcox; Constables, H. L. Beeman and P. M. Gideon Road commissioner Morris Powers.

HAMBURGH-MEDINA.

The Township of HAMBURGH as orignally organized contained one regular congressional township, namely Town 118 Range 23, part of which is included within the present limits of ORONO. The citizens of Hamburgh met at the house of Valorious Chilson, Perkinsville, on May 11, 1858, for the purpose of organizing the Township of Hamburgh. Mr. Chilson was called to the chair. Andrew Scherer was elected moderator and Wm. F. Hillman, clerk of the meeting. The resolution of George Reiser, changing the name of the town from Hamburgh to Medina, was unanimously adopted. The officers elected were: Supervisors, Valorious Chilson, Chairman, C. W. Burchfield and George Reiser Town Clerk, W. F. Hillman; Assessor L. Lenzen Collector, Andrew Scherrer; Overseer of the poor. Joseph Lenzen; Justices, Wm. Archibald and James Crowe; Constables Leo Stumpf and Adolph Butz; overseer of Roads, B. Gasper. A resolution was also adopted dividing the township into School districts.

There was another attempt made at organizing this Congressional Township on May 11, 1858 by the English speaking people of the south end of the township. They met on that day and went through the form of electing officers and naming the town, their name being Wooneac, which was a name then applied to Clasen Lake. This movement was abandoned when it was learned that meeting at Valorious Chilsons was held there by the authority of the county commissisners and consequently had the sanction of law, rendering any other movement in that direction irregular.

A Drunkard's Home.

THE diabolism of rum selling is best known by the wife of the drunkard, We may try and symphatize with the poor, wretchard woman who sees her once loving husband, whose fond smile and manly form were the joy and gladness of her life now a bloated maudlin fool and raviug maniac coming with oaths and curses into what is left of a desolate home recklessly using his hands or what ever comes within his grasp to wreak his vile passions on the poor woman and the helpless children who crouch beneath his blows.

This is a kind of wretchedness that can only be known or fully realized by actual experence. It is no uncommon thing that happens in some remote section of the country to be told as a legend of crime or human infirmity but it is an every day occurrence in a number of wretched households all over the land; and yet this diabolism this awful misery is brought about and fostered by open dens of perdition called saloons —of which there are ten thousand in the city of New York dealing out their poisonous liquids called beer, whisky, brandy, etc., to gratify the perverted and depraved appetites of not less than one hundred thousand human beings. —From "The Scourge of Rum-Selling," in the DEMOREST'S FAMILY MAGAZINE for August.

MARRIED.

CARLEN, HOLMSTROM.—At Cokato on Sunday, July 10, Mr. Edward Carlen to Miss Anna K. Holmstrom.

Judge Canty's Decision.

Judge Canty who delivered the able oration at this place on the 4th, seems to be gaining his share of honors as a Judge. His decission although averse to opinions held previously by higher courts have been affirmed by Judges Lochren, Smith and Hooker. He recently gave an opinion favorable to the liens of workmen and tradesmen furnishing material for building purpose as against a mortgage given to some money loaner which deserves and does call forth the praises of those depending on their days labors for their living. The Judge is rapidly climbing to the top round of fame in his profession and as a man of good common sense generally.

Short Line to Spokane.

About August 1st regular daily passenger service will be inaugurated between St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Spokane, Wash., on the Great Nothern extension. For the present mixed trains run Sundays and Wednesdays each way, 512 miles, between Havre, Mont. and Spokane. This new route will be the short line from the East to Spokane and Eastern Washington, and is the only line to the Flathead valley. It also opens up the famous Kootenia country. The roadway is in most perfect condition, and has lowest grades of any transcontinental line. See Agent Geo. W. Bolton for futher information. Do not forget to write to your Eastern friends about the half fair excursions, on the Great Nothern Aug 30th and Sept, 27th.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

For Governor. HON. THOMAS WILSON, of Winona.

If Judge Wilson will allow his name to come before the convention his chances are excellent for being Minnesota's next Governor,

BUFFALO, Minn., July 15.—The Democratic county convention to select delegates to the state and congressional conventions will be held in this city on July 29. The outlook for a Wilson delegation is favorable.—Special to the Globe.

Judge Wilson, of Winona, is again mentioned as the democratic candidate for governor, remarks the Caledonia Argus. The judge is justly popular in this section, having been well known by our people for many years; and having never betrayed the interest of the people when entrusted to him, they are always ready to give him a hearty support, feeling him amply competent to fill any office an their gift and worthy of confidence in any place of trust and responsibility.—Minneapolis Times.

Democratic Convention.

A Democratic county convention will be held at the court house in Buffalo, Wright county, Minn., on Friday, 29th day of July, A. D. 1892, at 11 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of electing 19 delegates to represent Wright county in the Democratic state convention which meets at Exposition hall, Minneapolis on Wednesday, August 3rd, 1892, at noon, to place in nomination candidates for the following state offices, to-wit: Governor, Lieutenant-governor, Secretary of State, State Treasurer, Attorney General, three Judges of the Supreme Court and nine Presidedtial Electors.

All the voters of Wright county who are opposed to high taxation, who believe in reducing taxes on the necesaries of life to the needs of the government economically administered and who desire to free the agricultural class as well as the laboring element generally from the burden of maintaining manufacturing monopolies and trusts are cordially invited to participate with us.

The towns are entitled to representation as follows: One delegate from every town and one delegate for every forty votes or major fraction thereof cast for Wilson for governor at the last general election, in November, 1890.

FOR PRESIDENT

Grover Cleveland.

FOR VICEPRESILENT

Adlai E. Stevenson.

WITH Grover Cleveland for President, Thomas Wilson for Governor, and Tariff Reform for the battle cry it looks as if Minnesota might wheel into line with several other western states and give a Democratic plurality if not a rousing majority.

Democratic State Convention.

The democrats of Minnesota are called to meet in delegate convention in the city of Minneapolis in the Exposihall on Wenesday Aug. 3. 1892 at high noon for the purpose of putting in nomination canidates for the following state offices towit: Governor, lieutenaut governor, secretary of state, state treasurer, attorney general, three justices of supreme court and nine presidential electors.

We invite to a participation by representation in the delegate convention all voters of this state of whatever prior partisan relations who believe with us that "republican protection is a fraud and a robbery of the great majority of the American people for the benefit of the few" that "the fediral governmenthas no constitutional power to enforce and colect tariff duties except for revenue only;" who demand with us "that the colection of such taxes shall be limited to the necessities of the goverment economically administered," and who think that the removal of the barries of trade is the first great reform and to be accomplished befor other and cognate reforms are entered on. We also ask the co-operation of all those voters who with us oppose "state interference with parental rights of conscience in the edieuation of their children," and who believe that the state has reached the limits of its edicational functions when it has provided the opportunies for the edienation of its youth. We especially invite the aid of those voters of the state who would over throw the present unholy combanation which monoplizse the grrin markets of the state and who would see established free open and competive markets for thi produce of our farms.

The representation in the convention is based on the vote for the democrat candidate for governor 1890 giving one delegate at large to each county and and one for each 120 votes, or major fraction thereof cast for the sain candidate.

The several counties will be entited to the number of delegates in said convention set opposite their respective names as follows to wit:

HISTORICAL FACTS.

Pioneer Days In The Region North of Lake Minnetonka.

Written for the BUFFALO GAZETTE, by HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

SCHOOLS.

Although the winter period of 1857-8 was disheartening, in consequence of the grasshopper raids and financial stringency, the matter of education was not forgotten on the part of the people. Several school districts were created by the Board of Commissioners of Hennepin county during their sessions of 1857-8, as follows,

On October 6, 1857 School District 51 was established. It embraced all the territory of the present Long Lake and Crystal Bay school districts and portions of other school districts adjoining. The first School house was erected at George Knettle's place. The present residence of Jacob Hursh stands on the site of that log school building. The first school conducted in this district under the school law of the state was taught by Miss Jane Cowden, of Ohio, in the winter of 1858-9, being the second school taught in that vicinity. Charles G. Christleib having taught his subscription school the previous winter. Also on October 6, 1858, School District 52, at Wayzata was established. It embraced portions of the territory of the towns of Minnetonka, Plymouth, Medina, and Excelsior (now Orono.)

On January 5, 1858, upon the petition of J. B. Perkins and others, school district No 54, (at Perkinsville) was established. It comprised territory about Lake Independence and in the towns of Medina and Independence. The first school of that district was taught at Perkinsville. On August 9. 1858 upon petition of Israel Dorman and others, School district No. 60 was comprised territory in Medina, and Corcoran. The first school of that district was taught at Leighton, P. O. There are other school districts that should be added, concerning which the writer has not as yet obtained dates.

JUDGES OF ELECTION.

At the commissioners meeting of September 4, 1858 Judges of election for several precincts or the newly established townships were appointed as follows:

Greenwood: J. R. Ames, N. D. Ferrell and Wm. C. Hawk.

Independence: I. Shrewsbury, D. Styner and E. Brandon.

Minnetrista: S. L. Merriman, J. Herschberger and E. F. Sutherland.

Excelsior: R. B. McGrath, Lewis Thompson Edw. Bennett.

Medina (Hamburgh): V. Chilson, John Wolsfeld and O. B. Crooker.

Corcoran: Israel Dorman, P. B. Corcoran and John Klersy.

After transacting other business at that session, the existence of that board of Commissioners as well as the system for Hennepin county ended thus.

"The following resolution being moved by commissioner Kellog seconded by commissioner Bradford and put to a vote by the Clerk was adopted: Resolved, that the thanks of the Board are hereby tendered to the Hon. Joel B. Bassett for the able. impartial and dignified manner in which he has discharged the duties of chairman of this board of commissioners of Hennepin county adjourned Sine die having appoved the foregoing minutes.

C. G. Ames.
Clerk of said Board."

COUNTY SUPERVISORS.

By act of Legislature of August 13, 1858, the government of counties was changed from the commissioner system to the supervisor system; that is a body composed of the several chairmen of the boards of supervisors of the newly organized townships and the senior aldermen of each of the different wards of the cities within the county.

The following extracts concerning the first meeting of the board of supervisors of Hennepin county, at Minneapolis, are taken from the records of the proceedings of that body; "Pursuant to act of Legislature of August 13, 1858: An act to provide for township organization, the chairman of the board of supervisors of the several towns and Senior alderman of the several wards of the city of St. Anthony in said county met on the 14th day of September A. D. 1858 at 12 o'clock, Meridian

PRESENT.

Brooklyn, E. T. Allington; Bloomington, Martin McLeod; Corcoran, Israel Dorman; Excelsior, R. B. Mc Grath; Eden Prairie, Aaron Gould; Hamburgh, Valorious Chilson; Hassen, Samuel Finical; Independence, Irwine Shrewsbury; Maple Grove, A. C. Austin; Minneapolis R. P. Russell; Minnetonka, Fred Bassett; Minnetrista, S. L. Merriman; Plymouth, Francis Huot; Richland Joel Brewster;

St. Anthony wards 1, 2, 3, and 4, were respectively represented by D. Knoblauch, G. W. Thurber, W. W. McHerron and J. C. Johnson, being twenty in all. Wm. McHerron was chosen temporary clerk on motion of Mr. McLeod, N. D. Ferrell claiming to be chairman of Greenwood was admitted. A committee on credentials was appointed. Following their report, a few changes made in membership of that body amongst which was that of S. L. Merriman being refused as having "been neither duly elected or appointed; which decision must have been in allusion to the fact that the Township of Minnetrista had failed in perfecting its organization in the matter of elcting township officers. James Crowe was given the seat for the 2nd ward of St. Anthony instead of G. W. Thurber, after which William McHerron was appointed and chosen permanent chairman" and C. G. Ames was "declared and appointed permanent Clerk of said board and county Auditor and "The Board of Supervisors of Hennepin county was declared permanently organized.

That body was frequently referred to by newspapers of the time as the Hennepin county Legislature". It had eight commmitties, viz. Ways and Means, Finance, Accounts and Claims, Poor, Credentials, Roads and Bridges, Public Buildings and Equalization. It was one of the various features copied from the state of New York in the adoption of the constitution and enactment of laws following. The terms of office continued only for one year the length of the term of office as chairman of the township board of Supervisors. The next board of County Supervisors was organized September 13, 1859, with Rob't W. Cummings of St. Anthony as chairman, and Harlow A. Gale who was elected by the people as County Auditor, as ex-officio clerk of the board of County Supervisors. This was the last board of County Supervisors. It was superceeded in 1860 by our present commissioner system.

Eagle Visions Vs. Frick Versions.

When the Eagle editors came together to see who should write a tale of woe concerning the Carnegie troubles at Homestead, Pennsylvania, and possibly flipped a "golden eagle" with which their coffers are supposed, from their own statements, to contain not a few gathered by swearing old soldiers to their pension vouchers, to see whether "heads or tails" should produce the "leader", whether the public should be instructed according to the views of the descendent of Tell, Winkleried or Gessler or whether they should have the ideas of Johnny Bull, concerning the differences between labor and capital possibly both quaked in their boots something after the fashion the Pinkertons are supposed to have set when they were penned up in barges on the river, expecting every minute to be their last, but whose lives on surrendering were spared as was the thousands of dollars of valuable property belonging to the men against whom the strike was made, although at the time when feeling ran highest all was at the mercy of the inhabitants of the place, even the great mills where thousands earned their daily bread by the sweat of their brows, while the proprietor spent his leisure hours on his native heath receiving $14. per ton as the profit on his investment.

The Eagle article says "Just think of it! The poor laboring man going on a strike because he couldn't make more than $13,000 a year!" And it further claims that it was not the 4000 common laborers who struck but that it was about 300 head rollers or sub-contractors who earned from $10. to $50. per day. If they were alone they must have been 300 desperate men to have defied the Sheriff and thousands of peacable citizens and captured a force of their own size of Pinkertons hired for $5. per head, for each days service and then required the presence of 8000 of old Keystone's militiamen to keep them quiet. 300 head rollers like these must be terrors! Sure! More likely the old bird was laboring under an "incubus", having another nightmare when she beheld this little band of strikers who "could go to work in their carriage in the morning and could be driven home by their coachman in the evening" withstanding the reduction of their wages and facing an armed body of men who were trying to land on their shores, who could tell for what purpose, except the Eagle, who says "but if the truth were known the strike was brought about by Democratic politicians for the purpose of influencing the election." And of course charging the whole affair to the Democrats. What Democrats can she charge with this grave offense? Are the Carnegies who have amassed a fortune under the fostering system of protection and Government contracts Democrats? If so they must have become so since Reciprocity failed to get the better of McKinleyism: since Andrew and James toured in Europe. Are the men who gain their livelihood by toiling at one of the most highly protected industries in our country Democrats? If so, how is it that Pennsylvania is always depended on as surely Republican? If the men who Republican papers and orators tell us derive the benefits of protective tariff in higher wages have changed their views and left the protective party, they must have a reason for so doing. And how our neighbor up street one head of which has belonged to the G. O. P. for several years and the other of which has but just completely feathered out and taken its place among the "kids" of the party can presume to be so certain of what the "truth" would be if it "were known" can hardly be accounted for on any other than the "vision" theory.

Mr. Frick, Carnegies manager didn't seem, when on the stand as witness, to have gotten hold of our neighbor's double-distilled "truth" and instead of telling the examiners that the Sheriff of the county applied to Governor Pattison who refused to call out the militia "and Carnegie was forced to hire Pinkertons to protect his property" he gave them his own version, that the Pinkertons were brought with the intention of, if necessary, having them sworn in under the Sheriff, and that experience had taught them the uselessness of calling on the Sheriff was offered as an excuse for the presence of the Pinkertons before the aid of civil authority was asked for.

TOM CARTER, of Montana will conduct Harrison's campaign as chairman.

OUR Republican newspapers talk in diametrical opposition to each other on Pinkertons.

W. F. HARRITY, of Pennsylvania, has been elected chairman of the Democratic National committee.

JUDGE SEARLES, of St. Cloud, has been nominated for Congress in the Sixth district. De Autremont of Duluth will likely be the Democratic nominee.

CLEVELAND AND STEVENSON, visited New York, and were officially notified of their nominations to the highest offices in the gift of the people and made appropriate acceptance speeches.

ONE trouble with the Democrat party in Minnesota is the tendency to get scared and make some fool trade, or fusion opening the door for her own voters to go where they please as the ticket is already split. Stick to your principles and you will win.

THE losses by fire in the United States and Canada continue to be large. In June the total was $9,265,000, and during the first six months of the year ended with June they were $65,437,250. In the first six months of 1891 the losses were $69,555,170, and in the same months of 1890 they were $47,811,245.

SARAH BERNHARDT gives her friends to understand that she was one of eighteen children, and in consideration of that fact very naturally her mother forgot the particular year in which this gifted daughter was born. She was educated in a convent, four times to be expelled and four times taken back into the fold.

THE man who spends half an hour trying to kill one vicious and perniciously active fly may feel encouraged or discouraged, according to his point of view, by the scientific declaration that the progeny of a house fly every six weeks reaches the respectable grand total of eight hundred and forty thousand.

A YOUNG English girl is seeing America on a somewhat novel plan. As she has not enough money to make the grand tour, she has adopted the idea of applying for work in the hotels of the cities that she visits. She remains in a place long enough to see the sights on her afternoons out, and with the wages she earns and a small sum she has on hand she intends to see most of America.

ENGLAND, France and Italy are credited with the benevolent intention of dividing Morocco between them this fall. Northern Africa will then be under Christian domination for the first time in a good many centuries. The Moors are a fighting people still, and the feat will not be accomplished without a slaughter that will make those nations which will not profit by the transaction very sad.

PROF. R. L. GARNER, who has achieved some reputation because of his efforts to acquire the language of monkeys, is about to depart for a place near Stanley Falls, in Africa, there, if possible, to talk with apes in their own home. The professor is going a long way from home to find a low grade of talkers. There are those who think he might have attained very nearly the same end without so much exertion.

A CORRESPONDENT is informed that he cannot obtain a patent from the government of the United States for a mechanical device or process invented in Germany and patented there, though not patented in any other country. Patents are not granted in this country to other than original discoverers or inventors or persons who believe they are such and who make oath that they are such. The examiners in the patent office search the patent records of all countries before they decide on the originality of any claim.

DR. PIERSON, who has so acceptably filled Spurgeon's pulpit in London for several months, recently preached a sermon asking for money. He inquired why some of his auditors would not give up smoking and devote the results of this economy to charity, and suggested that ladies might likewise make sacrifices by selling, or sending him to sell, some of their jewelry. The very next evening, while he was sitting with his deacons in council, a box was handed into the room, and, upon examination, was found to be full of costly jewels.

A PATHETIC incident occurred in the Hudson county (N. Y.) jail. Its assistant keeper was a venerable man, named Nugent, who had held the position for fifteen years and had never been absent from his post of duty for a single day. People did not suspect that he was possessed of a delicacy of feeling not surpassed by the "daughter of a hundred earls," but such was the case. Some weeks ago he was called upon to open the prison door and close it on his son. He called an officer to relieve him, complained of being faint, tottered to his home, threw himself on a bed and died with a broken heart.

The most crowded spot on the whole earth is not in London, Paris or Naples, nor yet in Canton or Pekin, but in New York city, and within an easy walk from the City hall. In one block, bounded by First avenue, Avenue A., Fourth street and Fifth street, are 8,160 people, enough to constitute a city in some of the western states. The houses here average six stories in height, and each floor has room for four families. Sixty-four houses, having a frontage of 24 feet each, shelter 1,632 families, 8,160 persons, all living within 625 feet of each other. One can have more near neighbors here than in any other place.

THE annual settlement at the United States mint has been completed and shows the mint to have been run in a highly satisfactory manner during the past twelve months. The figures show the following on hand at settlement: 1,416,837,995 standard ounces gold, value $26,359,776.58; 74,427,081 standard ounces silver, value $65,037,990.48. Coin—Gold, value $7,802,240. Silver, value $50,266,863. Treasury notes, value $3,112,553. Total gold, silver bullion, coin and treasury notes, $152,579,423.93. Of the minor coinage metals there were 1,402,238.17 ounces, with a value of $22,903.61, and minor coins with a value of $103,393.98.

LATER NEWS.

A Double Tragedy.

DEADWOOD, S. D., July 18.—Sturgis, a valley town twelve miles east of here, was the scene of a double tragedy yesterday. Bad blood has existed for some months between George Woods, a farmer and father of five children, and George Goodsteed, a young man who had been courting one daughter of fifteen summers. This was greatly at the father's displeasure, who repeatedly threatened the young man with harm. Yesterday they met, and Woods drew a revolver and fired two shots, both taking effect over his adversary's heart. Goodsteed fell but quickly regained his feet and drew his revolver and fired two shots, one striking the old man in the head, the other in the bowels. The former died in a few seconds and the latter an hour afterward.

A MAIL train on the Welland division of the Grand Trunk railway from Port Dalhouse, bound south, and an accommodation train from Niagara Falls, bound north, from the steamer Empress of India, met in collision a short distance north of Merritton, Ont., on the 18th, killing three persons outright and injuring many others. The two first coaches on the boat train were thrown from the track over the bank, plunging into the race stream, which flows rapidly. The engines were demolished and thrown over the opposite bank from the stream.

ON the 18th, Mrs. Rose Terry Cooke, the authoress, died at Pittsfield, Mass., of congestion of the lungs. Last winter she had an attack of the trouble, followed by la grippe, which left her quite weak. A few days ago she contracted a cold, which brought on her old enemy, but none of her friends were alarmed at her condition until a few hours preceding her death. She leaves a husband and one daughter.

THE steamboat Abner O'Neil, owned by the Mandan Mill company, sunk in twenty feet of water near Painted Woods, fifteen miles north of Bismarck, N. D., on the 18th. Seventeen hundred sacks of wheat as well as the boat is a total loss. No insurance.

THE senate passed the deficiency bill on the 18th.

WARRANTS for murder were issued on the 18th, against seven leaders of the Homestead, Pa., strikers.

A LARGE fire in Montreal on the 18th, consumed property worth a quarter of a million dollars.

Two boys were drowned while bathing at Wahpeton, N. D., on the 18th.

BY THE SAD WAVES.

The Whitechapel Club, of Chicago, Obedient to the Request of Morris A. Collins, Who Killed Himself, Erects a Pyre Upon the Shores of Lake Michigan, and at Dead of Night Incinerates His Remains—A Weird Scene.

CHICAGO, July 18.—Mirrored in the waters on the south shore of Lake Michigan at the base of a great ridge of glistening white sand that marks the limit of the ebb and flow of the tide there was lighted Saturday night a funeral pyre and all that was mortal of Morris Allen Collins, president of the Dallas (Tex.) Suicide club, was, by his own written request, reduced to ashes. The Whitechapel club, of this city, had charge of the strange ceremony.

The torch was applied to the mighty pile of pitch-soaked wood at 10:50 o'clock. During the five hours the body burned impressive ceremonies were enacted about the blazing pile, weird music and recitations, interspersed with addresses replete with personal reminiscences and spoken by friends of the dead man, filled time with deep interest and added to the strangeness of the scene. When at last the consuming flames had done well their work the ashes of the man who in life had found stony pathways and briar-strewn playgrounds were gathered together with reverential care and placed in an urn on which loving hands had traced in many hues pictures symbolic of the principles which had once animated the life of him who was no more.

Not since the day nearly seventy years ago, when Byron and Trelawny stood in the glare of blazing driftwood that cremated the remains of their friend, the poet Shelley, has a stranger funeral ceremony marked the flying time. Never in the history of Illinois have the events of Saturday night had their precedent.

Morris A. Collins blew out his brains with a revolver in a lodging house at 457 West Madison street, July 8. He left a note willing his brain to Dr. H. N. Moyer, and asking of the Whitechapel club that it burn his body over a funeral pyre. Honore Joseph Jaxon, the Indian half-breed who was Louis Riel's secretary during the half-breed revolt in Canada, attended to the arrangements for carrying out this latter request. Dr. Moyer was absent from the city, and the post-mortem was not held.

The Whitechapel club had been engaged in preparing to carry out Collins' wishes, made in writing. Eminent legal counsel had been taken to discover if any objection could be found in the statutes to the fulfillment of the wishes of the dead man. That the morbidly curious might not disturb the solemn rites the utmost secrecy was maintained.

The place finally selected was in that dreary waste of sand and bog in Indiana at the end of the lake. There was a secret trip from the great city to the Baltimore & Ohio train, a hurried run to Miller's, a small junction village 30 miles southeast of Chicago, a dismal funeral march through the uninhabited region that separates the hamlet and the lake shore, and then while the northern sky was pulsating and trembling in the strange tints of the aurora borealis the monk-robed chaplain bade the dead farewell and Mr. Jaxon touched the torch to the huge pile.

When the dreary spot had been reached the body of Collins was removed from the casket. About the form was draped a Grecian robe of finest linen and purest white. The head remained uncovered. The corpse was laid upon the topmost oaken plank of the funeral pile and then the Whitechapelers lighted their torches.

Chaplain Thompson went to the foot of the dark pyre at 10 o'clock and recited the "Submission." A little band of villagers, huddled like sheep on the slope above them, uncovered in the cool night air. Other friends spoke kindly of the dead. The last to speak was Jaxon, who stood upon the top of the pyre until it had burst into flame.

Three times with lighted torches the little band march round the pile. The torches were applied to the tar and pitch and inflammable wood. At 10:50 o'clock the flames burst into a mighty glare, lighting up the desolate shore lines and the dark, wooded hills. As it blazed, fanned by a southwest wind, the club joined in a weird dirge that thrilled the little group of awed countrymen above them.

It was 2:16 o'clock when the center of the great pyre fell in and incineration was complete. Only a mass of glowing embers remained out of which, with trowels, the ashes of the dead were taken. At 4 o'clock the club left the place for the station, leaving Jaxon to watch the fire and collect the last of the ashes. These ashes will be sealed by the club and entered in its cabinet.

DROWNED HER BABE.

Mrs. Sahlberg, of Ashland, Wis., Kills Her Child While in a Fit.

ASHLAND, Wis., July 18.—Mrs. Andrew Sahlberg drowned her 6-months-old babe in a barrel of water at No. 609 St. Clair street. The testimony at the inquest tended to prove that Mrs. Sahlberg was subject to fits and knew nothing of the occurrence till she went to get a drink after regaining consciousness. The coroner's jury exonerated her on the ground that she was unconscious at the time. Several years ago Mrs. Sahlberg fell on another of her children while in a fit and crushed it to death.

Cholera Quickly Fatal.

LONDON, July 18.—The epidemic of cholera is not of so highly infectious a character as former outbreaks. Very few persons are attacked in proportion to the population but the disease is quickly fatal. The disease is raging with extreme virulence among the workingmen of Tsaritzin, where many of them have died twenty-four hours after they were attacked.

Four Perish by Fire.

BERLIN, July 18.—Fire in the Reinickendorf quarter Sunday destroyed six factories. Three workmen and a fireman perished in the flames.

Burned Prisoners to Death.

CITY OF MEXICO, July 18.—It is alleged that Senor Candellero Herez, judge of Lialtenang, in the state of Zacatetas, recently burned two suspected criminals to death while trying to obtain a confession from them through torture. The government has ordered an investigation of the horrible affair.

Wild Horses Return to Colorado.

KIT CARSON, Col., July 18.—A band of 300 wild horses, the first seen in the state for fifteen years, ran by here Sunday. Twenty-five were captured. It is not known where they came from.

AN ISLAND GONE.

One of the Philippine Group Said to Have Been Sunk by a Volcanic Eruption—Its Population of 12,000 Persons Thought to Have Perished.

SYDNEY, July 18.—Rumors have reached here from Timor that there has been a volcanic eruption on the island of Sangir, one of the Philippine group, and that most of the inhabitants have been killed. A native from the Talatee islands, who landed at Selangen four weeks ago, brought a remarkable story to the effect that several other natives had just returned from a voyage near Sangir. They had intended to land on the island, but were prevented by the mountains belching forth smoke and fire. They reported that the "whole island was on fire." The water along the coast was full, they said, of half-burned wreckage, pieces of houses, and charred bodies. The whole population, estimated at about 12,000, seemed to have been swept into the sea or burned, as not a living soul was to be seen. Streams of lava were still flowing toward the shore, showing that the activity of the volcanoes had not abated.

The steamship Catterthon, from China to Sydney, brought a similar story into port with it Saturday. Near Sangir, its captain said, it had passed through miles of debris dissimilar from anything he had before seen at sea. Poles and sides of huts, most of them charred and broken, were mingled with such utensils as the natives of the Philippines use in cooking. Many unrecognizable objects resembling charred human trunks were also seen. Articles of head dress in the wreckage were identified by a sailor who had lived in the Philippines as peculiar to the natives of Sangir and the near-by islands of the Philippines group. The ship was three hours and a half passing through the wreckage.

The Sangir islands lie to the north of Celebes and are about fifty in number. The three largest islands are Sangir, Splauw and Tagolanda. Sangir had an area of 257 square miles and was divided into four kingdoms. The total population was supposed to be about 13,000 or 14,000. In the northwestern part of the island towered the great mountain of Abu, or the ash mountain, which has often been in eruption, causing much damage and great loss of life. The natives regarded it with superstitious awe and whenever they heard the rumbling that preceded an outbreak they resorted to certain mystic rites to appease the deity of the mountain.

March 2, 1856, there was a terrible eruption and streams of lava and boiling water were poured forth from the crater. The rich plantations on the mountain side were carried away and 3,000 lives were lost.

The Sangirese belong to the Malay race, are well made and brave, but cunning, lazy and dirty. The government is monarchical, somewhat limited by council.

CATANIA, July 18.—Immense incandescent rocks and clouds of steam continue to be thrown out of the craters of Mount Ætna. Part of the village of Ventura has been destroyed by lava, and considerable damage has been done to neighboring chestnut woods. Committees of citizens are being formed to relieve the sufferers.

CARTER IS THE MAN.

The Well-Known Montana Republican Made Chairman of the National Committee.

NEW YORK, July 18.—There were many well-known republicans congregated at the Fifth Avenue hotel as early as 9 o'clock a. m. Saturday to attend the meeting of the executive committee of the republican national committee, which was called for 11 o'clock. The secretary called the meeting to order. Wm. A. Sutherland, of Rochester, was made temporary chairman, and Whitelaw Reid was called in consultation by the committee. Mr. Campbell's resignation was accepted and a recess was taken before 1 o'clock for two hours, no choice of chairman having been made.

On reassembling Thomas H. Carter, of Montana, the present secretary, was elected chairman of the committeee.

The executive committee appointed a temporary secretary in Mr. Carter's place, but gave him the privilege of selecting at his leisure his own man for secretary. It is believed that either ex-Representative McComas, of Maryland; Chris Magee, of Pennsylvania, or William O. Bradley, of Kentucky, may be prevailed upon to accept the secretaryship. Meanwhile James F. Burke, president of the national republican college league, will perform the duties.

THREE MEN KILLED.

Fatal Wreck on the Southern Pacific Railroad in California.

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., July 18.—A band of steers on the Southern Pacific railroad caused a fatal wreck here at 2 o'clock Saturday morning. Freight train No. 21, consisting of twelve loaded cars, was passing through five hours later and ran into the cattle. The cars, which were loaded with ice, beer, canned goods, wine and general merchandise were piled upon the engine and smashed to pieces. Six tramps were riding on the train and two of them were killed. Brakeman Donnelly, who was riding on the cab, was fatally scalded, all the rest of the crew escaping with slight injuries. The track was blocked all day.

FELL THREE HUNDRED FEET.

Terrible Death of the Son of Gov. Gilpin, of Colorado.

DENVER, Col., July 18.—William Gilpin, son of ex-Gov. Gilpin, met a terrible fate Saturday at Buffalo Park. He was walking along an absolutely perpendicular cliff. He approached too near the edge and the thin rock broke, precipitating him to the valley 300 feet below, where he was crushed and mangled on the rocks. Gov Gilpin is the originator of the plan to build the great International railway from South America, north through Alaska and over Behring straits and Asia and Europe

TILLMAN REPENTS.

He Returns from Canada and Makes Good His Defalcations.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 18.—Maj. William Tillman, ex-cashier of the defunct Falls City bank, who went to Canada ten months ago after having wrecked the bank by misappropriation of $40,000 of its funds and using a widow's trust und of $15,000, has returned. The money which he took has been made good, and the indictments against him were dismissed about two weeks ago. Maj. Tillman will take his family somewhere and begin life anew.

GOLD BECOMES SCARCE.

The Amount in the Subtreasury But $10,000,000—Heavy Drafts Upon It from All Sources Cause a Falling Off in the Amount of Available Funds.

NEW YORK, July 16.—The $3,500,000 of gold exported from the United States last week and the $750,000 Wednesday were taken directly from the United States treasury vaults, drawn from what is called the free gold, instead of being furnished by the banks, as the custom has been heretofore. The United States treasury on July 9 held $111,071,257 in gold above the obligations represented by the outstanding gold certificates. Of this sum $100,000,000 is held by the treasury under the law, as reserve for the redemption of the greenbacks or United States notes. This leaves only $11,971,257 of free gold. Heretofore exports of gold have been made in this way: The foreign bankers went to the banks in this city, deposited legal tenders, and obtained therefor gold certificates for the amount of the gold required. They then presented the certificates at the subtreasury and received gold coin for them. Although the difficulty may be safely bridged over, and it probably will be, the United States is just now menaced with a serious shortage of gold. For the first time in the history of gold exports to Europe the yellow coins have begun to come out from the treasury vaults and not from the banks.

By a deliberate and premeditated move the officers of five or six banks, through which these shipments are made, now refuse to give up their hoards of gold, as represented by gold certificates, and the drain is upon the subtreasury. But recently, under their management, the banks have refused to give the shippers gold certificates, holding them instead of greenbacks or United States notes. By the express terms of the law United States notes or greenbacks are payable in gold, but the treasury notes are payable at the option of the secretary of the treasury either in gold or silver.

The treasury notes, however, have been redeemed in gold without question at the subtreasury, and the $2,500,000 in gold shipped to Europe last week was obtained from the subtreasury on the presentation of greenbacks and treasury notes, the banks holding on to their gold certificates. If there were no more gold coming in it would be a question of a very short time when the supply of free gold now in the treasury would be exhausted and the government have no more gold to pay out. The effect of such a shortage in this financial center would be disastrous. The entire amount of free gold in the treasury vaults this morning is not more than $10,000,000. This is acknowledged in the financial world to be an uncomfortably small amount. It is declared that if this reserve should be wiped out gold would at once go to a premium.

GETTING READY.

Frick Is Manning the Carnegie Mills at Homestead, Pa., Preparatory to Resuming Work—Strikers Surprised and Disappointed, But Peaceful.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 16. — Short puffs of white smoke from the armor-plate machine shop and the annealing shop in the Carnegie works convinced both locked-out men and troops that the managers intend to keep their word and start the mills in operation. The men were greatly excited over the signs of business in the works. An inquiry developed the fact that the pumps in the two most important departments had been started preliminary to a general resumption of business. The locked-out men, through the reports of their pickets, knew that no considerable number of men had entered the town, and wondered where the company was securing workmen. At the offices of the works it was said that about forty men, mainly laborers, with a few men from the other Carnegie works, were at work getting the machinery ready for use. It is not the intention of the mill-owners to introduce new men until Monday. The locked-out men offered no objection to the signs of activity and kept away from the vicinity of the works.

Labor unions in other cities are keeping the Amalgamated association advised of the efforts of the Carnegie company to secure labor. Their efforts are said to be confined to Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis, and in each of these cities some have been secured, altnough the reports of the numbers received here are very contradictory. However that may be, the fact is conceded that a body of non-union men has been gotten together by the Carnegie company and that all the preparations have been made for pushing them into the works.

At 3 o'clock Friday morning fifty men were unloaded at a point near Swissvale and escorted overland 1 mile by a guard of the militia to the Monongahela river opposite the Homestead works. There they boarded the steamer Little Bill and were transported across the river to the company's property. About the same time cots, provisions and other supplies in great quantity were taken into the mill property. There was enough stuff in the consignment to accommodate at least 400 men. Superintendent Potter instituted a complete search of every portion of the mills for dynamite or other explosives. If any was found the discovery was not made known. It seems now that it is only a question of time till the mills are placed in operation.

Five Thousand Dollars to Be Paid for the Adair Train Looters.

PARSONS, Kan., July 16.—The Missouri, Kansas & Texas railway and the Pacific Express Company have jointly offered a reward of $5,000 for the arrest and conviction of each of the men engaged in the robbery of the express car on the north-bound train on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railway at Adair station in the Indian territory Thursday night. A large posse of men is now scouring the Indian territory, and from advices received here there is good reason to believe that the robbers will be captured. The amount stolen was $40,000.

Dilke Elected.

LONDON, July 16.—Sir Charles Dilke has been elected in the Forest of Dean division of Gloucestershire, receiving 5,360 votes to 2,942 for the tory candidate, Mr. Wemyss. This means the resumption of a brilliant parliamentary career which was suddenly cut off less than ten years ago by the scandal in which Sir Charles became involved with the wife of Donald Crawford.

Three Were Burned to Death.

BERLIN, July 16.—Frau Scheve and her two children were burned to death in this city as the result of a lamp exploding in their apartment.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

A Bit of Romance.

Duluth society was given a surprise by the announcement of the marriage at Astoria, Ore., June 13, of Miss Julia Pindell Adair to Rev. W. M. Barker, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church of Duluth. There is quite a romance told in connection with the marriage. Rev. Mr. Barker's first call was in Astoria, years ago. Here he met Miss Adair, and has been engaged to her, it is said, fifteen years. Her father opposed the match because of Barker's prospects as a young minister. His death recently has left her free to wed. They will give a reception at the rectory in Duluth August 11.

Woman's Auxiliary Board.

Mrs. T. H. Clark, of St. Paul; Mrs. Henry F. Brown, of Minneapolis, and Mrs. C. A. Severance, of St. Paul, met the ladies of Duluth and organized the Duluth Auxiliary board for the world's fair work. The officers of the new board are: Mrs. W. S. Woodbridge, president; Mrs. D. H. Bacon, first vice president; Mrs. L. Mendenhall, second vice president; Mrs. Dr. Bangs, third vice president; Miss Barber, secretary; Mrs. A. R. MacFarlane, treasurer.

Preferred State Prison to a Jail.

John W. Porter has been taken to the state prison at his own request. He was convicted at the last term of the United States district court held in Duluth of robbing the United States mails, and was sentenced to be confined for one year in the Ramsey county jail; but, becoming weary of the enforced idleness in the jail, he petitioned Judge Nelson to change the sentence to confinement in the penitentiary, and the request was granted.

The World's Fair Building.

The world's fair commissioners met in St. Paul and let the contract for the construction of the Minnesota world's fair building to Libby & Libby, of Minneapolis, for $23,700. A committee representing the State Fair association appeared before the committee and made a request that after the great exposition closed the Minnesota building be taken down, removed to Hamline and set up in the state fair grounds.

An Immense Lumber Deal.

The millionaire lumber firm of Wright, Davis & Co., of Duluth, signed papers disposing of one of the largest tracts of pine land ever closed out in the west. The firm owned 4,000,000,000 feet of standing timber on Swan river, a tributary of the Mississippi. This has all been sold to the Pine Tree Lumber Company, a Weyerhauser concern, for a sum approximating $1,300,000.

New Life Insurance Company.

A meeting of the new Minneapolis Life Insurance Company resulted in its name being changed to the Minneapolis National Life Insurance Company. Officers were chosen as follows: President, E. M. Mabie; vice president, C. M. Loring; secretary, W. M. Tenney; treasurer, A. R. McGill. Dr. George F. Roberts was elected medical director, and Carmen H. Smith, attorney.

A SNAKE HUNT.

The Novel Pastime Enjoyed in South Carolina.

The most exciting pastime in the south is a well-organized snake hunt. The low, swampy rice fields of the Carolinas provide an abundance and variety of game for the sportsman, and on a hot summer's day he can bag as many reptiles as he feels inclined to.

A party of rice planters organized a hunt at Inglesides, a deserted South Carolina plantation which had once been the pride of a southern family, but the war had exterminated the male members. At any rate the place has been turned over to the negroes and is in the last stages of dilapidation.

About 10 o'clock in the morning the party reached the fields, which are great sheets of black water, acres in extent, on the surface of which floated thousands of white and pink water lilies, while on the marshy banks countless blue flags lifted their delicate leaves. For half an hour the horses plunged in the soft mud, which had once formed a bank as hard as cement.

Greatland was reached and a short ride beneath an avenue of live oaks brought the party to what had once been a great, fine country house.

"Shall we have to go far?" asked the stranger.

"No!" exclaimed some one to the right, as he made a spring at something in the dried grass

At first he could not make out what it was, but suddenly a long yellow snake, with great black links on its back glided between his legs.

"Catch him! Catch him!" shouted several voices.

Like a flash the reptile glided through the grass with four men in pursuit. Suddenly some one quickly doubled up and then threw himself on the ground.

"I've got him," he exclaimed, and for the next few minutes there was a struggle among the dried leaves that was highly exciting. The snake, which was about six feet in length and as large round as a man's wrist, twisted, wriggled and fought, but its captor knew how to handle the deceptive folds, and in spite of hisses and fangs a strong hand was slowly passed forward until a man's powerful fingers clutched the angry reptile's neck close to the spotted head. Triumphantly the captor arose from the ground with the loathsome body of the snake wrapped about his arm.

"Bah!" said another, contemptuously, "a chicken snake! No mere fight in one of them than there is in a kitten." His remark proved true, for, after the creature was stroked for a few minutes, it seemed contented, and when placed on the ground made no effort to escape, but eagerly dipped its forked tongue in some milk that was brought for another purpose.

Some one suggested that the trophies be hung on the drooping limbs of a live oak, and a stout leather thong quickly encircled the end of the first victim's tail and secured it to the limb, where it hung head downward, slowly swinging back and forth.

The path then taken led along a bank some twelve feet in width. Majestic magnolias and mammoth azaleas lined it on either side, and the still water was hidden by a tangled mass of cup-shaped lotus leaves which floated on its surface. The road was bad, and as the men stumbled on a prolonged hiss brought them to a dead halt. And none too soon, for there in the path lay a fine specimen of the deadly copperhead. It is now an ornament of the Charleston museum.

Stretched across the road, the four feet of beautiful, copper-colored scales glistened in the sun. The ugly, flat head drew back; lazily the bulky body, which was as large around as a man's arm, formed itself into a double circle. It was in fighting position. Its head was raised a foot from the ground, and the neck became horribly attenuated. No one was very anxious this time to be the first to attempt the capture of a reptile whose bite meant almost certain death. Slowly a stick was thrust forward. The snake arched its neck until it was seen above the head, which was suddenly drawn back, and then, with lightning-like rapidity, it shot forward. The serpent's jaws were widely distended as it struck the wood with its fangs. A greenish liquid squirted out upon the ground several feet ahead, and everybody retired a few feet with dispatch. A man in front tripped and fell, and before he could arise the loathsome reptile was preparing to strike at him. Quickly he rolled over towards the side of the bank, and with angry hisses the infuriated snake followed. The man sprang up, but his foot slipped in the treacherous mud, and, with a splash, he fell into the canal. The matted vines bore him up, however.

The others soon placed the prong of a stick behind the reptile's head, but with a sudden twisting of its body it freed itself again and slipped into the water. The man tangled in the vines yelled and was badly frightened as the triangular head cut through the water in his direction. His eyes closed and his pale face sank lower among the vines. Then an aged college professor who had insisted upon accompanying the party sprang forward, and seizing the overhanging bough of a young bay tree lowered himself until he could touch the water, then put out a thin but muscular hand and seized the snake just behind the head not an instant too soon.

The matter might have ended disastrously had not the man among the water-vines extricated himself and come to the rescue. Quickly fastening a strong piece of twine about the snake's neck he secured the other to a stout pole and, going a few feet away, used it as he would a fishing-cane, gently lifting the loathsome length of shiny folds from their grasp. It was quickly lowered to the ground and dragged to the old oak tree, where, with more or less difficulty, it was strung up, head down.

The next captive was a pretty milk snake, about three feet in length. It came wriggling through the grass, and the professor seized it by the body. The agile little creature squirmed and hissed, but without much difficulty it was strung up with the others. Two pretty golden chains ran down each side of the delicate gray back, which seemed to change color and brilliancy with every movement.

The professor and the visitor wandered aimlessly through an old field of stubble, and were crossing an old ditch when a rustling sound in the dry grass attracted their attention. A few leaves moved and a bright, glossy thing glistened in the sun. As it moved the professor's eyes bulged, and without a word he sprang forward through the weeds in the bed of the ditch. Regardless of brier and root he followed a beautiful little creature some two feet in length, until at last he seized it in his hand, but it was apparently dead. It was a snake about as large around as a man's thumb, with a green and white speckled skin which was as bright and polished as glass. It was perfectly round and as smooth to the touch as polished stone. The head was long and narrow and the eyes closed. The body bent sideways, but otherwise was as rigid as a stick of wood. The professor carefully turned it over to examine the bright, yellow belly.

"It's a glass snake," he whispered, in an ecstasy of delight. "The first live one I have ever handled."

"But it is dead now," said the other.

The professor chuckled. "Dead, dead," he replied. "Not at all; he will live many years with the care I will bestow upon him. He is playing possum. If he had only had time he would have disjointed himself like a lizard and lost the three-fourths of himself until we were out of sight and hearing."

They returned to the rendezvous and found their two companions there. Of course they laughed at the professor for the tender care he took of his treasure, and against his vigorous protests laughingly hung the speckled beauty on the branch with the other victims of the hunt. It was impossible to convince the professor that his little pet was dead, but at last he consented to leave it long enough to join us in one more hunt.

"I will go," he sighed, "but half of my snake will be gone when I return, and I am too old ever to hope to capture another specimen alive." Reluctantly, the old man followed them, frequently casting a glance behind until they were out of sight of the moss-covered live-oak. They did not go far before encountering two or three lazy moccasins sunning their ugly brown bodies by the side of the road. "Kill them!" shouted two voices in unison. They were killed.

"Why not save one alive?" I asked the stranger.

"Because if you did," was the reply, "the chances are that you would get bitten in the back of the leg when you least expected it. I would not trust a dead moccasin. I have seen one with its back broken creep up to a man and try to bite him."

They succeeded in catching several small snakes of the garter variety and any quantity of grass snakes, which were very common.

One little reptile, some three feet in length and about as large round as a man's little finger, was mainly a bright vermilion; its velvet back was striped with a brilliant yellow and dotted with black. Little white spots covered its head and gave the appearance of a thousand eyes. The professor gave it a long name and declared it was poisonous. It was turned over to him for safe keeping, and he was soon on amicable terms with the harmless-looking creature, which he declared bit only upon severe provocation.

For nearly half an hour no snake turned up. This was unusual, and the hunters were about to turn back and try another road, when a negro boy of about eighteen came in sight and said he had seen snakes.

Just then a large king snake was observed moving in the grass at the boy's feet, and several men sprang forward.

"Don't hit um, massa!" exclaimed the boy. "Ise brung him out ter catch rattlesnake. De ole man got de rumetism, an' snake ile is de bess ting in de world fer um."

A member of the little party suggested they should see a snake fight.

He led them round a bend. The king snake began to show signs of excitement; his long black head swayed from side to side as he wriggled along, and now and then it was raised above the ground and the diamond eyes glittered ominously.

Suddenly behind an azalea bush some yards ahead there was heard a sharp, rattling sound. Like a flash the swift, black body of the king snake darted forward. There was a sound of commotion in the bush, and an instant later the dull brown length of an enormous rattlesnake slowly came into the open roadway.

Like a streak of black lightning the king snake dashed by and as quickly turned and brushed across the rattler's diamond-marked back. His venomous antagonist sprang at his foe, only to bury his fangs in the earth. Again the tail shook and a rattling broke the stillness. The rattlesnake coiled his tail, moving nervously to and fro. The rattling was now continuous. Twice the king snake moved rapidly in a circle about his enemy, who followed its every movement by merely turning its head, but at the second round the rattler stopped as if to straighten his neck, and at that instant the king snake dashed across the folded coil. Like a flash the rattlesnake struck at its enemy, but sank its fangs deep into its own flesh. The angry reptile seemed to realize that it had inflicted a death wound upon itself, for it no longer acted on the defensive, but took the offensive. But the king snake was too quick for its heavy antagonist and, gliding out of the way, waited as it sprang and waiting then until the rattler lay full length on its belly after striking. Finally the king snake sprang upon its enemy, and twining itself about its massive body slowly tightened its folds until the rattlesnake was powerless in its muscular hold. Then slowly exerting the full force of its powerful muscles it slowly constricted the other. There was a crunching sound as the body of the rattlesnake was torn in a dozen places.

Slowly slackening its folds the king snake prepared to swallow its late enemy head first, but the colored boy was too quick for it and seized the prize for the sake of its oil.

It was amusing to see his delight at finding his glass snake whole and unmolested, but his joy was brief-lived, for Cuffee, the colored youth, stretched out his hand to stroke its glassy coat, when two-thirds of the snake fell to the ground. It had parted evenly. Four diaphragms seemed to divide the body. At these places the vertebræ were so loosely joined that in moments of terror the flesh parts. It is an extraordinary provision of nature, and all were desirous of seeing the parts join together again, and for that purpose laid them carefully on the ground, but alas! the chicken snake swallowed the rear portion, and before they could cut him open that part of the glass snake was too mutilated to expect any reconciliation with the other. This concluded the day's sport.—N. Y. World.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—Tolstoi's manuscript is full of interlineations and erasures and the handwriting is small, fine and hard to read. The countess transcribes it for the printer, and one year, its said, she made fifteen copies of one of her husband's books.

—The private apartments of Queen Victoria are hung with a series of paintings representing incidents in her domestic life since the time of her marriage. The latest addition to the series is a picture by Mr. Reid, R. SA., of the christening of the younges child of Princess Beatrice, an event that took place last year.

—Mrs. Reed, lady manager of the World's fair for Maryland, is taking a practical means of fulfilling her mission. She has established system of classes in American history in the state schools, has talked to the children about the objects of the fai and now offers as a prize for the best scholar a free trip to the fair.

—James Richard Cocke, who was graduated at the Boston University School of Medicine at head of his class recently, is the first person totally blind from infancy to receive the degree of M. D. He has been a diligent student and reader of anatomy for eight years past and obtained ninety-eight per cent. on his examinatio.

—Kate Field describes Mrs. Amelie Rives Chanler as "a Psyche in appearance, and as charming in manner as in face. The modern woman writer," continues Miss Field, "quiesupsets the old picture of fright and slatternly dressing which a past generation religiously believed went had in hand with alleged female intelle."

—Gen. Longstreet is now 72 years of age and a man of patriarchal aspect. His hair and whiskers are wite as snow, his face ruddy, and his figure tall and erect. He is deaf, as the result of a bullet wound, and one of his arms is disabled. He lives a life of rimeval simplicity, going to bed early and rising at five in the morning to wat in his vineyard.

—At a London bookseller's is a complete set, in fifty volume of Voltaire's works bound in law ca. They were the possession of a lawyer who gave them their sober coverin for the purpose, doubtless, of deceiving his clients; and to further the delusion he had the books labeled "Arout's Reports," Arouet being one of the philosopher's baptismal names.

—When Walt Whitman was a poor clerk on small wages in Washington, during the war, he exercised the severest economy in order to use his money for the sick and wounded soldiers, in camp and hospital, to whom he used to make a daily pilgrimage. He would frequently sit by a dying man's cot through the whole night, administering medicines and preparing cordials.

—An interesting miniature portrait of Robert Burns, executed in water colors upon ivory, has just been added to the Scottish National portrait gallery. It is believed to be the very portrait mentioned by Burns in a letter dated January 29, 176, where he states that he was then "sitting to Reid in this town" (Dumfries), and "I think he has hit by far the best likeness of me ever taken."

—Gladstone buys so many books that he invariably demands a discount of ten per cent. from his booksellers. The story is told that when a lealer in the Strand refused to give the discount to the G. O. M. because he was not a bookseller, the ex-premier riplied: "I buy books and I sell them when they have served my purpose; I ought to have the discount." But the book-keeper refused to give it.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Pudding Sauce: Two tablespoonfuls of butter, one tablespoonful of flour, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half pint of boiling water. Stir to a cream the butter, flour and sugar; add the water; put on the stove and stir until thick; flavor to taste.—N. Y. World.

—Corn Gems: One pint of cornmeal, one pint of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, a little over half a pint of milk. Sift the cornmeal, flour, salt and powder together; add the milk and mix into a firm batter; fill well-greased tin gem pans and bake fifteen minutes in a hot oven.—Detroit Free Press.

—Ink Stains and Scorches: Scorches may be removed from linen by spreading over them the juice of two onions and half an ounce of white soap. Lemon juice and salt will remove stains of rust and ink. The articles should be exposed to the sunlight after being well saturated in the mixture.—Ladies' Home Journal.

—Potato Turnovers: Mix about a pint of hot mashed potato with one egg, season to taste and roll it in flour. Make it into balls and press or roll them out rather thin. Put a spoonful of meat minced and seasoned on one half, fold over and press the edges together, and fry brown on each side in butter.—Good Housekeeping.

—Meat Scallops: When there is considerable cold meat on hand, chop fine and make a scallop. Butter a pudding-dish and line the bottom with a layer of bread crumbs, add a little salt and a few bits of butter, then a layer of meat and another of bread crumbs, and so on until the dish is full. Pour over the whole a bowl of gravy if you have it and, if not, moisten well with cold water, cover and bake three-quarters of an hour, uncover and let it brown.—N. Y. World.

—Mead: One-fourth pound of tartaric acid, one-fourth once of essence of sassafras, two quarts of boiling water, three-fourths pound of sugar, one and one-half pints of molasses. Let it stand in a cool place twenty-four hours, then strain and bottle. Mead should always be kept in a cool place. To use, place a tablespoonful in a tumbler, fill with cold water, add one-fourth of a tablespoonful of soda, and it will foam and be found a delicious drink.—Good Housekeeping.

—Lemon Pie With Two Crusts: Prepare a good crust, grate the rind of a large lemon or of two small ones; cut the lemons in thin slices, remove the seeds and spread a layer evenly over the crust. Cover first with a teacupful of sugar, then with a paste made by wetting up three or four tablespoonfuls flour with cold water as for starch, and then pouring on a teacupful boiling water slowly so as to keep it smooth; add a pinch of salt, and the grated lemon rind. When the flour is well cooked, pour it over the lemon and sugar in the pie-plate. Cover with a crust and bake somewhat slowly.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Cooking Asparagus.

Most persons who are fond of this vegetable are in the habit of seeing it served in long stalks, either on toast or with some sort of sauce of dressing. This is very well for those who like it, but the epicurean fashion of cooking it is of a somewhat different sort. The stalks should be carefully cleaned and scraped and cut into sections a half to three-quarters of an inch long. They should be boiled in a very little water until perfectly tender, so that, when done, there is scarcely more than a spoonful of liquid in the kettle. Two-thirds of a cup of rich milk, with a large spoonful of cream, should then be added. Care should be taken that the flavor is exactly right. A very slight dust of pepper improves it; the salt should be added when first put on to cook. When the milk has just come to a boil, pour the asparagus into a dish in which is a piece of butter the size of an egg. Cover the dish and send to the table immediately. This fashion of serving is very much liked by people who try it, and certainly has the merit of daintiness, which can not be said of the ordinary style of eating this vegetable.—N. Y. Ledger.

Combinations of Color.

The color combinations this season are striking, audacious and weird. Here are a few: Heliotrope and watercress-green; cloud-gray and daffodil; blue and green; pink and pure yellow; lemon and mauve; rose-leaf, bronze and lilac; peach and turquoise; pistache and smoke; old rose sapphire; citron-yellow and olive; copper and pink; black and moonlight-blue; cream and terra cotta; maize and chestnut; gold, cream and olive-green; primrose and silver-gray; violet, grass-green and yellow; powder-blue, black and silver, and scarlet and fawn. No longer is it considered imperative that gowns, hats and gloves, should be mere variations on the same theme of color. Your frock may be one hue, your hat another and your gloves yet another. There is nothing distinctive about an all-gray, all-tan or all-blue costume! But a blue gown, poppy-red hat and tan gloves are excessively smart and up to date.—Once a Week.

The Perfect Man.

There are no perfect men. We have been men and understand the whole tribe. On a clear morning when they are well dressed and the road is clear they look admirably, but none of them enjoy having a passing vehicle splash mud on their newly-blackened boots. None of them look placid when some one treads on their sore corns. If you want to find out that no man is perfect just marry him. But I think that the two sexes are about equal. If you secure for life the companionship of some one about as good as yourself you are to be congratulated. Better have the two blades of a pair of scissors as nearly as possible alike.—Philadelphia Times.

Omnivorous China.

Dogs and cats are subject to the same process of absorption as dead horses, mules, and donkeys. We have been personally cognizant of two cases in which villagers cooked and ate dogs which had been purposely poisoned by strychnine to get rid of them. On one of these occasions some one was thoughtful enough to consult a foreigner as to the probable results; but as the animal was already in the pot, the convives could not make up their minds to forego the luxury of a feast, and no harm appeared to come of their indulgence.—Chinese Characteristics, by Arthur H. Smith.

—A company was organized at Phœnix, Ariz., about ten days ago for the construction of what is claimed to be the largest artificial reservoir in the world. It will be 16 miles long and contain 103,058,040,800 cubic feet of water.

CHILDREN'S EYES.

Parents Can Not Be Too Careful Regarding Them.

The constantly increasing near-sightedness among school-children, and the very general need and use of glasses, ought to suggest to us whether or not we are sufficiently careful of the conditions affecting the eyes of the young. Do we see to it that the books they read and those they study are of a clear and large type, requiring no straining or forcing of the vision; and do we encourage a large and open script for their handwriting? Do we see to it that our school-houses are built with a view to the falling of the light in the right way for the children's safety? Do we have the lights at home so regulated that no blaze shall produce blindness and no dimness make sight difficult? Do we make sure that the child holds his book at the distance which gives a correct focus, that he holds his body properly in relation to his book or work, that he looks off frequently, thus changing the character of the demand on the eye, and that he is not allowed to continue long in any efforts requiring the too intent use of his eyes? Do we keep ourselves on the lookout, too, for the first indication of feebleness or strain, in order that artificial aids may be resorted to in season to prevent any positive evil? That precaution is wise is evident from the fact, if we look for it, that in those living in what we call the natural life—that is, without books or fine work—there is very little trouble with the eyes where the condition of good bodily health otherwise are maintained. Of course, where there are unclean methods of life, like those in crowded Oriental cities, ophthalmia of various degrees is to be expected; but the free roamer of the desert, the dweller of the forest, the sailor on the seas, they who oxygenate the blood in constant currents of fresh air, and live wild lives that train the eyesight upon far distances, have little or no trouble with that eyesight. The eyeless fish of dark underground lakes are a perpetual example of the atrophy that takes place through non-use of an organ; but just as fatal an atrophy can result from its over-use—that is, from undue strain and effort—and too much attention can not be given to the prevention of such possibilities. We may hate to put glasses on the fair free faces of children, but their future comfort is of more importance than the pride of our eyes in them; and it may be a burden to give the constant oversight that the prevention requires in other directions, but as we chose to assume that burden in the beginning, we have no right to shirk one of its responsibilities, and there is none of the physical responsibilities of more weight than the care of their eyes.—Harper's Bazar.

THE BETTER WAY.

Lead and Encourage the Boy, but Do Not Coerce.

Let your boy feel that you are always ready for him, always interested in his plans, however wild they may be. You can no longer command him. If that has been your only hold, then may God have mercy on you and on him. His judgment is beginning to grow, perhaps. Encourage it. Take him into your councils. It will not hurt you to ask his advice about family matters. See how kindly he will take to being looked up to. Do you not like to have your friends put confidence in you? He is only another you. If his self-respect be small, you are cherishing its growth.

How do you treat the tender plants in your garden? Do you keep sunshine away from them, and step on each tender little shoot as it lifts itself up to the unknown light of a great and strange world? And as the plants gain strength and courage to stand alone, do you nip off their leaves savagely, and water them with a flood that they have hard work to stand against? Do you leave them to droop for a bit of encouragement, to grow awry for want of a little support to guide them till strong enough to stand alone? Or do you furnish props on every side, and leave the full-grown stem a derision to beholders?

Never let your boy feel that the household is complete without him. He may prefer anything and everything to his home, but when his "reason grows," he can not help coming back to it, if you are faithful to your trust. Never indulge in despair, however hopeless the case may seem, but keep a beautiful trust in Him that will shine in your welcome. He may not be worthy, but he will grow to it.—H. L. Hastings.

That Spoiled It All.

Hunker—This girl I am going to introduce you to is wealthy, but she can't play the piano.

Skidds—Good enough! That is vastly in her favor.

Hunker—But she persistently tries to.

Skidds—Say no more. Postpone the introduction indefinitely.—Detroit Free Press.

A Considerate Husband.

Husband—I never rebuke my wife except in two cases.

Friend—What are they?

"In the first place, I am rude to her when she reproaches me."

"And under what other circumstances are you rude to her?"

"Well, when she doesn't reproach me."—Texas Siftings.

What Brought Him There.

Philanthropic Visitor (at the jail)—Mr. friend, may I ask what brought you here?

Bad Dick (from the slums)—Yes, sir. Same thing that brings you here. Poking my nose into other folks' affairs. Only I gener'ly went in by the basement winder.—Chicago Tribune.

A Western Triumph.

The wonderful progress of Chicago in the manufacturing field during the past decade has proved a genuine eye-opener to Eastern people, and many of her own citizens while dimly conscious of her growth in this respect are not fully alive to the immense benefit which accrues to the city by the gradual location of great manufactories in her vicinity. In every day lines such as packing, milling and kindred industries Chicago has long been acknowledged the "King Bee," but it will surprise most people to learn that in the manufacture of musical instruments also, the largest factory in existence is located in Chicago. Nevertheless it is a fact that Lyon & Healy turn out more goods annually than any similar factory in the world. Last year their output was upward of 100,000 musical instruments and this year judging by the increase thus far the result will be considerably greater. The instruments made by them include Pianos, Organs, Harps, Guitars, Banjos, Mandolins, Drums and band instruments, and the quality is so far superior to the European product, that the consumer cheerfully pays more money for the home-made article. To the thinking mind it is a real pleasure to know that our people have made such remarkable progress in this artistic line, and to the Western man particularly it is a matter of pride to know that to his section belongs this high distinction.

Short Line to Spokane.

On July 10th the new extension of the Great Northern Railway to Spokane, Wash., began train service from Havre, Mont. For the present mixed trains run, but about August 1st regular through service will begin from St. Paul and Minneapolis. New equipment will be put on. The line is the shortest, with lowest grades and best roadway, to eastern Washington. Puget Sound will be reached before the close of the year.

S.S.S. CURES MALARIAL POISON

Nature should be assisted to throw off impurities of the blood. Nothing does it so well, so promptly, or so safely as Swift's Specific.

LIFE HAD NO CHARMS.

For three years I was troubled with malarial poison, which caused my appetite to fail, and I was greatly reduced in flesh, and life lost all its charms. I tried mercurial and potash remedies, but to no effect. I could get no relief. I then decided to try S.S.S. A few bottles of this wonderful medicine made a complete and permanent cure, and I now enjoy better health than ever.

—One of our city dads says he knew nothing of the filling of the vacant lot alluded to last week until he read it in the GAZETTE. So much for news papers.

—A Democratic caucus will be held at the City Hall in Delano, on Tuesday, July 26th, to choose 8 delegates to the County Convention at Buffalo, to be held the 29th.

—On Saturday while playing along the bank of the river near the place where the fire-engine takes water little Ida Lohmiller fell into the deep water and but for help of her sister Lauraand Archie Billings, would probably have drowned. Eddie Billings nearly found a watery grave at the same place a few days previous to that time.

—On Saturday evening 3 dozen of Delano's citizens came together at the school house where they were to have an annual school meeting. The meeting was called to order at 7:25 P. M. by C. W. Ingerson, President of the school board with clerk Brazie acting as secretary. The call was read and the financial statement asked for, when M. A. O'Hair suggested that as the Annual School Meeting was a separate affair from the Board Meeting in order to make the meeting legal it would be well to organize by electing a Moderator. Mr. Ingerson, with his usual dignity, thought he had a right to run the Annual Meeting. Superintendent Lindsley being called on decided with Mr. O'Hair that the law required the Annual School Meeting to organize. When Mr. Ingerson was elected Moderator and J. A. Brazie Secretary.

J. D. Young moved that we have 9 months school, which was carried.

Superintendent Lindsley made a speech in which he said if we ever want to approach Monticello, or even keep abreast with Buffalo, Howard Lake or Montrose with our schools we must do something. We must work. Was struck with the difference in attendance between this and other places. M, A. O'Hair asked, "Why is our school not up?" Lindsley replied, "Monticello has more scholars and has six teachers. The people stand up for the school there. Our children are mostly of foreign birth It is not because the teachers are better. People there want a wider knowledge of books. We have the course of study but let our boys drop out. Outsiders come to Monticello from all around to receive instructions.

The election of two members of the board instead of J. A. Brasie and Swan Ericksou was then proceeded with. Swan Erickson was nominated and on motion the secretary was instructed to cast the ballot for Swan Erickson.

C. J. Buckley and W. L. Terry were appointed tellers and a vote taken on the other member resulting as follows: C. H. Vorse 21, T. J. Catlin 12, M. A. O'Hair 3, total 36 votes. C. H. Vorse was declared elected.

F. H. Lindsley moved that the board be instructed to procure more free text books. Carried.

T. J. Catlin moved that the School Board be instructed to hire an assistant to the principal. Lost by a vote of 7 for to 10 against. Meeting adjourned.

We will furnish the BUFFALO GAZETTE and the papers mentioned below for one year for the prices named:

—The Eagle complains that we were seasick and speaks of our "chargain" and corrects our spelling "gourmand" with an "u". If she will examine the dictionary she can find "gourmand" but she will, doubtless, have several of her "spells" of "chagrin" looking for "chargain". This is the second time the "double-header" has found fault with our orthography, in the last couple of years and we would advise the bird to get out of that one "l" balloon that the smallest boy in our office discovered they had on the Delano 4th of July posters. And while we are at it what business have "Monticello and Big Stone" voting bridge bonds. Is she not getting Geography a little bit mixed. That would be a long bridge. She must have run onto a mirage, or had another attack to have, even with her reputation for stretching things made such a blunder. We think perhaps we have called the attention of our readers to enough of the Eagle's funny things to amply compensate her for her space in advertising our item of last week, especially as a man who lives but a few miles away called in a short time since and expressed considerable surprise that there was two papers in Delano, although he said he had taken the Eagle for eight years. We would advise our neighbor the next time she has "rechurche" criticisms to offer that she first get some proof reader to correct her own columns.

Personals.

M. A. O'Hair and family were in Waverly over Sunday.

Roosens are rusticating at the lakes during the hot spell.

A. L. Mealey and family came home from the cities Tuesday evening.

Johnny McDonald returned from a trip to South Dakota, Monday evening.

C. J. Buckly has been made a member of the Republican Congressional committee.

Cal Mattson and son Burt of Rockford were doing business in Delano on Saturday.

August Munson and son, of Watertown, done business in Delano on Wednesday.

Sheriff Nugent, and Attorneys Culkins and Pidgeon of the County-seat visited Delano, on Saturday.

E. M. Boulter, of Minneapolis, has leased Young's Hotel to take poisession, on Monday, August 1st, Martin Couzet, of Greenwood, was a GAZETTE caller on Tuesday. He favors bringing the Agricultural Fair to Delano.

Messrs, Vorse, ann Gutzwiller, and Dr. Shrader attended the republican congressional Convention, as delegates at Duluth this week.

County Cullings.

Considerable is being said about holding the democratic county convention in some other village in the county than at Buffalo the county seat where it has been held for so many years. This would be an innovation certainly, but other villages are beginning to feel that they would like to be visited occasionally by the conventions. Waverly has been spoken of but since hearing of the proposed plan we have interviewed a few of our citizens all feel that Delano would be glad to welcome the democratic convention that may see fit to hold their meeting here and the city council are willing to grant the City Hall, as nice a one as the county affords free. This would be the handiest place on the line for delegates to come by rail as they could come down in the morning and return at night on both the G. N. and the Soo and as Rockford station is but four miles from here it would be easy getting over from there. And those wishing to come by Minneapois could arrive here at 9.41 P. M, and leave at 4.41 P. M. Besides Delano is the largest village with ample hotel accommodations and in the banner Democratic township of the county.

County Attorney Cutting says the Monticello folks should get the approval of the Secretary of war to their bridge building business.

Wright county is fast forging to the front as one of the best Agricultural counties in the state being peopled as it is with a mixed population representatives not only from every state in the Union but almost from every country on the globe and endowed with natural resources not to be excelled anywhere; with her broad acres of timber, and prairie, and cultivated farms lying betweeen the Father of waters and the Crow river. and drained by the north fork of the Crow and dotted over with beautiful lakes; with soils adapted to the growth of any kind of vegetation she is almost self supporting and with a climate rivaling at this season of the year, that of the vine clad hills of Southern France or of Sunny Italy and the crops ripening for the harvest, the broad corn leaves waving in the breezes the air laiden with the scent of wild wood and of new mown hay, the envy of any city damsel or drug clerk; the whistle of the quail, robin, meadow lark, bobolink and many other native feathered songsters together with the happy appearance of the farmers with their families in the enjoyment of health, happiness and prosperity received by their own exertions together with the advantages of nature already mentioned makes indeed a fine subject for the poets art or the painters skill and presents a striking contrast to the existing in poverty and misery of many poor human beings who remain in idleness poverty, sickness and want in crowded cities.

ANNANDALE ANNALS.

Hot weather and lots of rain is the order of the day nowdays.

Farmers are putting in their best licks between showers getting up their hay and don't come to town unless they have to.

Adjt. General E. Huntington of South Dak. was visiting relatives and doing the "fish act" here last week.

Chas Kingsted, of Waverly, is in town looking after his branch store here.

Lee Ritchie has just placed an engine in his wood working establishment, and is now prepared to fill all orders with neatness and dispatch.

Considerable farm property is changing hands in vicinity of Annandale at prices ranging at about $30 per acre.

We notice the familiar countenance of A. A. Zweiner on ogr streets the 4th Al came down from Lintonville and said he got off at the first good town he came to.

ST. MICHAELS.

The late heavy rains did quite a lot of damage to the crops.

Some farmers are talking of getting boats or ferries instead of teams and wagons for haying purpose.

The carpenters are closing the job of finishing the church putting in doors casing and floor.

The latest improvement of St. Michaels is Hubert Dick riding through town with a bright looking darkey on his side.

It is reported that our eastern blacksmith prefers anvil and hammer to raspbrry picking.

The road work of the village is completed on account of want of funds, quite a little has been done to the improvement of the streets.

BUFFALO.

Hot days and thunder storms during the night has been the prevailing weather here lately.

The Republican rally Wednesday night was more like a funeral than a ratification meeting.

The commissioners are engaged wrestling with equalization.

The building for the Register of Deeds is still on paper. Flannigan went to Litchfield to get plans and charged the couuty $9: not satisfied with his trip there he went to Minneapolis two days and charged the county $14; John Schefchik also spent two days with Dave in Minneapolis and charged $15, a total to the county of $38 and nothing accomplished. Dave and John must think the tax-payers delight to pay illegal bills.

The Montecello bridge is in a state of rest and will probably remain so until after election. At the last meeting Mr. Culkin appeared before the commissioners urging an appropriation from the treasury.

Three men accused of selling liquor here without a license were arrested and brougnt before Justice Cochrane the 18th. Trials continued until Saturday and Monday next. They are being prosecuted under the village ordinance.

Heavy storms have flattened the grain to some extent in this vicinity.

A good many new buildings are being built here this summer.

All the old Merriam shouters are booming Nelson and Searle. Is Nelson popular because he voted with the Democrats to reduce the tarlff?

ROCKFORD RECORDS.

The weather the past few days has been uncomfortably warm but is a great help to the tardy corn. One can almost see it grow. Wheat and oats are quite heavy and fears are entertained that there will be considerable lodged grain this harvest.

G. W. Florida has the fish way in the dam nearly completed. If the others follow in this course Crow River will not be without fish. Chances must be quite favorable for one to catch any now, where once they were quite numerous.

Lake Sarah has another picnic this week. M. Bowen says there are a number more to follow. He has more applications for grounds than he can accommodate.

A pleasant social dance was held in the G. A. R. Hall last Saturday night.

Ice cream was as usual served by the Presbyterian's and others Saturday night to a large number.

O. C. Roberts has been kept busy the past few weeks delivering, and setting up binders, mowers, hay rakes and other farm machinery.

Mrs. Little who has been visiting with Miss Irying and brother George the past two weeks, returned to Minneapolis Saturday.

The Journal's caricatures rouse no little indignation in the breasts of the the Tammany braves around here who helped save him from political, annihilation, by his own party a few years ago. Hereafter it should be the rule to suport only the true blue.

The People's Party too are forninst the Journal because he has forgotten that he was a peoples' canndidate, now that he is in office.

Miss Julia Foley is mentioned as a candidate for School Superntendent on the Alliance ticket.

Knute Nelson is a bitter pill for our Republican brethren to swallow.

Attorney J. F. Collins is having lots of law business now-a-days.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. July 15, 1892.

Senator Brice is finding it difficult to stick to his long-ago-expressed determination to retire from the chairmanship of the democratic National commiteee, owing to the wish of Mr. Cleveland, ex-Secretary Whitney, and other prominent leaders of the party that he should retain the position during the present campaign. A gentleman who has just returned from a visit to Mr. Cleveland says that the muddle into which Mr. Harrison has thrown his party by "turning down" all of those who opposed his nomination has made a deep impression upon Mr. Cleveland and that he will show an opposite spirit when the democratic committee meets to organize for the campaign by insisting that no such discrimination be made.

The free coinage of silver has been killed again, and this time friends and foes agree that it is really and truly dead, for this session anyway. The fight in the House over the bill was entirely outside of the party lines, as may be judged from the fact that ex-Speaker Reed was the acknowledged leader of the 154 members whose votes defeated the resolution reported from the committee on rules for the consideration of this free coinage bill. Opinion differs as to what, if any, effect this disposition of the bill will have on the campaign. Representative Breckenridge, of Kentucky, says the defeat of the bill will result in the election of Mr. Cleveland and the retention of a number of eastern congressional districts that would have been lost if the House had passed the bill. "I recognize," continued Mr. Breckenridge, "that there is danger of loosing a few seats in the House on account of the failure of the bill, but those that are lost will not be to republicans but to third party men who agree with the democrats on the tariff and opposition to the Force bill. It will also cause a number of members who have usually been elected without effort to fight for their seats."

Every one who has had any experience with the present mixed up pension laws will endorse the resolution reported from the House committee on Invalid Pensions' this week, providing for the appointment of a select committee of five, three to be taken from that committee on Pensions, and authorizing it to sit during the coming recess, for the purpose of codifying, simplifying, and arranging the pension laws now in force.

Republican fillibustering prevented the joint resolution providing for the election of U. S. Senators by the people being adopted by the House this week. They objected to it because it lacked the force bil feature of placing the election of Senators under Federal supervision.

Representative Bailey, of Texas, who believes it to be the duty of Congressmen to earn the pay they received by being in their seats when a session is being held, and whose consistent and persistent objections to the passage of any bill in the absence of a quorum, has brought him notoriety and perhaps a few enemies believes in practicing what he preaches, and when he went to the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House to draw some money he requested that official to deduct one day's pay from the amount, as he was absent one day. Mr. Bailey contends that the deduction is in strict accordance with law, but the Sergeant-at-Arms will consult with the accounting officers of the Treasury before making it.

It is said that the Knights of Labor are preparing to make a determined opposition in the House to the proposed World's Fair appropriation. The organization alleges unfair treatment of its members by those in charge of the work upon the grounds of the exposition at Chicago.

Contrary to expectation, the anti-option bill failed to reach a vote in the Senate this week, although by a vote of 33 to 15 it was given the right of way, but supporters were trying to bring it to a vote. If it comes up again it will pass, as it will require a majority vote to get it up for consideration.

The Senate has adopted the amendment to the Sundry Civil appropriation bill providing for the appropriation for the World's Fair of 10,000,000 souvenir silver half dollars, to be coined from special designs, with amendments prohibiting the opening of the fair on Sundays and the sale of intoxicating liquors on the grounds.

Unless something entirely unexpected shall prevent it, Congress will adjourn within the next fifteen days. It is just possible that there may be a serious hitch over the numerious amendments which the Senate has added to the Sundry Civil bill when that measure gets back to the House. Some delay may also be occasioned by the adoption of legislation rendered necessary by the report of the House committee now engaged in investigating the connection of the Pinkertons with the Pennsylvania labor trouble, if that report can be made before adjournment.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

For Governor.

HON. THOMAS WILSON, of Winona.

If Judge Wilson is tendered the nomination as unanimously as he deserves we think there is no doubt but what he is a good enough Democrat to accept and be elected. He is, beyond question, the most available man, capable, used to public life, known to be sound on the great issue of the campaign, the tariff question, and acceptable alike to all classes, nationalities, and religions as a true American. He lives at Winona, away from the local jealousies of the twin cities, each of which presents its own candidate for that high and honorable position which the Judge came so near capturing two years ago. Without saying one word derogatory to the ability of any candidate to fill the office with honor to himself, and with credit to his constituents, we believe that Wright county prefers as her candidate this year the man who took so noble and effective a part in our last campaign, and that the State Convention will place at the head of the State ticket on Aug. 3d, a man who can lead his ticket on to a triumphant victory in November next, the Hon. Thomas Wilson.

Tariff is a Tax.

Thomas Wilson says so.

Democratic Convention.

A Democratic county convention will be held at the court house in Buffalo, Wright county, Minn., on Friday, 29th day of July, A. D. 1892, at 11 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of electing 19 delegates to represent Wright county in the Democratic state convention which meets at Exposition hall, Minneapolis on Wednesday, August 3rd, 1892, at noon, to place in nomination candidates for the following state offices, to-wit: Governor, Lieutenant-governor, Secretary of State, State Treasurer, Attorney General, three Judges of the Supreme Court and nine Presidedtial Electors.

All the voters of Wright county who are opposed to high taxation, who believe in reducing taxes on the necesaries of life to the needs of the government economically administered and who desire to free the agricultural class as well as the laboring element generally from the burden of maintaining manufacturing monopolies and trusts are cordially invited to participate with us.

The towns are entitled to representation as follows: One delegate from every town and one delegate for every forty votes or major fraction thereof cast for Wilson for governor at the last general election, in November, 1890.

WM. QUINN, Chairman County Committe.

THE Democratic Chairman W. M. Campbell is quoted as having said that without fusion the Democrats stand a better chance in the State than either of the other parties do. Thats how we feel and have felt about it for some time. Just as soon as a ticket becomes a fusion ticket it opens the door for democrats to switch off in every direction and weakens the chances of getting the straight party vote. Put up Tom Wilson and stick to Democratic principles and Grover Cleveland's friends will be found supporting his electors, and his friends in Minnesota are numerious, and the chances for Democratic electors and Governor good.

Tariff Pictures.

A few weeks ago the New York Press started a "Tariff Picture" which was copied, and dilated upon by the Minneapolis Tribune and other protective organs, concerning how protective tariff helped the farmer where it could get at him. It was claimed that in Georgia, farm lands were worth $5 per acre, while in New Jersy they were sold for $65 per acre. Just see what tariff does! But they die not tell us how it is in Maine, the home of the father of reciprocity, and of Tom Reed. They did not state the fact that they can not be sold for even $5. per acre, notwithstanding the efforts recently made to induce foreigners to settle on them. If protection does it in New Jersey where the silk is manufactured, Why don't it do it in Maine with her facilties for building ships for the world? With her numerous other protected industries? That argument want go down among western farmers who know that land varies in price according to locality, regardless of protected manufacturing interests. That lands near small villages are held higher than those farther off. Also that when crops are good better prices can be had than during seasons of drought or of uncommonly wet weather and consequent poor crops.

In making a trip, recently to Waverly we noticed that that place is beginning to assume city airs. Several improvements have been made since our last visit. Streets are being graded, sidewalks built and private property put in tasty order. The lake forms a fine back ground to the tall steeples of the fine church, breaks themonotony, and adds to the picturesqueness of the scene as you approach from the east on the rail road.

Democratic Congressional Convention.

A democratic convention for the Sixth congressional disecrict of Minnesota will be held at the Opera House in the city of Brainard on Thursday August 9, 1892 at 10 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of placing in nomination a candidate for congress and transacting such other business as may properly come before said convention. The basis of representation will be one delegate for every 125 votes, or major fraction thereof, cast in 1890 for Hon. Thomas Wilson for Governor, each county, however, to be entitled to at least one delegate. The several counties will be entitled to the following number of delegates in the convention:

Democratic Convention.

A Democratic convention will be held at the court house in Buffalo, Wright county, Minn., on Friday, the 29th day of July A. D. 1892, at 2 o'clock P. M. for the purpose of electing 17 delegates to represent Wright county in the congressional convention for the Sixth congressional district to be held at Brainerd in said district, August the 9th 1892, at 10 o'clock, A. M., for the purpose of nominating a democratic candidate for Congress for the Sixth congressional district, of Minnesota. Each township will be entitled to representation as follows: One delegate at large from each town and one for every forty votes or major fraction thereof cast for the Hon. Thomas Wilson, for governor in 1890.

Eagle on Eggs!

Times on Tariff!

"That democratic incubus down street made lots of fun about the protection of the American hen under the McKinley bill, and tabooed the idea that the farmer would be benefited by that measure; but the facts are now before us and cannot be denied. A bulletin board in front of Chas. Epple's store announces that 12½ cents per doz. will be paid for all the eggs brought to that establishment. Does Dr. Catlin or any other free trade "tarriff-is-a-tax crank" want to know what the ruling market price of eggs was at this time of year previous to the passage of the McKinley bill? It was 8 cents a dozen and hard work to sell them at that. Butter is another commodity the market price of which has ruled higher and is in greater demand than under the old law. Farmers can get at least five cents per pound more for good butter than they could two, three or four years ago; while cattle, sheep and hogs brings a better price than they have for years. If the tariff is a tax it has to be paid by the fellows who live outside of Uncle Sam's domains, while those within are reaping the benefit."—Eagle, as quoted by the Wright County Times.

We do not claim to be an "incubus" but we are down street and a Democrat, and did think a tariff of 5cts. per dozen on eggs, not just the way to raise funds for defraying the expences of the Government and have not yet changed our opinion. If Mr. Eppel can afford to pay a shilling per dozen for eggs we are glad our farmers can take advantage of the market; the Eagle ought to know that this is the season of the year when the protected hen is engaged in caring for the brood she has lately "incubated" consequently devotes her time to scratching for her family rather than to taking advantage of the "home market" produced by the cessation of her labors and consequent scarcity of her especial manufacture; that, in our locality her ranks have been thinned, by the ravages of the delegates, many of whom, we understand, liked chickens, and their friends to the late Republican Convention, in Minneapolis, who, aided by summer visitors to our lakes and resorts, have devoured many of our best egg manufactories; taken them completely out of the market. Allowing those left in running order a monopoly of the business. It is usual for the price to fluctuate at different seasons of the year anyway, in the summer 8 cts. or 10 cts., to 25 cts or 30 cts. in the winter. Every farmer's wife and daughter knows this. Why in 1855 to 57 when this country was under "practically" free trade as the Times, in its Query Box, in last weeks' issue tries to informs its readers, eggs brought 60 cts. per doz., in Minnesota, 5cts. a piece, and no tariff on them at all, and this summer with a 50 per cent tariff they brought 10 ct. per doz. until recently when as "Duke" says they began to lay in a supply for the World's Fair and, with the causes already mentioned the price was put up to a shilling. "Farmers can get at least 5 cts. a pound more for good butter than they could two, three or four years ago." Butter under "practically" free trade system of '56 mentioned by the Times brought here in Minnesota, instead of 15 cts as it has this summer under protection, 40 cts. without any tariff whatever. People in this country use more butter and eggs at home, have more pie and cake and ice cream than in former years, and consequently sell less in proportion to what they have than in former years when they ate their pork which was prohibited from Germany, but which country now eats American hog while Americans use the butter and eggs and sugar, the latter of which had the tariff reduced until it is in the reach of all. But even sugar during berry season has taken a rise and some merchants have recently been giving but 19 lbs. instead of 20 lbs. for a dollar, showing that demand raises the price. "Cattle, sheep and hogs" says the Eagle, and quotes the Times "bring a better price than they have for years" Cattle are not so extensively raised on our western plains as they were a few years since, and people are more numerous there to use what are raised. The large stock ranches are becoming small farms and not so many cattle come east as formerly. The same is true of sheep. And as hogs can be sold more advantageously, they are shipped to foreign lands while our people use beef and mutton. Says the Eagle and quots the Times "If the tariff is a tax it has to be paid by the fellows who live outside of Uncle Sam's domains, while those within are reaping the benefit." How the Eagle, the Times or any one else can prove this we would like to know. So far as the tariff on eggs is concerned, we give them but the one article to explain on, they need not go through the entire schedule. Come now give us your theories as to how the tariff on eggs, if a tax, has to be paid by the fellows who live outside of Uncle Sam's domains while those within are reaping the benefit. Question. Question.

Tariff is a Tax.

The Gazette says so.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. July 22, 1892.

Mr. Harrison is still keeping up his war on the men who dared to oppose his nomination at Minneapolis and having fully disposed of Clarkson Fassett and company he this week turned his attention to "Saint Mathew" Quay as the junior Senator fron Pennylvania has been called since he made Scriptural quotations in favor of closing the World's Fair on Sunday and by nominating George Shiris, Jr., of Pittsburg Pa., to the vacancy on the bench of the United States Supreme Court he gave the saintly Mathew a knockdown blow that may sadly discourage his halo.

Mr. Shiras owes his good fact that Quay had a candidate for the place and that he tried to make his friend's nomination the price of his cordial support of Harrison. It may be that it was because Mr Harrison thought Quay's opposition more desirable than his support that he declined to nominate his man and sent for Representative Dalzel whose enmity to Quay everybody knows and told him that he might try his hand at naming a man for the vacancy, or it may have been from some other cause at any rate that is what he did and finding that Mr. Sharas who was named by Dalzell was a lawyer of good standing at the Pennsyvania bar and that he was indorsed by some prominent people of his own and other states Mr. Harrison nomianting him without being personally acquainted with or having even met him. Quay isn't saying anything aginst the nomination but he be revenged if he ever gets an opportunity while his less crafty colleage Cameron is only kicking.

Although the House by a vote of 122 to 110 refused to concur in the Senate amendmetn to the Sundry Civil appropriation bill appropriating 5,000,000 to the World's Fair it is expected that it will in the end agree to the appropriation although it may not be exactly in the shape of the Senate amendment. The World's Fair officials now here are doing much more real kicking about the amendement which has been adopted by both House and Senate prohibiting the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday than they are about the temporary defeat of the appropriation amendment and they will make as strong a fight befor the conference committee to have the Sunday amendment struck out of the bill as they will to have the appropriation amendment put back but the chance of success is hardly as good in the first as in the last.

Democrats are asking each other how it is that ex-Senator Mahone, the notorious republican lobbyist has been able to control the votes of such democrats as Senators Vest, Butler, and Blackburn whenever the question of purchasing a site for a new Goverment Printing Office comes up. Mahone owns a piece of ground which he is trying to get purchased for that purpose, and although he has not yet succeeded he has with the aid of the Senators named and others succeeded in preventing the purchase of other and more eligible sites. Democratic Senators do not enhance their own reputations by helping such a man as Mahone in any thing.

Representative O'Nile of Missouri succeeded in getting an amendment to the Civil bill adopted by the House which if it is not struck out in conference will prevent the employment of Pinkerton men at the coming G. A. R. encampment in the city and at the World's Fair.

Col. Oates' investegation committee had several Pinkerton men before it yesterday but their testimony concerng their presence at Homestead and the fight did not differ materially from what has already been published. The committee will present a report as far as it has gone in the investigation in a few days and will continue its work during the recess.

Quite a number of democratic Congresional men went ever to New York to take part in the Cleveland and Stevenson notification jubilee, Wednesday night, and they agreed to a man in saying that Tammany is already actively at work for the ticket and determined to cary New York city by a larger majority than ever. They also agree in saying that the meeting at Madison Square garden was the most immense affair of the kind ever held.

Mr. Harrison offended Senator Proctor when he nominated Col. Eugene A. Carr of the Sixth Cavalry to be Brigadier General, the Senator when Secatary of war having promised the next colonel. Promises do not count with Mr. Harrison when they conflict with his own way

Represnetive Outhwaite of Ohio made an exposure on the floor of the House this week that may result very unpleasantly to Allan Rutheford a local claim agent who has been sending letters to parties interested for the relief of the hospital service demanding pay for having had the bill passed. Mr. Outhwait says the man is liable to arrest for useing the mails for fraudulent purposes as well as for obtaining money under false pretenses.

Tariff is a Tax and every honest man knows it to be so.

Tariff is a Tax.

Grover Cleveland says so.

WITH Grover Cleveland for President, Thomas Wilson for Governor, and Tariff Reform for the battle cry it looks as if Minnesota might wheel into line with several other western states and give a Democratic plurality if not a rousing majority.

Homestead Riots.

EDITOR GAZETTE.—Allow me a small space in your colums to criticize the editorial article in the Eagle of last week in regard to the Homestead Riots:

The article taken as a whole shows that the Eagle is no exception to its Republican cotemporaries but like them sympathised with capital against Labor.

The question of amount of wages is only secondary, the principle involved, and main questions at issue is, whether these men shall work as American workmen or slaves; for the company has made its rule that the men must give up their Union, or association and apply and contract for work individually, and seperately: The strike, (which is properly not a strike, but a shut out of the workmen by the company) to break up the Union or Federation of Labor.

Now if an American workman must give up any society, that he is connected with before securing work, then he is a slave, the capitalists have also their society or Federation for the purposes of self protection, and mutual advantage, (popularly termed corporations, or trusts) and would deny a similiar right to a laborer.

It must not be forgotten that the scope of the Federation or Union of Labor is broader than simply the question of wages and the adjustment of differences between themselves and their employers it is also a benevolent society if one of its members fall sick it pays a sick benefit to his family and care for each other as occasion may require consequently the importance of the society to the workman can be seen at a glance.

The Eagle publishes the corporation side of the story of the troubles and ignores the labor side, and its story is a tissue of lies and misrepresentations as will be more fully shown in a future article.

LIEUT. TOTTEN and his prophecies have broken loose again. But this time he lets 'em go on his own authority, and Yale college is not responsible for them. However, every time he prophesies the end of the world is undoubtedly a little nearer than it was before, and if he can hold out long enough we will get there at last.

AN Augusta (Ga.) newspaper speaks of "an independent western girl" as "slender, graceful, with eyes lit with azure fire, and a shapely head poised on the neck aspiring as the Alexandrian shaft that lifted Pharos to light the sea; commanding as the tower of ivory that looketh toward Damascus." Another editor roped in. No cards.

THE Salton lake, that mysteriously appeared in the great Colorado desert and which many people supposed had come to stay, has disappeared, but a wonderful sea of verdure now marks the place that was once barren sand and then covered with water. MR. GLADSTONE made his first speech in the house of commons fifty-nine years ago. The address was delivered May 17, 1833. On the 20th of the following August Benjamin Harrison was born, James G. WE have been informed of a good-looking, well-to-do and popular young bachelor not a thousand miles away who was being teased by the young ladies of a club for not getting married. He said: "I'll marry the girl whom, on a secret ballot, you elect to be my wife." Each girl went into a corner and used great caution in preparing her ballot and disguising her handwriting. The result of the vote was that there were nine votes cast, each girl receiving one. The young man remains a bachelor, the club is broken up and the girls are all mortal enemies.

IN the recent municipal elections in France the socialists carried the cities of Marseilles, Toulon, Toulouse, Narbonne and Roubaix. Their programme is that adopted by the Workingman's congress at Lyons, which calls for one free meal a day for children in the public schools and a free distribution to them twice a year of shoes and clothing; a working day of eight hours with minimum wages to be fixed by the city council; free medical treatment and drugs at cost for all citizens; free legal advice for workingmen, and free food and lodging for laborers without a fixed residence in search of work.

CAN anything that cannot be seen, handled, weighed or measured be stolen? Does the taking and carrying away of a thing that is intangible constitute larceny? These questions have been raised in a court in St. Louis, but not satisfactorily answered. A man was arrested for larceny, his alleged crime consisting in attaching a wire to one used to convey a current of electricity, his object being to secure electric illumination without expense. The grand jury failed to indict him because they regarded electricity as a force. Every new invention is likely to call for changes in the criminal code.

In respect to population the first five states rank as follows in the criminal record: New York, 11,468 criminals; Pennsylvania, 6,489; Ohio, 2,909; Illinois, 3,936; Missouri, 2,833. There were 4,290 murders committed in 1890, 102 persons hanged and 126 lynched.

INTERESTING NEWS COMPILATION.

FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS.

WEDNESDAY, July 20.—A bill was reported to the senate requiring the use of automatic couplers on cars and power brakes on locomotives engaged in inter-state traffic. The anti-option bill was discussed, Mr. Vest assailing the measure as an undue stretch of the constitution, and Mr. Washburne defending the measure. In the house a favorable report was made on the bill to enforce reciprocal commercial relations between the United States and Canada. A bill was passed increasing the pay of life-saving service men.

THURSDAY, July 21.—In the senate the house bill for the admission of New Mexico as a state was reported and placed on the calendar. The house bill to enforce reciprocal commercial relations with Canada was received and the anti-option bill was further disdussed. In the house the bill for enforcing reciprocal commercial relations with Canada was passed without a division. Other bills were passed to promote enlisted men in the army to the grade of second lieutenant; to provide for the collection, custody and arrangement of the military records of the war of the American revolution and the war of 1812, and to authorize the secretary of war to lease for five years lands for public purposes. The conference report on the deficiency appropriation bill was presented and agreed to.

FRIDAY, July 22.—The house bill authorizing commercial retaliation on Canada was passed in the senate. A resolution concerning the relations of capital and labor was discussed and the anti-option bill was further considered. The nominations of foreign ministers by the president were confirmed. In the house the time was occupied in the discussion of the conference report on the deficiency bill.

SATURDAY, July 23.—In the senate a bill was introduced authorizing the president to negotiate with other nations for the creation of an international arbitration tribunal. The anti-option bill was further discussed. In the house a resolution was passed calling on the president for information regarding the transportation of imported merchandize in bond or duty from one portion of the United States over Canadian territory into another. The senate amendments to the general deficiency bill were nonconcurred in and sent to a further conference.

SHOT DOWN.

An Anarchist Attempts the Life of Manager Frick.

He Shoots and Stabs Him in His Private Office at Pittsburgh—His Wounds Will Not Prove Fatal—The Assassin Arrested.

WANTED TO KILL FRICK.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 25.—A desperate attempt was made Saturday afternoon to kill Henry C. Frick, the chairman of the Carnegie Steel company, limited, and the sole manager of the great Carnegie steel mills in Homestead and elsewhere. He was shot twice in the neck. The murderous hand was thrown up when the third shot was fired, and the bullet imbedded itself in the wall over Mr. Frick's head. Berkman, the would-be assassin, then attacked him with a knife and stabbed him four times before he was overpowered. He was just on the point of being shot down for his deed when Mr. Frick, who retained consciousness notwithstanding his fearful wounds, interceded for him and saved his life. Later the man tried to destroy himself by chewing a fulminate of mercury cap, such as Anarchist Lingg used to kill himself in the prison in Chicago while he was awaiting the execution of the death sentence. He was seized before he had succeeded in biting into the cap and his plan of suicide was fruitless.

At 1:40 Mr. Frick was seated at his desk engaged in conversation with Mr. Leishman, vice chairman of the Carnegie company, whose office is next that of Mr. Frick. Harry Heckley, an office boy in the large outer office and reception-room, noticed a man enter hastily and push open the swinging gate in the railing which separates the public portion of the room from the inner part where some of the desks of the clerks and stenographers are located. There was no one near the private office door and the boy hurried over to ask the intruder what he wanted, but he was too late, as Berkman had already pushed aside the swinging door, which shut in the face of Heckley. As Berkman entered the office he did not utter a word. Mr. Frick looked up, as did Mr. Leishman, to see who had entered. Mr. Frick had a bundle of papers in his hands, which he was examining.

Berkman sprang within about 5 feet of Frick and presented and pulled the trigger of his revolver. The cartridge did not explode, but in an instant another cartridge did, and this shot struck Mr. Frick in the back of the neck on the right side and glancing downward passed out of his side below the armpit. Mr. Frick made an exclamation and jumped to the circular window looking down on Fifth avenue, which he tried to open. Berkman passed quickly in front of Mr. Frick's desk and, approaching closely to Mr. Frick, fired again. This ball entered the muscles of the left side of the neck and passed around and lodged under the right ear, where it was afterward reached by a probe.

At this instant Mr. Leishman threw himself on Berkman and wrestled with him for possession of the revolver. Leishman grasped the barrel and turned the muzzle upwards as the cartridge exploded, the ball entering the plastering near the rear glass partition. With the agility of a desperate man Berkman drew a dagger and attempted to stab Leishman with it, who was holding his assailant by the shoulder and body. Mr. Frick saw the gleam of the steel, and although staggered by the shock of his wounds and bleeding profusely, he jumped between the men and seized Berkman's arm. Berkman freed himself from Leishman's grasp and plunged the dagger into Frick's right side, just above the hip, making an ugly wound 3 inches long. He stabbed again, higher up, but the point of the knife struck on a rib and glanced down without inflicting much of an injury. Twice again was the knife thrust into Frick's side, but those last only made slight wounds. This struggle took place near the front window and in full view of those on the street and in the buildings across the way.

By this time two office boys and Mr. Utley, who had been in the hallway, and Deputy Sheriff May, who had entered the office as the first shot was fired, threw themselves upon Berkman, who was still held by Frick and Leishman. May had drawn his revolver, and, holding it at the back of Berkman's head, was about to shoot, when Mr. Frick cried out: "Don't kill him; we have got him all right; leave him to the law." At this Berkman broke away and tried to escape down the stairway, but was immediately secured. The prompt action of Mr. Frick and his marvelous self-command without doubt saved the life of Mr. Leishman and the self-appointed executioner.

In five minutes after the shooting a half dozen surgeons, including Drs. Litchfield, McClelland, Murphy and Joseph and John Dickson, were at hand. Mr. Frick was told to lie down on a lounge, and, after his clothing had been removed, the wounds were washed and the bleeding stopped.

During all this time the wounded man was calm, had a perfect command of his faculties, and apparently was less excited than any other person in the room. From time to time he made suggestions as to how badly he was hurt, and a half hour after the shooting dictated a message to Andrew Carnegie about the assault in which he told him that he thought he would be all right.

At his request all communication with his residence was shut off and his brother-in-law was sent to inform his wife of his injury and reassure her. She had a son ten days ago and is still confined to her room. She was greatly distressed, but bore herself bravely when told that there was no apparent danger. She sent her sister, Miss Childs, to the office, with instructions to return at once and inform her of Mr. Frick's actual condition.

In the meantime Mr. Frick was removed to the back office, where the physicians made a careful examination. The bullet was removed. The news of the shooting created intense excitement and telegrams poured in from various parts of the United States. At no time did he believe he was fatally injured and after the removal of the bullet sent for his stenographers, dictated a letter and asked his chiefs about the condition of affairs at Homestead and Duquesne. Guards were placed at the door and admittance refused to all but officials of the company and immediate relatives and friends.

Mr. Frick refused all medicine until 5 o'clock, when he was given a sedative and was soon sleeping soundly. No one was permitted to see him for an hour before his removal to his home, which took place shortly after 7 o'clock. His physicians announced on his arrival at home in the east end that he had stood the trip well and showed no bad effects from it.

Mr. Frick rested easily all through Sunday. His temperature is 98, and he seems to be quite cheerful and confident of his recovery. Another cut was discovered which was missed in the examination made Saturday. It is in his left leg just below the calf, and almost severed the tendons. Mr. Frick complained of pain in the leg, but his attendants imagined that it was of the other wounds he spoke. It was carefully dressed and relief followed. Dr. Litchfield, who is in constant attendance at the house, says that Mr. Frick is doing nicely, and unless something now unlooked for occurs the patient will be up and about in a few days.

The news of the attempted assassination spread like wildfire, and in five minutes after the shooting Fifth avenue from Market to Wood street was black with people. When the fellow was brought out of the building by the police officers to be taken to the Central station cries greeted the officers of "Shoot him!" and "Let him have what he gave Frick!" A better element helped keep the assassin from mob violence. A large crowd followed the patrol wagon containing the prisoner to the Central police station, and when the lockup was reached the police were compelled to shut the gates to keep out the people. The prisoner was pale and so much exhausted from his excitement that he could not answer the usual questions for several minutes. He was taken back into the cell department and Inspector McKelvey put him into a cell.

When the prisoner recovered sufficiently to speak Inspector McKelvey questioned the prisoner. He said his name was Andrew Berkman, and his age 26 years. He lived in New York and was a compositor, but he would not state where he was employed. He came to Pittsburgh Thursday for the express purpose of killing Mr. Frick, whom he considered an enemy of the people.

At 4 o'clock the prisoner in charge of Superintendent O'Mara, Inspector McKelvey and Detectives Shora and Coulson, was taken to the gymnasium in the station yard to be photographed. Seated in the chair the only action of the young man that indicated any nervousness was a peculiar movement of his jaws. This aroused the suspicion of Police Surgeon Meyer, who afterward made a search and found a small shell in the prisoner's mouth. The desperate man refused to open his mouth and it was necessary to choke him till he was black in the face before he would give the shell up. It was examined by a chemist and pronounced a dynamite cartridge of the same kind used by Lingg, the Chicago anarchist who killed himself. It was considered a miracle that Berkman was not blown up.

Berkman has undoubtedly been in the city some time. He called at Carnegie's office Thursday and asked for Mr. Bosworth, an employe, but the latter was out at the time. Friday he called again and inquired for Mr. Frick, but he was also absent. He also called Saturday morning, but went away before he could be invited into Mr. Frick's office.

The would-be assassin, who now gives his name as Alexander Berkman, is still telling contradictory stories. He stated that when he was ready, which would not be until after his transfer to the county jail, he would make a written statement for the press, and until then he would refuse to answer any questions. He is a slight man, 22 years old, near-sighted, and wearing glasses. His most peculiar feature is the mouth, which is large and sensual, and has two curious flaps of flesh which, when it is open, still partially cover his upper teeth. His chin is strong, his forehead excellently shaped, and the ears stand out from the head. The only fault to be found with his appearance is the shifty, furtive manner in which he uses his eyes. He would not be a notable man in a crowd and would be classed as a German Jew of some education. That he is pleased with the notoriety which he has gained is evident, but that he is a dreamy fanatic who has gone crazy over anarchistic literature is also probable. Much to his own surprise and that of everybody else, Berkman was transferred from the central station to the jail at 8 o'clock Sunday evening.

Ex-Sheriff Gray was on the stand in the O'Donnell trial when the news reached the courtroom that Mr. Frick had been shot, and the news caused great excitement. Mr. O'Donnell was evidently greatly shocked and said: "Oh, that is terrible; that is terrible." He was deeply and visibly affected and it was with the greatest efforts that he could control himself.

A dispatch from Homestead says: The report of the shooting of Chairman Frick spread like wildfire here. Persons are crowding the bulletin boards in front of the telegraph offices. The leaders deplore it, but many of the strikers are saying: "served him right," "wish he was dead," etc. The militia is ready to suppress any outbreak.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 25.—The advisory board of the strikers Saturday night passed resolutions denouncing the attempted assassination. For fear of possible danger to Gen. Snowden an extra guard hes been placed at his headquarters.

FINE STOCK BURNED UP.

Bollingbrook Stables Damaged and Sixteen Horses Perish in the Flames.

BALTIMORE, July 25.—The famous Bollingbrook stables on the farm of R. W. Walden, at Middleburg, Carroll county, Md., were struck by lightning and set on fire Friday night. The flames spread and soon enveloped the whole series of buildings, lighting up the country for miles around. The cries of the frightened horses could be heard for a long distance. Bollingbrook is a model stock farm. John A. and A. H. Morris own most of the horses there, which are valued at nearly half a million dollars. The stallions include such animals as imported Galore, who cost $30,000; Tom Ochiltree and the beautiful imported Hopeful. Probably the only insured horse on the farm is imported Galore, for only $7,000. A dispatch says that sixteen horses were burned to death, but does not give their names. The buildings were entirely destroyed.

Crop reports from the northwest are rather discouraging on wheat, but from the west are favorable for corn.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

Population of State Institutions.

Secretary Hart has issued his report of the population of the state institutions at the close of the month of June. The report is as follows:

St. Peter hospital	993
Rochester hospital	1,107
Fergus Falls hospital	140
Total insane	2,240
Soldiers' home	143
School for feeble minded	316

State reform school	293
State reformatory	141
State prison	234
Total	3,596

The report shows an increase of three over June, 1891.

The Coming State Fair.

The state fair this year will be essentially a farmer's fair, and no stone will be left unturned by the officers to make it as thoroughly successful as brains and money can make it. The members of the executive board are canvassing among exhibitors, and state that a number of new and attractive displays will be seen this year on the grounds. The farmers' institute, under the direction of Superintendent O. C. Gregg, will be one of the features, and daily sessions will be held at which object lessons will be given to the students by expert judges of live stock. Prof. Carl Meyers, of New York, and his wonderful air bicycle, will be engaged to give exhibitions during the fair.

Matches Made in St. Paul.

St. Paul is to have a Swedish match factory. The Business Men's union is to furnish the building, and the requisite amount of stock, $40,000, has been secured. The building will cost $60,000 and will employ about 120 at the outset. The company which will operate the factory has the exclusive right to manufacture these matches, and this will be the only manufactory in the United States that makes them, the matches now being imported from Sweden.

Started Business.

William Everett, who recently died in Oakland, Cal., established the first business house in Marshall, this state, in 1873, when the town was laid out. In the Indian uprising in 1862 he was living in Murray county, and his wife and two boys were slaughtered before his eyes and his daughter led away captive. He himself was shot in two places, but managed to escape. His daughter was rescued.

An Electric Storm.

An electric storm passed over Dundas and vicinity, commencing at 9 in the evening and continuing till 3 in the morning. Great circles encircled the whole cosmos from the north, southeast and west, beautiful rolls of the rainbow colors shooting down the line, while a dense nebula covered the whole heavens, large black spots of the sky being visible.

Sons of Herman.

The Grand Lodge Sons of Herman in session at Red Wing elected officers as follows:

Thomas F. Andrews, one of the oldest and best known merchants in Minneapolis, died at his home after an illness of about six months, aged 62 years.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—To mend china, take a very thick solution of gum arabic and stir into it plaster of paris. Apply with a brush to the broken edges, join, and in a few days the place will be firm as at first. The whiteness of this cement renders it doubly valuable.—Detroit Free Press.

—Vanities: One unbeaten egg mixed quite hard (about the consistency of pastry), with flour and a little salt added. Roll quite thin, cut into small shapes as desired, and fry in deep lard for a minute. While hot, sprinkle with powdered sugar. These will be found delicious served with dessert.—Good Housekeeping.

—Sweetbread Saute: After the sweetbreads have been boiled, which takes twenty minutes, split and cut in four pieces, season with salt and pepper; put in a small frying-pan one tablespoonful of butter and one of flour; when hot put in the sweetbreads, turn constantly until light brown. Serve with cream sauce.—Old Homestead.

—Salmon: Place a can of salmon on a platter and pour over it drawn butter, which is prepared as follows: Place three tablespoons of butter in a saucepan with one tablespoon of flour. Stir until well cooked, without browning, then slowly add boiling water until of the right consistency, add salt and white pepper.—Prairie Farmer.

—Roast Beef with Catsup: Take a five or six pound roasting piece of beef, remove or have the butcher take out the large bones; gash it a little and season well with salt and pepper; then press it into a straight-sided stone-jar or pot, and pour over a teacupful of tomato catsup. Tie a double thick paper over the top and cover very closely so as to prevent the escape of steam, and set it in a moderate oven to roast four or five hours.—Orange Judd Farmer.

—Ribbon Cake: A very pretty ribbon cake is made in this way: To two and one-half cups of sugar put two and one-half cups of flour which has been sifted with two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one cup of sweet milk and four eggs. Divide the batter into three parts; to one part add one cup of raisins, spice to taste. Put the part with the fruit between the other parts, spreading a very thin layer between. The fruit part and the others are to be baked in three layers—one fruit, the others plain, these after they are baked put together with jelly.—Detroit Free Press.

—Chicken Fritters: One cup chicken-stock, one heaping tablespoon flour, one tablespoon butter, one-half teaspoon salt, one saltspoon celery salt, one cup cold chicken. Mix the flour smoothly in the hot butter, add the boiling stock and when smooth add the seasoning. The sauce should be quite thick. Pour half the sauce into a small, shallow dish (buttered). Chop the chicken fine, and when the sauce has crusted over a little spread the chicken evenly over the top. Then cover with the remainder of the sauce. Place on ice, and when cold and hard cut into inch by two-inch pieces. Dip them quickly in fritter batter, and fry in hot, deep fat. —Boston Budget.

LACE IS ALL THE RAGE.

Returning to the Adornments Made Famous by Marie Antoinette.

Lace is the idol of the hour. Some one has said it is like love; anyway, there are quite as many kinds of it; it is equally as perishable and very little of the original article is in the market, for so beautiful is the imitation, so delicate is its dissimulation, that we love it for its frailty and rejoice in our own deception. Our grandmothers would have scorned the idea of a best bib and tucker, not absolutely sincere, as virtuously as do we the wearing of paste jewels, but we copy the web and appropriate the patterns of the old pelerines and capes in our wonderful machine-made laces that we may throw aside with no compunctions of conscience when our capricious fancy wearies of the mode.

The favorite arrangement of the filmy fabric will be in the form of the fichu which Marie Antoinette improvised in the old sunny days when playing at farming at Trianon she introduced a touch of peasant simplicity to the gay and gallant costume of the Eighteenth century. These fichus which assume more and more important proportions, frequently combine the coarser with the finer makes of lace, and form with a pair of turned back cuffs the only decoration for simple summer gowns, one fichu doing duty for several frocks, or several lace and chiffon arrangements being used to make a single gown appropriate for a variety of occasions.

If, as has been claimed, women are unconsciously affected by what they wear, this will be a season of dainty femininity and high-bred graciousness. —N. Y. Sun.

SALT BATHS.

Their Beneficial Results, Especially for Children.

At this season of the year, when children are apt to be languid with the approach of warm weather, it is an excellent time to start the habit of the daily bath, if it is not already a part of the regular regime of the day. With the coming of the new summer and the loveliness of the early morning hours even the most indolent feels the impulse toward early rising, and the very best beginning of the day is a refreshing bath, followed by some light food and a vigorous walk in the open air. The addition of a cup of rock salt to the bath is a great advantage, and is especially soothing to the nerves of delicate people who find the shock of cold water too severe. Even indoors such a path possesses much of the strengthening, invigorating qualities of the ocean wave. Rock salt is considerably cheaper than fine table salt, and is quite as good for this purpose. It should be thoroughly dissolved, however, so that not one crystal remains. When it is put in a cold bath, it is better to dissolve the salt in a little warm water first, though not enough to change the temperature of the bath perceptably. It is very important that the salt be completely dissolved as a single crystal may cut into the skin. Where a little child is feverish, and restless a warm salt bath will sometimes induce sleep when everything else fails. Let the temperature of such a bath be about from 85 degrees to 90 degrees. Add a cup of salt to every six gallons of water. Do not rinse off the salt with fresh water, but dry the child's skin thoroughly, and rub it down with smooth, gentle strokes of the hand. All this has a wonderfully pacifying effect, and a fretful baby will often drop to sleep before you are aware of it under such treatment.—N. Y. Tribune.

A Girl's Sacrifice.

LYDIA sat in the porch looking down into the orchard, all pink with apple blossoms. A warm May wind blew the curls on her forehead to and fro, and made her feel too drowsy to read. "Middlemarch" had sunk into her lap, with one finger between the leaves to keep the place, and she was half asleep when the sound of voices from the sitting-room behind her floated out, and became a part of her day dream.

"Seems to me," said a high-pitched tone, which she knew to be that of a neighbor, "seems to me you ain't lookin' jest up to the mark this spring, Mis' Marcy."

"Well, I don't know as I am feelin' any too spry," returned the gentle old voice of Lydia's grandmother. "I expect it's this dreadful hot weather comin' on all of a sudden so. I've been thinkin' I'd start in takin' some brimstone and molasses three mornin's and then skip three. Anybody needs a little medicine in the spring. I don't seem to have much of any appetite, and I'm weak as a rag."

"Maybe it's the cookin' of that hired girl from the city, that you ain't used to," suggested the neighbor. "How does she take hold? Is she much of a hand?"

"Well, Lyddy's satisfied with her, and she knows more than I do about the way they do things nowadays. She's visited the governor's folks and round among her schoolmates a good deal, and she's seen just how things ought to be. I guess they set a pretty good table to Gov. Cobb's."

"I guess they do," said the neighbor. "But it's kind o' hard for an old woman like me to get used to new-fangled ways. There ain't nothin' relishin' to me in such little warmed-over messes. I declare, I'd like nothin' better for my dinner than a good rye and Injun cake and a nice, hot cup of tea!"

"I'd like to know what in the world there is to hender your havin' it?" cried the neighbor, sitting up straight.

"Well, Lyddy she says it ain't the fashion to have tea for dinner, and I give in to her sooner 'n to make a fuss. You see, Mis' Seavey, young folks is young folks. When Lyddy come home from boardin' school last fall I could see 'twas hard for her."

The old lady paused.

"The house ain't new," she resumed. "Why, I've lived here myself, winter and summer, goin' on sixty year. Our ways here ain't like city ways, and she wanted to ask some of her mates up here; but I could tell 'twas mortifyin' to her to think of their comin' to such a poor old place, and me, too, so behind the times.

"So I just says nothin', and let her go ahead her own way, fixin' things up. Good land, Mis' Seavey! I just wish you could see the best parlor!"

"What has she done to it?" asked Mrs. Seavey.

The village did not think much of Lydia since she had returned from school, a tall, stylish girl, with "more airs than a music box," as the ladies declared at the sewing circle.

"Why, the chairs and the tables is all twisted every which way. Looks as if a high wind had been blowin' through. The blinds is all left wide open, and the sun streamin' in, a-fadin' out the carpet like everything. Body Brusssels, too, Mis' Seavey!"

"Good land!" said Mrs. Seavey.

"She's got out some of the best chiny and stood up the plates on the mantel piece, and more of 'em hangin' on the wall. There's old shawls a danglin' in the doorways. That picture of father, painted when he was a young man, she's took down altogether. She says it's awful."

"Dear suz!" cried the neighbor.

"But I'm sure the minister used to set a sight by that picture. I never come in when he was here, but I found him lookin' at it. She's stood some plants on the floor by the windows. She's—well, I can't tell you all. She wants we should set there common every day. I don't know what her grandfather would say if he could see it. I expect he would turn over in his grave."

Poor Mrs. Marcy was quite out of breath as she poured out her soul. To have the sacred best parlor profaned had been a sore trial, which it took all her love for Lydia to bear. To sit there "common" would have been to her as wicked as to carry her knitting to the meeting house.

"She wants I should dress up every afternoon in my best black silk and the white net cap Sarah Sheldon made me. That silk's too good to set round in. It's only been turned twice, and I've kep' it nice for funerals and when I do go to meetin', though that ain't often now. Why, it'll get all shiny in no time if I go to puttin' it on every day, let alone my feelin' like a fool all rigged up so when there ain't no occasion. Lyddy, she's different. Young folks ought to rig."

"Now, Mis' Seavey, I don't want you to think I'm complainin'. At my time o' life it's hard work tryin' to git into new ways. But land! you can git used to anything. It makes Lyddy happy. Poor child! It's hard for her to be penned up here in the country. There ain't a prettier-appearin' girl in New York or Boston, I'll be bound."

Mrs. Seavey bounced up in wrath.

"Pretty appearing! What's pretty appearing, I'd like to know, when she's pesterin' your life out, and just as selfish as she can be? I've got to run back now, for John's comin' home to dinner, but I'm just goin' to stir you up a mess of rye and Injun cakes, and if you don't have some of 'em for your dinner, and a dish of tea, too, I'll come in bimeby and give your Lyddy a piece of my mind. Good-by!"

Off she trudged, burning with a sense of the old lady's wrongs, and trying to peep into the reconstructed best parlor as she went through the entry.

Lydia sat quietly after the voices had died away, no longer sleepy, but half amused, half sad. She had been thoroughly discontented at the homely old farmhouse after her very modern home at school. It really seemed to her that she had shown nobleness of soul in choking down the despair in her heart, and trying to make the best of things.

The parlor especially she looked upon quite as an artistic triumph. But no amount of talking and scolding could put the Marcy household on a stylish footing. Plain and old-fashioned it was, and so would remain in spite of all her efforts.

"Grandma is so obstinate!" Lydia had groaned in her own room.

The little talk she had now overheard put a new aspect upon it all. She saw as if a veil had fallen from her eyes how her grandmother had been sorely bewildered by the new ideas, and how the sweet old soul had struggled silently to come into harmony with a strange order of things, with an unselfishness that made Lydia's trials seem trifling.

Then she flew to the best parlor, and in a very little while had brought back its old prim order. She pushed the hair cloth chairs back stiffly against the wall, closed the blinds at the windows, and took away every æsthetic touch she had given.

Last, but not least, out of the closet under the stairs she dragged the despised portrait of her ancestor in the gaudy militia uniform. Laughing quietly at its grotesqueness, she hung this work of art upon its old nail, where it was easily the most prominent thing in the room.

When all was done, a gloomier and more forbidding apartment had never been seen, but, just as it was, grandma loved it.

When the old lady awoke, the sun was streaming in across the sitting room floor, and the bell was ringing for dinner. Lydia appeared in the doorway with a bright smile, prettier than ever.

"Come, grandma," she called, "dinner is ready, and Mrs. Seavey has just sent in little Katie with some delicious cakes for you."

A great pleasure flitted over grandma's face as she stepped eagerly toward the dining-room, leaning on her cane.

"I do believe they're rye and Injun," she exclaimed, as delightedly as a child helping herself from the well-filled plate.

"I thought perhaps you might like a cup of tea, too," added Lydia, getting up from her place to put the cup down by her grandmother, and trying not to see the scorn of the hired girl from the city, who had a great contempt for dinner at noon and tea at dinner.

Lydia laughed and chatted cheerfully until the meal was ended, and Mrs. Marcy breathed a long sigh of satisfaction.

"I declare!" Mrs. Marcy said, rising from her seat at last, "I don't know as I've ever had anything taste so good to me. Those cakes of Mis' Seavey's were just beautiful, and I do enjoy some hot drink in the middle of the day. It kind o' goes to the spot."

Lydia drew her gently along until through the open door in the parlor, her glance fell upon grandpa's picture back in its old place on the wall.

"Why, Liddy!" she whispered, with a start of surprise. "Why, Liddy!"

"Yes," answered Lydia, merrily. "I suppose the parlor is better the way you used to have it. It goes better with the rest of the house. So I put all the things back again as they were."

Grandma's eyes wandered lovingly over the stiff and solemn room. A mist came on her spectacles, and, as she took them off to wipe them, her thin old hands were trembling so that she could hardly hold them.

"Somehow," she said to herself, with a sort of a sob in her throat, "somehow I can't help feeling as if I'd been off on a visit and was just a-gettin' home."

Lydia threw her arms around her grandmother, giving her such a hug that the glasses flew across the room, and the black cap was hopelessly unsettled.

"O, grandma!" she cried, with a deeper meaning than grandma knew, "we've both got home, and like the people in the fairy tales we're going to stay here and be happy ever afterward!"—Youth's Companion.

The Drug Clerk's Life.

"The drug clerk's life is not always a happy one," said an attendant in one of the most prominent uptown stores the other day. "Of course you imagine we have nothing to do, but just think of keeping the store open fifteen hours a day and then when you get nicely to sleep the night bell plays a dead march in your ear and no matter what your condition is up you get and then, ten chances to one, the customer, who patiently awaits your coming, asks: 'Have you any two-cent stamps?' Of course we don't object to filling a prescription or supplying medicine, but in my notebook I have entered during the week twelve calls, three of which were all right, but among the other nine were two requests for stamps; one man wanted some insect powder, another a harness sponge and the remaining five applications were for candy, cigars and the use of our city directory."—Philadelphia Record.

WHY POPCORN POPS.

Not One Person in a Thousand Can Tell When They Are Asked.

Why does popcorn pop?

Ask the first twenty learned men you can find and not one of them will be able to tell you. The secret lies in the structure of the grain, which is very wonderful indeed.

In the center of each grain of popcorn in the "germ" of the future plant. It holds the vital element of the seed. What is it like? Well, it is about the size of a large pin-head. Its outer coat is a membrane of woody matter, inside of which is an oily substance containing nitrogen and phosphorus. Embedded in this oily substance is the "nucleus."

The "nucleus" is the true germ—the essential life-principle of the seed. It is chiefly composed of albumen, and is just big enough to be seen with the naked eye. Small as it is it contains a mystery which no man has ever solved or is ever likely to solve—the mighty secret of reproduction. However, there are more things of interest to be noticed in the outer structure of the popcorn grain.

Gathered around the germ are granules of starch, arranged in layers and so regularly placed as to resemble a crystalline structure. In fact, like crystals, though they are not such, these granules possess the peculiar property of "polarizing" light. Seen under the microscope they have very beautiful forms. Between each two layers of them is a woody membrane, and covering the whole is the hard external envelope of the corn grain, composed of woody matter with a large proportion of mineral substances, such as lime silex, potash and magnesia.

Think what an amazing quantity of nutritious food is thus packed in a little space for the use of the embryo plant, which first absorbs the nitrogen and phosphorus contained in the so-called "germ" envelope, afterward consuming the starch and so getting ready to sprout.

A popcorn grain has precisely the same structure as a grain of ordinary corn. It is simply a variety of the same species of plant. Why, then, will not common corn pop? It will do so, as you can find out for yourself by trying, but it does not pop nearly so well, though now and then a grain will do excellently. The reason is that the starch granules in popcorn are packed more tightly and the woody membranes between the layers are thiner and more easily ruptured. Heat causes the water that is in the starch to expand, the external envelope is burst open and the grain turns inside out, becoming fifteen times its original size or more and showing the pretty white starch outside.

That is the reason why popcorn pops.

The best popcorn is the light-yellow kind with small pointed grains. There is hardly a farm in the west that does not have its patch of popcorn for home consumption, but nearly all of the popcorn raised for market is produced in New England. A story is told of a Massachusetts farmer who had a barn half filled with popcorn newly harvested and "shucked." The building caught fire, the popcorn popped and an enormous wave of it rolled down hill, covering up the farm house so that only the chimneys were to be seen, and the family had to be dug out by the neighbors with snow shovels. At present the business of manufacturing buttered popcorn is conducted on a vast scale in Chicago and elsewhere, millions of packages of it being distributed for sale all over the United States.—Washington Star.

NERVOUS EXHAUSTION.

Extract from a Lecture by Dr. J. H. Kellogg, of the Battle Creek Sanitarium.

A great many ladies suffer from nervous exhaustion resulting from the demands made upon them of fashionable society. The various rounds of fashionable dissipations which "society" prescribes is a constant source of nervous prostration among its devotees. Nervous prostration may be brought on by lack of sufficient sleep, or by exhausting the nervous system through excessive emotional excitement of one kind or another. It should be remembered that nervous prostration is a symptom, not a disease, and at the outset it may be quickly cured by removing the cause.

The reading of exciting fictitious literature is a frequent cause of nervous prostration. If a person thinks that it is no harm to read a book of this character; if he says, "Here is a book of mere trash which requires no mental effort, and it is a mere pastime to read it," he is entirely mistaken. The reading of a book which is simply amusing and exciting, though often regarded as a source of diversion to the mind, may be really a source of nervous prostration through undue excitement of the emotional nature. The reader has his interest so thoroughly enlisted, and his sympathies too, that his brain becomes wearied through the excitement, and he fairly holds his breath with anxiety in following the thrilling scenes of the narrative. Tragic events are described in such a graphic way that his heart beats rapidly and he becomes so intently absorbed that he does not know anything which is transpiring around him; he hardly breathes and sits as motionless as a statue. You have all seen this and experienced it in yourselves, but you may not have realized what a great and needless expenditure of nervous energy it is. All useless expenditures of nervous vitality should be avoided if one wishes to maintain health, and one who is already an invalid certainly can not afford any such extravagance.—Reported by Helen L. Manning.

A DETROIT MIRACLE.

A Great Triumph for Canadian Medical Science.

Particulars of One of the Most Remarkable Cures on Record Described by the Detroit News—A Story Worth a Careful Perusal.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 29th, 1893.—A case has just come to light here, the particulars of which are published in the Evening News, which will be read with considerable interest by all Canadians, as it records the remarkable achievement of a Canadian medical discovery, which has already, in its own country, won great and enduring fame. At this added triumph there is no doubt the fellow countrymen of the proprietors will rejoice, as it sheds lustre on Canadian science. The story is told by the News as follows:

The following paragraph, which appeared in the News a short time ago, furnished the basis of this information—a case that was so wonderfully remarkable that it demanded further explanation. It is of sufficient importance to the News' readers to report it to them fully. It was so important then that it attracted considerable attention at the time. The following is the paragraph in question:

"C. B. Northrop, for 28 years one of the best known merchants on Woodward avenue, who was supposed to be dying last spring of locomotor ataxia, or creeping paralysis, has secured a new lease of life and returned to work at his store. The disease has always been supposed to be incurable, but Mr. Northrop's condition is greatly improved, and it looks now as if the grave would be cheated of its prey."

Since that time Mr. Northrop has steadily improved, not only in looks, but in condition, till he has regained his old-time strength.

It has been hinted to the writer of this article, who was acquainted with Mr. Northrop, that this miraculous change had been wrought by a very simple remedy called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. When asked about it Mr. Northrop fully verified the statement, and not only so, but he had taken pains to inform anyone who was suffering in a similar manner when he heard of any such case. Mr. Northrop was enthusiastic at the result in his own case of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It was a remedy that he had heard of after he had tried everything he could hope to give him relief. He had been in the care of the best physicians who did all they could to alleviate this terrible malady, but without any avail. He had given up hope, when a friend in Lockport, N. Y., wrote him of the case of a person there who had been cured in similar circumstances by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. The person cured at Lockport had obtained his information respecting Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from an article published in the Hamilton, Ont., Times. The case was called "The Hamilton Miracle" and told the story of a man in that city who, after almost incredible suffering, was pronounced by the most eminent physicians to be incurable and permanently disabled. He had spent hundreds of dollars in all sorts of treatment and appliances only to be told in the end that there was no hope for him, and that cure was impossible. The person alluded to (Mr. John Marshall, of 25 Little William St., Hamilton, Ont.) was a member of the Royal Templars of Temperance, and after having been pronounced permanently disabled and incurable by the physicians, was paid the $1,000 disability insurance provided by the order for its members in such cases. For years Mr. Marshall had been utterly helpless, and was barely able to drag himself around his house with the aid of crutches. His agonies were almost unbearable and life was a burden to him, when at last relief came. Some months after he had been paid the disability claim he heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and was induced to try them. The result was miraculous; almost from the outset an improvement was noticed, and in a few months the man whom medical experts had said was incurable, was going about the city healthier and stronger than before. Mr. Marshall was so well known in Hamilton that all the city newspapers wrote up his wonderful recovery in detail, and it was thus as before stated, that Mr. Northrop came into possession of the information that led to his equally marvelous recovery. One could scarcely conceive a case more hopeless than that of Mr. Northrop. His injury came about in this way: One day nearly four years ago, he stumbled and fell the complete length of a steep flight of stairs which were at the rear of his store. His head and spine were severely injured. He was picked up and taken to his home. Creeping paralysis very soon developed itself, and in spite of the most strenuous efforts of friends and physicians the terrible affliction fastened itself upon him. For nearly two years he was perfectly helpless. He could do nothing to support his strength in the least effort. He had to be wheeled about in an invalid's chair. He was weak, pale and fast sinking when his timely information came that veritably snatched his life from the jaws of death. Those, who at that time saw a feeble old man wheeled into his store on an invalid's chair, would not recognize the man now, so great is the change that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have wrought. When Mr. Northrop learned of the remedy that had cured Mr. Marshall in Hamilton, and the person in Lockport, he procured a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through Messrs. Bassett & L'Hommedieu, 95 Woodward avenue, and from the outset found an improvement. He faithfully adhered to the use of the remedy until now he is completely restored. Mr. Northrop declares that there can be no doubt as to Pink Pills being the cause of his restoration to health, as all other remedies and medical treatment left him in a condition rapidly going from bad to worse, until at last it was declared there was no hope for him and he was pronounced incurable. He was in this terrible condition when he began to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they have restored him to health.

Mr. Northrop was asked what was claimed for this wonderful remedy, and replied that he understood the proprietors claim it to be a blood builder and nerve restorer; supplying in a condensed form all the elements necessary to enrich the blood, restore shattered nerves and drive out disease. It is claimed by the proprietors that Pink Pills will cure paralysis, rheumatism, sciatica, palpitation of the heart, headache, and all diseases peculiar to females, loss of appetite, dizziness, sleeplessness, oss of memory, and all diseases arising from overwork, mental worry, loss of vital force, etc.

"I want to say," said Mr. Northrop, "that I don't have much faith in patent medicines, but I cannot say too much in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The proprietors, however, claim that they are not a patent medicine in the sense in which that term is used, but a highly scientific preparation, the result of years of careful study and experiment on the part of the proprietors, and the pills were successfully used in private practice for years before being placed for general sale. Mr. Northrop declares that he is a living example that there is nothing to equal these pills as a cure for nerve diseases. On inquiry the writer found that these pills were manufactured by Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schnectady, N. Y., and Brockville, Ont., and the pills are sold in boxes (never in bulk by the hundred), at 50 cents a box, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., from either above addresses. The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment with them comparatively inexpensive as compared with other remedies, or medical treatment. This case is one of the most remarkable on record, and as it is one right here in Detroit and not a thousand miles away, it can be easily verified. Mr. Northrop is very well known to the people of Detroit, and he says he is only too glad to testify of the marvelous good wrought in his case. He says he considers it his duty to help all who are similarly afflicted by any word he can say in behalf of the wonderful efficacy of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

A BUSY MAN.

Why the Tramp Was Obliged to Refuse Work.

Just as a Cass avenue man turned into his gate he met a tramp coming out.

"Here," said the gentleman, you're the very man I'm looking for."

"I hain't done nothing, sir," pleaded the tramp.

"Oh, I don't suppose you have. I don't imagine you ever did, but I want you to now."

"What is it, sir?" trembled the tramp.

"Will you do some work for me out there in the back yard right away?"

The wanderer's face lost its lines of care for he felt that he was safe.

"I'd love to, sir," he said, "love to the best in the world, but really I can't do it now, for I'm busy."

"Busy?" and the gentleman's surprise was manifest in his tone.

"Yes, sir; busy."

"Busy at what, I'd like to know?"

"Busy tryin' to git a bite, sir. I haven't had any thing to eat, since last night, and I've been to fifty houses. Your cook refused me not five minutes ago, and I've got to hustle er go hungry. I'm dead sorry, sir, but you'll have to get somebody else to work. Bye bye," and he shied around the corner and got away.—Detroit Free Press.

The August Wide Awake

Is a veritable vacation number, especially noticeable for short, practical papers on out-of-door doings: "How I Botanize," Annie Sawyer Downs; "Starboard and Port," Capt. Julius A. Palmer, Jr.; "Let's Have a Fire," Willis Boyd Allen; "How Not to Get Lost," Prof. Charles E. Fay; "Hints for Trampers," Charles M. Skinner; "How to Put Paddles on a Rowboat," Vesper L. George; and such summer articles as "Sport in the Water," by Alexander Black; "A Mountain Pageant," by Mrs. A. G. Lewis. There is a capital story of camping out, "French Leave," by Gertrude Adams; Margaret Sidney has a striking and dramatic story of life in the "Sky Country" of North Carolina, "Trypheny's Bicycle;" Robert Beverly Hale contributes "In a Thunderstorm" to the Fair Harvard Series of stories; Willis Boyd Allen has a characteristic story of life and adventure on an ocean steamer, "The Crimson Handkerchief," and the serials—Kirk Munroe's "The Coral Ship" and Kate Upson Clark's "That Mary Ann" are equally absorbing.

A FOOT-HOLD for Consumption is what you are offering, if your blood is impure. Consumption is simply Lung Scrofula. A scrofulous condition, with a slight cough or cold, is all that it needs to develop it.

But just as it depends upon the blood for its origin, so it depends upon the blood for its cure. The surest remedy for Scrofula in every form, the most effective blood-cleanser, flesh-builder, and strength-restorer that's known to medical science, is Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. For Consumption in all its earlier stages, and for Weak Lungs, Asthma, Severe Coughs, and all Bronchial, Throat, and Lung affections, that is the only remedy so unfailing that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back.

Clean your Straw Hat with Pearline.

Directions.

First brush out all the dirt possible. Then, with a sponge, wash the hat with the ordinary Pearline solution (in the proportion of a tablespoonful to a pail of water.) Steam it well over the nozzle of a kettle; rinse well with sponge and warm water; press into shape, and dry.

You can do all this at home at a cost of less than one penny. It's simple enough, if you have Pearline—but, with Pearline, every kind of washing and cleaning is simple.

Directions for the easiest way, on every package.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled; if your grocer sends you an imitation, do the honest thing—send it back. 341 JAMES PYLE, New York.

DELANO DIARY

—Call at Green's for an enlarged photograph of any photo you may have on buying $15.00 worth of goods.

—We met Riley Sturman and James Quinn, two of Franklin's oldest settlers and staunchest Democrats on Tuesday as they were in town during the showers. They inform us that they believe we are right when we say "Tariff is a Tax." Of course we are and the country we believe will bear us out in November.

—One of our River street merchants received a box of cheese, on Tuesday, and had it on the sidewalk in front of his place of business where quite a crowd collected who entered into a warm and lengthy discussion concerning the merits and demerits of brick, cream and other kinds of cheese, it appeared to be the verdict that this especial package was of the limberger sort when a small boy who was looking into the case exclaimed "Papa there's a mouse" Paterfamilias on looking where his son directed discovered the remains of a defunct member of the rodent family which exhaled sufficient odor to scent half a dozen boxes of limberger. The merchant disposed of the lot at wholesale and sent for some more not so highly scented.

–Talk about your non-partisan feeling among the Republicans in this village. Saturday nights' schoolmeeting was an example. With five men out of six already on the board, the President of the School Board attempted to run the annual meeting without organizing and as a majority of the small crowd present happened to be Republicans they had their own way. "Boss Reed" appointed two straight Republicans for tellers even, so things could be sure, and the Post Master was elected the sixth sound Republican on the Board. And as the Board had a few meetings previously elected a new Board of Teacher's Examiners, three good straight Republicans. The Public School in Delano is solid Republican to a man. How is that for partisan politics?

—The village council met on Monday evening, of last week, and held a session lasting until after midnight. Considerable lively discussion was had regarding streets, sidewalks, finances and other matters. Mayor Coolen made several speeches, roasting the village press in great shape, saying that nothing happens in the village but it is to be seen in the papers (that's what newspapers are for). The mayor also gave a scientific lecture on hygiene, bearing on water supply and disposition of garbage. He says, in Germany, people have wells 40 or 50 feet deep and near them holes, where the garbage and manuer is kept and prepared for hauling to the little farm that each villager has, not far off, and still the people are healthy and strong. The Mayor is getting to be quite an orator, something of a parliamentarian and believes that committees should attend to their duties.

—Our city council has arrived at the conclusion that Delano is growing, that her needs are more numerous, and that there is no money to spare from the village funds. Also that it requires time and patience to superintend the village affairs, that things are becoming so important as to demand a legal advisor, often, and a village Attorney is quite likely to be chosen soon. While the recent wet weather has filled up the old time creeks and ponds until even the village officer can, occasionally, see where a drain would be of advantage to the village. We would take this opportunity to warn the citizens that should they see a surveyor on our streets in the near future, not to be frightened and think it one of Edison's engineers locating his telephone to the moon but simply an ordinary man, establishing some much needed grades in our own beautiful village of Delano.

Democratic Caucus.

City Hall, Delano, July 26, 1892, meeting called to order by T. J. Catlin who read the call. M. A. O'Hair was elected chairman, T. J. Catlin, Secretary.

A motion was made to elect eight delegates one at the time by ballot to attend the county convention at Buffalo on Friday, the 29th. Carried.

Delegates were elected as follows: Charles Weise, F. J. Brandes, M. A. O'Hair, Simon Weldelee, T. J. Catlin, William Sturman, Jr. Joseph Brenner, and James Sherry.

On Motion Dr. Catlin was appointed a committee of one to procure and set a time for a meeting to organize a Democratic Club. Meeting adjourned.

Southern Sentiment.

From the Washington correspondent of the Clayton Enterprise, New Mexico we extract the following;

"As an illustration of the feeling on the other side of Mason and Dixon's line a few sentences from the speech of an ex-confederate at the decoration ceremonies on Monday at one of the cemeteries a few miles from Washington may be quoted. After other speeches Gen. W. G. Veal, commander of R. E. Lee Camp of Confederate Veterans Ft. Worth, Texas, was introduced as an ex-Confederate, who carried in his body five Yankee bullets. He said: "I am glad the South failed; I am glad the negro was freed and it was a great blessing to the South—and I am glad that we have the greatest government in the world.

I fought on the other side, but if you will come to Ft. Worth you will see the comrades of R. E. Lee Camp marching arm in arm, and the comrads of the two G. A. R. posts arm in arm, and together we lay our floral tributes on the graves of dead comrades. Down south the war has been over many a year, and if you hear any one say he wants to fight you may be sure he never smelt powder, and no man outside of a lunatic asylum wants slavery back. We are all abolitionists now. You forced us to be. It is all sentiment to say the government ought to have bought the slaves. Abolition fires had kindled opposition, and there was not money enough in the world when the war broke out.

There is no North, there is no South now; and I utter the sentiments of nine hundred and ninty nine out of every thousand men in the South when I say it."

HISTORICAL FACTS.

Pioneer Days In The Region North of Lake Minnetonka.

Written for the BUFFALO GAZETTE, by HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

INDIANS.

During several years following the treaty of 1851, by which the Indians transferred to the United States, thirty million acres of land in Iowa, Minnesota and Dakota, of which the lake Minnetonka and Crow River region was part, certain bands of the Sioux or Dakota Indians, continued to make hunting excursions unmolested through the settlements of the whites, being entertained at the homes of the latter, where the dusky sun of the forest bartered with his pale faced brother, game, buckskin or moccasin, for pork, flour, vegetables &c. During these years the tribe of Shakopee (Little Six) came the most frequent to western Hennepin and Wright counties, although the Winnebago and the Chippewa were to be seen occasionally. The latter only when he was in quest of a scalp of a Dakota his ancient enemy.

In May 1858 several Chippeways passed through vicinity of Long Lake on their return from a battle with the Sioux on the Minnesota River near Shakopee, they had some scalps and trophies of that engagement with them.

In the hunting excursions the Sioux came in considerable numbers, including their squaws and pappooses and making camps of several days or even weeks duration. These excursions were made during the winter seasons and the winters of 1858-9 and 1859-60, are remembered by old settlers as being accompained by the hunting excursions of Shakopee and his people. The camping places of Indians during these years being at the following places, viz: Lake Sarah on the premises now owned by W. W. Hall; and also at a point south of Lake Rebecca, near D. Chapmans premises.

Concerning these hunting operations Martin Conzet States: "I remember one morning that a party of twenty Indians passed my shanty, and returned in the evening with 18 deer one wolf and one raccoon. The Indians were then camped on Lake Sarah about 1858. Other camping places of the Sioux were: At a point about one half mile east of Crow River near northwest corner of Independence; At a point on south side of Pioneer creek opposite Job Moffat's premises now B. M. Mills'; At Mound City and other points on Lake Minnetonka, and lastly in December 1859 and January 1860, the camp consisted of Shakopee's Indians including the chief himself and also "Cut Nose" and a number of other Indians who afterwards became guilty of the most inhuman barbarities during the massacre of 1862.

During these hunting excursions the Indians had conducted themselves so peaceably that the idea of their ever becoming hostile and beginning warfare on the whites, was scarcely entertained by the average settler. The white people young and old visited their teepees, to which the Indians made no objections, apparently enjoying the visits. Cut Nose made himself quite agreeable to his white visitors, conversing entertainingly in his broken English which made him more interesting than the other Indians because they refused to talk or admit that they understood more than they pretended. So the matter of these Indians participating in the massacre of men women and children a few years hence, especially by the genial Shakopee and Cut Nose was not suspected by settlers of Hennepin and Wright at that time. These two Indians were guilty of the most revolting and attrocious crimes during the outbreak of 1862, and years following, for which they suffered the penalty of death on the scaffold.

During the winter of 1859-60 they made havoc of the deer. Their arms were muzzle loading rifles and shot guns, some of which were new and others old and abused by hard usage; and their method of hunting was a kind of skirmish drill organized on starting from camp in the morning. So with these weapons heavily charged with powder, bullet, or buckshot accampanied by long shaved pieces of wood used as gun rests in firing, they patrolled the country for deer, and with the great quantity of that game existing then, the shooting and slaughtering soon commenced. The shots were heavy and frequent, re-echoing through the forest as if a military battle was in process, much ammunition was wasted in the poor marksmanship displayed. It took many charges to kill a deer, the lack of skill was however made up by persistence. In a very short time the quantity of deer had become considerably reduced, and the rapid destruction of game became a matter of serious consideration to the white settlers.

So in January, 1850, two young men of the locality, John B. Wakefield and Selden Coleman, worked a ruse on the Indians camped at Long Lake, which proved to be a success in ridding them from that locality. These young men knowing the different methods of making moccasin employed by the Sioux and Chippeways in the matter of position of the seams, went to Shakopee's camp at Long Lake one evening and stated to some of the braves that during that day while they (Wakefield and Coleman) had been out hunting they had ran across peculiar moccasin tracks with certain impress of the seams in the snow, describing tracts of a Chippewa moccasin, without alluding to that race, which had the desired effect. They immediately exclaimed in their peculiar guttural tone of voice: Chippewa! Chippewa! And they went to work, forthwith, in that cold January night fortifying themselves by digging a circular hole into the earth to a depth of about four feet and about eight in diameter, and made low breastworks of a few poles covered with earth elswere about their camp and sent some of their braves out patrolling the surrouding country, looking out for the dreaded enemy the Chippeway. They cautiously but with an agitated movement and manner stealthily approached the windows of the settlers houses to see whether the enemy might be inside.

The next morning found Shakopee and his entire camp including even a sick Indian in his couch attached to poles and pony, over whom the medicine men had been powwowing for several days previous, on the march southward across Lake Minnetonka to their usual camping places on the Minnesota River. This was the last hunting excursion of the Indians through the country north of Lake Minnetonka.

Made Drowning a Study.

The discovery of the body of young Goldman, in Lake Harriet, verified the prediction made in these columns some days before, that Goldman's body would be found where it was. This prediction was made by J. B. Aiken, a gentleman of Breckenridge, who has made a special study of saving as applied to the case of persons apparently drowned. It is Mr Aitkin's belief that a great many more persons could be resuscitated than really are. He tells of cases of restored animation after the victim had lain in the water an hour or more. Many lives are lost he believes, through ignorance of what to do.—Minneapolis Times.

CORRESPONDENCE

ROCKFORD RECORDS.

The M. E. Church disposed of considerable ice cream last Saturday evening. Thev do not speak very complimentary of the person or persons who filled their dishes with sand.

Those who bathe in the river within the village limits, are compelled to don suitable clothing now. There has been considerable trouble about this of late.

Mr. Daziel, present landlord of the Centenial, intends to vacate the hotel and it has been rumored that he will run the Danforth House, at Delano and that Mr. Amos Kiuney will be proprietor here.

On Wednesday night the peaceful valley of the Crow was visited by the heaviest rain storm for many years. the cellars were flooded, culverts and bridges were washed away and great damage done to the crops, wheat and oats which were standing yesterday now lays flat. Farmers had considerable hay cut and most of this is damaged, all low places are flooded and the river has raised very rapidly since last night. During the storm Sam Thompson's barn was struck and Mr. Ludasher's house got some of the same element demolishing a chimney and cook stove.

There were numerous washouts on the Soo Road and trains delayed considerable.

Mr. Borril slipped and fell Wednesday on his way to Rockford and sustained severe injuries which may proove fatal, he was taken to Mr. G. Shelleys near where he fell and a doctor summoned.

There was another social dance in the G. A R. Hall Saturday evening the attendance seems to be increasing.

Miss Woodin visited her brother Frank a couple of days last week returning to St. Paul Saturday afternoon.

The Hanover stage found the bridges and fills out and had to return.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill.

For Governor.

DANIEL W. LAWLER, of St. Paul.

Tariff is a Tax.

Daniel W. Lawler says so.

WITH Grover Cleveland for President, Daniel W. Lawler for Governor, and Tariff Reform for the battle cry it looks as if Minnesota might wheel into line with several other western states and give a Democratic plurality if not a rousing majority.

Democratic Convention at Buffalo.

Speech of Mr. Michaels.

On Friday, July 29, after driving far out of the way on many occasions, on account of washouts and missing bridges, most of the delegates to the Democratic county convention assembled at the court house, in Buffalo, which with its fine and well kept grounds is the pride of all, and after shaking hands with and cordially greeting old acquaintances, and being introduced to the new delegates many of whom will cast their first Presidential vote next November for Cleveland and Stevenson and tariff reform, they were called to order by county chairman Quinn. After music by the Waverly Silver Cornet Band the call was read, and William Quinn elected Temporary Chairman and H. Tanner Secretary:

John Kelly moved that the chairman appoint three committees of five members each; one on credentials, one on permanent organization and one on resolutions:

Com. on Credentials John Kelly, W. H. Cutting, W. J. Walsh, Joseph Lydon, A. C. Riggs.

Com. on Permanent Organization J. C. Nugent, M. A. O'Hair, J. F. McDonell, Owen Dailey and F. J. Brandes.

Com. on Resolutions, H. Tanner, T. J. Catlin, J. D. Crandall, O. M. Loyd and J. C. Cochran.

Convention adjourned until 1 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Meeting called to order by chairman Quinn. Music, by Waverly Band.

Com. on Credentials report read and accepted giving delegates as follows, and asking that delegates present be allowed to cast the vote of the entire delegation from each town:

LIST OF DELEGATES.

Albion. Not represented.

Buffalo. J. O'Leary, W. H. Cutting, F. W. Gorman and W. H. Cochran.

Chatham. Not represented. (J. C. Nugent was elected by the Convention to represent this town)

Silver Creek.

Southside.

Stockholm.

Victor. David Jackson, O. M. Loyd, Charles Glanville and Alvin Patrick.

Woodland. E. J. Lydon, T. J. Coyne, Chas. O'Hara, Pat Powell and James Kennedy.

The bevy of young ladies and several young gentlemen present and chaperoned by Prof. Wharton, not being on the report were found to belong to the Civil Government class, of the Wright County Normal School.

Com. on Permanent Organization reported favorable to making the temporary organization the permanent organization. Report adopted.

Com. on Resolutions reported the following resolution:

WE, the Democratic party of Wright County in Convention assembled, desire to extend our hearty congratulations to the political and industrial interests of the country on the nomination of Grover Cleveland to the chief magistracy of the nation and Adlai E. Stephenson to the Vice-Presidency.

Report accepted.

S. A. Gordon moved that a committe of three be appointed by the chair to select 19 names for delegates to be presented to the Convention for their approval as delegates to the State Convention. An amendment to make it five, one from each commissioner district was accepted. John Kelly said "we came here not to delegate away our rights, but to elect delegates ourselves," and moved to amend the motion making it to go into committee of the whole and elect delegates by acclamation. The amendment was seconded and after some discussion put to a vote and lost. The motion to select one from each Commissioner district was then put, and carried.

The chairman then appointed as such committee, J. C. Nugent, H. C. Bull, J. F. McDonnell, T. J. Catlin and S. A. Gordon.

The Committee reported the following

DELEGATES TO STATE CONVENTION.

At large. William Quinn, T. J. Catlin, John O'Leary and A. C. Riggs.

1st district. Charles Mathews and Albert Westrup.

2nd district. J. H. Wendell, and W. H. Cutting.

3d dist. Charles Bugbee, M. A. O'Hair, E. J. Lydon, Simon Weldelee, and William Sturman, Jr.

4th. dist. J. F. McDonnell, H. C. Morneau, W. J. Walsh and Carl Luhman.

5th dist. D. Jackson and O. J. Maybusth.

Committee's report adopted.

H. C. Bull moved that those present at the State convention be authorized to cast the vote of the delegation.

Mr Michaels, of St. Paul was introduced to the convention and made a rattling good speech. The chairman not undestanding the name, introduced him as McMichaels.

He began by saying, "there is no Mc to my name it sounds too much like McKinley." I am here to speak in the place of a man better known than myself. The democrats always stood for simplicity and the masses, their opponents for class legislation. The opposition has been organized and reorganized several times since the democratic party came into existence. The special laws in our own state make quite a volumn while the general laws is a mere pamphlet each year. Special acts are granted for individuals and localities. Centralized power is always a strong goverument, a strong one for those who administer it. I have only contempt for the demagogue who cries out against those who obtain a competency honestly. But a short time ago one man commanded the flour market and caused poor people to pay 25 cents per hundred for flour another cornered pork and sent the price up to make himself rich. Several joined together and controlled the cotton crops. The conventions have met and chosen their candidates. There are two issues 1st whether we should be allowed a free ballot and a fair count. Republicans pledge to give Force bill and surround the ballot box with bayonets.

2nd. Tariff, when we come to tariff the democratic party is at home. Tariff is not a new question. 1st, in 1816, then in 1824 when Clay called it "American system" and was opposed by Daniel Webster, who said "the gentleman from Kentucky brings here the cast off clothing of Europe and folding them about him claims a new garment" from 1846 to 1861 we had a revenue basis for our tariff. Free trade except for revenue only. There was a larger proportional increase in wealth, credit didn't lower. We never sold a bond for a portion of a cent below par. The republicans in their haste did this. The Morrell tariff law came into existace after the war, increased tariff to protection. The author of the bill himself called it a war measure and said when it was over it must be reduced. We bore it and would again if there were war. Everything taxable was taxed percentage on manufactured articles was 2per cent, about. Telegraphs, railroads, national banks, bonds, checks, and other things were taxed. There was a tax placed on incomes over $600. Every thing in sight was taxed to pay the war debt. After the war was over the manufacturers were first to come before congress and make them see the justness of their claims for taking off the war tax from them and off went the tax on manufacturers. Then came the district income tax people, and established the justness of their claims and they were permitted to go untaxed further. 3rd came corporations Telegraph companies Railroad companies and other corporations and established the justness of their claims and the tax on corporations and established the justness of their claims. And the tax on corpor tions was repealed. Then the tax on National Banks was taken off.

And yet the tax on the masses is heavier today than ever before in the history of the country. Custom Houses collect duty of about 70 percent on an average on woolens. If I should stock up a store in Buffalo with $1,000 worth of woollens purchased in the old country when I got my goods to a port of entry I would have to pay $700, before I could bring them here. When I got them in Buffalo they would cost me $1,700. And I would figure my profits on the whole investment $1,000 cost and $700 tax and sell to you people accordingly, and out of whom would the tax come? Republicans don't believe in paying the tax but in letting the foreigner pay that. He dwelt some on tin plate, steel rails and other things that the protectionists call infant industries. His speech was well recieved, and he proved himself a good speaker. He wound up by believing that a good man would be nominated and elected governor Dan Lawler.

On motion of J. F. McDonnel, of Waverly, it was decided to hold the County Nominating Convention at Delano.

WE clip from a new and spicy paper recently started in Minneapolis and St. Paul, by Joseph Houser a young colored man who is a graduate of the Winona Normal School, the following:

"The Negro World predicts a grand political revolution among the Negro voters in all of the Northern states. Modern republicans as expounded and farthered by Ben Harrison, fostering a white man's republican party is an unloadsng process that challanges all the manhood that the black man is in possetion of. Will he kiss the hands that smite him? Will he beg to remain upon the outskirts of a party as lickspittles? The young men of the race should declare themselves and indicate by their vote next November that they are not the slaves of a party that has made their race the butt of ridicule ever since their enfranchisement.

FROM COUNTY ATTORNEY CUTTING we learn that the Monticello bridge question progressed as follows: The legistature of 1890 passed a general Law "(A) 20" appointing a committee to locate a site for a bridge within corporate limits of Village of Monticello, this Com. to enter into all contracts for work and materials. And all money was to be paid out on the order of the treasurer of that committee but they want to make no contracts until the plans and specifications were approved by the Secretary of War. And they were to make no contract whatevr until all the money was raised to complete the bridge; At this time no plains and specifications have been approved by the Secretary of War. And, although Monticello Village and the town of Big Lake, Sherburne County, have voted to issue bonds. for the bridge not one cent of money has been raised for this purpose, and Sherburne County refused to assist or appropriate money for this purpose. Wright County being authorized by special law to issue bonds in the sum not to exceed $6000. to assist in building this bridge. While none of the conditions, to wit: the approval of the Secretary of War; nor raising of the money, have been complied with, still the bridge committee have pretended to have let the contract to S. M. Hewitt & Co., without giving any other person an opportunity to bid on the work.

Congressional Convention.

The Congressional Convention was called to order by John Nugent and he was chosen Chairman and H. Tanner Secretary, when a committee of five consisting of Owen Daily, Charles Bugbee. D. Jackson, J. H. Wendell and H. Tanner, was selected to name delegates for the approved of the convention. The following were chosen:

On motion those present are to cast the vote of the delegation.

Tariff is a Tax and every honest man knows it to be so.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. July 29, 1892.

The World's Fair appropation is now struggling in the House with the intense heat and the obstructive tactics of those opposed to it. The first is driving some of its friends away, and the last is being engineered by Representative Outhwaite, of Ohio, who claims to have the pledges of fifty-one members to stay here until December, if necessary, to defeat the appropriation. A number of those who opposed the appropriation are opposed on principle to the filibustering against it after, by a vote of 118 to 107, the house had declared itself in favor of it, and few people believe that the filibusterers can succeed It is, of course, possible that a dead-lock may ensue and the session be indefinitely prolonged, but the impression is general that the contest will be short and that Congress will adjourn next week.

The republican Senate, feeling somewhat ashamed of not having taken any action on the House bills for the admission of Arizona and New Mexico to the Union, has adopted a resolution authorizing the committee on Territories to visit those Territories and Utah and Oklahoma during the recess in search of information. This is humbug. Senators can obtain no more information about those Territories by a personal visit than is already in their possession.

Mr Harrison has, I am informed by good authority, sent a confidential messenger to Andrew Carnegie imploring him to come to the rescue of the protective tariff and the republican party by ordering a settlement of the homestead strike. Mr. Harrison's man Carter who was at the White House this week told him that some arrangement must be made that would be satisfactory to the locked-out men, or orgainzed labor would hould the republican party responsible for the whole affair.

Senator Vest seldom fails to start the heavy roars of the republican menagerie when he opens his batteries, and his masterly, although hastily prepared, anwser to Senator Aldrich's long and carefully studied out defence of the republican policy of protecting favored classes at the expense of the masses, was no expection in that respect. He cited the Homestead carnage as proof of truthfullness of Senator Aldrich's statement that the most amicable relations existed between employers and employes in the United States, and to show that the Rhode Island Senator's remark about the agricultural Prosperity of the country was no nearer being true, Mr. Vest stated that the price of farm lands, which was the test of agricultural prosperity, had steadily gone down in Missouri and the other largely agricultural States, and the statement was greeted with roars of dissatisfaction from Padock, Davis, Pettigrew, and Allison, on the republican side. Mr. Vest then compelled Senator Allison to admit that he had made a speech once in which he said that Iowa farmers had not been benefited by the duty on wool, and the only explantion Allison could give for his change of front was that he had changed his mind. He made a strong point on the question of who pays the tariff tax by quoting a letter written to McKinley by an Irish car-driver in Washington, who had to pay $3 duty on a dozen pairs of socks sent to him by his mother in Ireland, saying that he had read McKinly's speeches stating that the tariff tax was paid by the foreigners, and asking to what foreign Goverment he should apply to have that $3 refunded. Will the Senator read Mr. McKinly's reply ?" asked Senator Pasco. "If it ever comes, I will, replied Mr. Vest.

Senator Carlisle replied to that portion of Senator Aldrich's speech which attempted to run into republican campaign material the facts brought out by the Senate committee, of which Aldrich was chairman and Carlisle and Harris the democratic members, in a manner which convicted the Rhode Islander of intense partisanship, not to give it a worse name.

In view of the criticism of the manner in which the examinations of National banks has been conducted under this administration, Mr. Harrison's selection of A. B. Hepburn, who has been the examiner of National banks for New York city, to be Comptroller of the Currency, vice Lacey resigned to become President of a Chicago National bank, is not regarded as a movement toward reform.

Representative Coombs, of new York is chairman of a sub-committee of the House Commerce committee, which has been authorized to investigate the Reading Railroad coal deal during the recess. The other members of the committee are Patterson, of Tennessee Lind, of Minnesota, Stoper, of Ohio, and Wise, of Virginia, ex officio, who is chairman of the Commerce committee.

Mr. Harrison might be excused for chuckling a little when Senator Quay and Cameron were compelled, by lack of support in the shape of votes, to withdraw their opposition to the confirmation of Mr. Shiras as Justice of the Supreme Court, thus acknowledging themselves to be knocked out.

ST. MICHAELS

Heavy rains have been frequent lately. At least a dozen culverts in this vicinity were washed ont. Temporary bridges are in use and night travel dangerous. Damage to streets and roads amounts to about $75. Mountain Creek nearly overflowed the culvert on Main St. South. John Lurz, Alex Dehmer, and J. C. Neiss labored over three hours to save the culvert from becoming obstructed by wood. Mr. Neiss came near being drawn through but by the united efforts of his companions was saved.

JUDGE PICKETT, of New Haven, Conn., has given notice that any person who employs such epithets in his presence as "Dago," "Sheeny," "Paddy," "Pigtail" and "Nigger," will be punished for contempt of court, the same as those who use indecent or profane language. He said the use of these words is the cause of many crimes committed out of court, and that he will not allow the use of them in a court-room.

REV. SAM SMALL last November got into a broil and had one of his teeth knocked out. He sued his assailant and assessed his damage at $5,000. As Sam has thirty-two teeth he thus estimates their value at $160,000. The jury thought that pretty high and took off one cipher and gave him $500, thus making the aggregate for Sam's teeth $16,000. This is liberal, as a full upper and lower set can be had in any market for $20.

DISPATCHES from Chili state that the influenza or grip epidemic is increasing there and that it has fatally attacked some persons of prominence. It may seem a little strange at first glance that the grip is raging in July, but when it is remembered that July weather in Chili is about the same as January weather with us it ceases to be strange. Chili is likely to have the epidemic for the next three months, but about the time we are experiencing it again she will be rid of it.

PRESIDENT HARRISON has proclaimed Friday, October 21, as the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America, and as a general holiday in the United States. This is pursuant to a joint resolution of the senate and house of representatives approved June 29. This change from October 12, which is often stated as the date of discovery by Columbus, is in harmony with the allowance made n other dates to accommodate them to the new style of reckoning by the Gregorian calendar. That is, October 21 this year the sun will be at the same distance from the equinox as it was October 12 in the year 1492.

AN owl that was a member, so to speak, of a wealthy, cultured and prominent family in New Haven, committed suicide by thrusting his head into a tank of water and holding it there till life was extinct. So far as known his suicidal tendency was not caused by unrequited love or by unsatisfied ambition. He enjoyed an enviable reputation and was regarded as the wisest of a race of birds that for centuries have been famed for their wisdom. He had hosts of friends and no enemies. Still, like many of the wise and good of all ages, he concluded that life was not worth living and so put an end to it.

SCIENTIFIC authorities in Europe are about equally divided on the question of whether railroads aid in the spreading of epidemic diseases, as cholera and yellow fever. At one time the diseases traveled by the slow-moving caravan, but now they go by express trains moving from forty to fifty miles an hour. Still it is acknowledged that they carry off fewer people than they did several centuries ago. One reason is that the telegraph puts cities on their guard. Another is that doctors and remedies are transported faster and means of combating diseases improved to a greater extent than those of spreading them.

INTERESTING NEWS COMPILATION.

FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS.

WEDNESDAY, July 27.—A bill was passed in the senate to facilitate the enforcement of the immigration and contract labor laws of the United States. The anti-option bill was discussed and the following nominations were confirmed: Watson A. Sperry, of Delaware, to be minister to Persia; Truxton Beale, of California, to be minister to Roumania, Servia and Greece, and A. Barton Hepburn, of New York, to be comptroller of the currency. A resolution permitting foreign exhibitors to bring into the United States skilled laborers from abroad in connection with the world's fair was passed. In the house a motion to concur in the $5,000,000 world's fair appropriation made by the senate for the world's fair was carried, 117 yeas, 105 nays.

THURSDAY, July 28.—In the senate a motion favorable to the anti-option bill was passed and the house resolution for final adjournment was referred to the appropriation committee. An eight-hour law as to public works of the United States and of the District of Columbia was passed. In the house a favorable report was made on a bill appropriating $50,000 for the relief of the southern flood sufferers. Filibustering tactics were pursued to defeat the world's fair appropriation and a motion to adjourn sine die on the 30th was passed.

FRIDAY, July 29.—Discussion of the Hale resolution as to the relative merits of the republican policy of "protection" and the democratic policy of "tariff for revenue only" occupied the entire day in the senate. In the house Mr. Wheeler, of Alabama, read extracts from a people's party campaign book in which the charge of drunkenness on the floor was made, and Mr. Watson, of Georgia, the author, will have a chance to submit his proof before an investigating committee. The remainder of the day was spent in filibustering over the world's fair amendment.

SATURDAY, July 30.—In the senate the anti-option bill went over until the next session in December. A bill was passed appropriating $1,000 to mark by a suitable column the birthplace of James Madison, fourth president of the United States, near Port Conway, Va. In the house no progress was made with the world's fair matter, and an adjournment was taken out of respect to the memory of Representative Craig.

WATSON'S CHARGES.

Testimony Being Taken Before the Special House Committee.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The special committee of the house to investigate Mr. Watson's charges that members were drunk during debate began taking testimony Saturday. Mr. Watson testified that he had seen two members reeling in the aisles during debate on the silver bill. He had seen a member drunk while talking on the Noyes-Rockwell election case.

In his opinion that speaker was in a maudlin state. Continuing, Mr. Watson said that in front of the speaker was a cup and saucer. The cup's contents were replenished several times, and it was noticeable that the more the member drank the more he wandered in his argument. Mr. Watson testified that he heard the speaker say to a page: "Bring me more of that stuff—that whisky."

Mr. Boatner said he did not notice anything of the kind. Messrs. Otis, White, Halverson, Butler and Clover said they had seen members intoxicated on the floor, and Miss Bessie A. Dwyer, reporter for the National Economist, testified that she noticed the speaker in the Noyes-Rockwell debate drunk, as described by Mr. Watson.

Mr. Watson interrupted and asked to be allowed to prove that there was a barroom in the basement and members were often seen drinking there. This was ruled out.

Representative Rockwell, of New York, testified that he was a contestee in the Rockwell-Noyes contested election case decided by the house some time ago. He was present during the discussion of the case in the house. Witness had not seen any members reeling on the floor during the present session. He saw no members whom he thought were appreciably drunk. The gentleman who made the remark: "Where was I at?" had made a speech in his behalf while the election case was in progress. He (witness) was associated with him a great deal before the speech was delivered assisting him. The man had worked hard and was considerably exhausted. He was, Mr. Rockwell said, in no sense intoxicated or under the influence of liquor. Witness saw the gentleman immediately after the speech and he was not in the least intoxicated.

Representative Oates, of Alabama, was the next witness. During his testimony it developed that Representative Cobb, of Alabam, was the person who had made the speech in the contested election case and who was the person charged with intoxication by Representative Watson.

Some question having arisen as to whether it was proper to allow the name to remain on the record, inasmuch as no other name had been given, Mr. Cobb remarked that whether his name was mentioned or not everybody knew who was meant. He appealed to the committee to let the matter proceed openly, and asked the committee to make a thorough, searching investigation, saying that he was not afraid of the result.

Mr. Oates said that while Mr. Cobb was speaking he appeared greatly exhausted, and some one sent him something to drink. The stimulant, he observed, had some effect on Mr. Cobb, enlivening his manner. Witness declared, however, that Mr. Cobb was not drunk. He had known him for twenty-seven years and never knew him to be drunk, although he took a drink sometimes. Adjourned.

SHE IS INSANE.

So Says the Jury in the Alice Mitchell Case—An Insane Asylum for the Murderess.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 1.—A large crowd was in attendance at the criminal court Saturday, it being announced that Judge J. J Dubose would deliver his charge to the jury in the famous case of Alice Mitchell, who murdered Freda Ward.

The defendant appeared calm and collected during the reading of the charge, the time occupied in its delivery being fifteen minutes, the question of the sanity or insanity of the prisoner at the time of the trial being the only question considered. The jury retired at 9:30 o'clock, and at 9:50 o'clock filed into the court room with the following verdict:

"We, the jury, find the defendant, Alice Mitchell, insane, and believe it would endanger the safety of the community to set her at liberty. M. C. Gallaway, foreman."

Alice Mitchell was then remanded to the custody of the sheriff and will be ordered placed in an insane asylum. Should she be released as sane at any time, she can be then placed upon trial, on the charge of murder, as she was only tried as to her mental soundness or unsoundness, the question as to her mental condition at the time of the commission of the homicide not being touched upon.

When the verdict was read by the clerk, a faint smile spread over the defendant's features, as if she had been confident of the jury's verdict throughout the entire trial. She was taken to jail, gayly chatting as she went, and will be sentenced to one of the state insane asylums.

They Must Be Orderly.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The president issued a proclamation commanding all persons engaged in resisting the laws of Wyoming and the process of the courts of the United States to cease such opposition and resistance and to disperse and retire peaceably to their respective abodes on or before Wednesday, the 3d of August.

Disaster to a Picnic Train.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 1.—The train hired by the Union stock yards switchmen of Chicago, who on Saturday had a picnic here at the National park, was wrecked at 11:30 a. m. in the union depot. The train was run in two sections, the first arriving a quarter of an hour ahead of the other. Section No. 1 was still standing on the track, the excursionists having left the cars, when No. 2 came rushing into the depot at such a rate of speed as to render the engineer unable to stop it, and it crashed into No. 1, telescoping the rear coach, and badly smashing two others. One passenger on No. 2 was killed and eight others badly hurt.

Berry Pickers Killed.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Aug. 1.—A peculiar accident happened 1 mile west of MacMillan on the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railway Saturday afternoon. For a cause unkown two coaches of the passenger train left the rails while the train was running about 20 miles an hour and toppled over. Mrs. Lyons and the son of a man named McMillan, who were picking berries by the roadside, were caught under the falling cars and received fatal injuries. Strangest of all, none of the passengers were injured beyond slight bruises and scratches, though the coaches were badly wrecked.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Little Has Been Accomplished Save the Passing of Appropriation Bills.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The future compiler of the official history of the laws of the United States will not need much space in which to inscribe the really important laws enacted in the first session of the Fifty-second congress, now ready to close as soon as the world's fair matter is out of the way. The session drawing to a close has not been remarkable for its actual accomplishments so far as respects large legislation.

Efforts more or less vigorous have been made to pass through both houses of congress bills dealing with questions that occupy a large share of public attention, but these, with a single exception, have failed of accomplishment. The sole measure of the first class in importance, not counting the appropriation bills which have become a law, is the Chinese exclusion bill, and political expediency had much to do with its rapid congressional progress. This bill, the Inman registry bill, the Black Hawk and Seminole Indian wars pension bill, the eight-hour bill, the bill to enable the president to enforce reciprocal canal arrangements with Canada, the army nurse bill, the intermediate pension bill and the bill to increase the pay of life savers are about the only measures of much general interest enacted into law.

Free silver, the tariff, the anti-options bill, retrenchment of appropriations and a $5,000,000 loan to the world's fair have been the live topics of the session. The first three subjects have been killed, at least until after the election, while the last is still before congress.

The house passed approximately 475 bills, of which 284 were passed by the senate and sent to the president. Of the bills passed by the house 220 were public bills, including measures relating to the District of Columbia; 151 private pension bills; 48 bills to remove charges of desertion, and 41 private bills of a miscellaneous character.

The senate passed 691 bills, only 113 of which succeeded in running the gauntlet of the house and reaching the president. Two of the latter number the president vetoed, viz., the bill to send the famous McGarrahan claim to the court of claims for adjudication and a bill to amend the court of appeals act. Three bills the president permitted to become laws without his signature.

The total number of bills and joint resolutions introduced in the house was 9,835, and in the senate 3,604. In the house 2,106 reports were made on bills, and in the senate 1,097 written reports were made, no notice being paid to unwritten reports.

The Behring sea trouble with Great Britain was the ugliest complication the senate had to consider behind closed doors, and a peaceful solution of it was found in its reference to an arbitration commission. The Chilian muddle also occupied some of the senate's attention in executive session.

LEO ON COLUMBUS.

The Pope Issues an Encyclical Eulogizing the Work of the Great Discoverer, and Fixing a Date on Which the Faithful May Honor His Memory.

ROME, Aug. 1.—Pope Leo XIII. has issued a letter on the observances of the Columbus centennary, addressed to the bishops of Spain, Italy and America, in which he says, among other things:

"From the end of the fifteenth century, since a man from Liguira first landed under the auspices of God on the trans-Atlantic shores, humanity has been strongly inclined to celebrate with gratitude the recollection of this event. It would certainly not be an easy matter to find a more worthy cause to touch their hearts and inflame their zeal. The event in effect is such in itself that no other epoch has seen a grander and more beautiful one accomplished by man. As to him who accomplished it, there are few who can be compared to him in greatness of soul and genius.

"By this work a new world flashed forth from the ocean, thousands upon thousands of mortals returned to the common society of the human race, led from their barbarous life to peacefulness and civilization and—which is of much more importance — recalled from perdition to eternal life by the bestowal of the gifts which Jesus Christ brought to the world. Europe, astonished alike by the novelty and the prodigiousness of this unexpected event, understood little by little, in due course of time, what she owed to Columbus, when by sending colonies to America, by frequent communications, by exchange of services, by the resources confided to the sea and received in return, there was discovered an accession of the most favorable kind possible to the knowledge of nature, to the reciprocal abundance of riches, with the result that the prestige of Europe increased enormously.

"Therefore it would not be fitting amid these numerous testimonials of honor and in these concerts of felicitations that the church should maintain complete silence, since, in accordance with her character and her institution, she willingly approves and endeavors to favor all that appears, wherever it is, to be worthy of honor and praise.

"In order to celebrate worthily and in a manner suitable to the truth of the facts the solemn anniversary of Columbus, the sacredness of religion must be united to the splendor of the civil pomp.

"We decree to this effect: That the day of October 12, or the following Sunday, if the respective diocesan bishops judge it to be opportune, that after the office of the day the solemn mass of the most holy trinity shall be celebrated in the cathedral and collegiate churches of Spain, Italy and the two Americas. In addition to these countries we hope that, upon the initiative of the bishops, as much may be done in the others, for it is fitting that all should concur in celebrating with piety and gratitude an event which has been profitable to all.

"In the meanwhile, as a pledge of the celestial favors and in testimony of our fraternal good will, we affectionately accord in the Lord the apostolic benediction to you, venerable brothers, to your clergy and to your people.

"Given at Rome, near St. Peters, July 16, of the year 1892, the fifteenth of our pontificate.

"LEO XIII, Pope."

DRIVEN INTO THE MUD.

Terrible Death of Prof. Edward Hope, the Aeronaut, at St. Paul.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 1.—Prof. Edward Hope, the balloonist, met instant death at Inver grove in a peculiar manner Sunday afternoon. After his balloon had gone up about half a mile it began to drift rapidly toward the Mississippi before a west wind. Becoming alarmed, Hope cut away his parachute and began to descend. The machine worked badly, however, and he dropped to the earth like a shot. He fell in a slough and was driven 12 feet into the soft mud. It required nearly an hour to dig his body out.

Met a Violent Death.

ST. MARY'S, O., Aug. 1.—A terrific explosion of nitro-glycerine occurred near Fort Henry, Mercer county, in which John Taylor, an old well shooter, was blown to pieces. He was on his way to shoot a well on the Kinzie farm, when the charge he carried on the buckboard went off with a concussion that shook the earth for miles. The wagon and horses were blown into fragments, while all that was left of Taylor was a few pieces of flesh which were gathered up in a basket. A deep hole marks the place where the explosion occurred.

THE REPUBLICANS.

KNUTE NELSON NOMINATED.

The Minnesota Republican State Convention Meets in St. Paul and Nominates Candidates.

For Gov.—KNUTE NELSON, Douglass.
For Lt. Gov.—D. M. CLOUGH, Hennepin.
Sec. State—F. P. BROWN, Faribault.
Treasurer—JOSEPH BOBLETER, Brown.
Atty. Gen.—H. W. CHILD, Ramsey.
Judges of the Supreme Court—
D. A. DICKENSON, Blue Earth.
WILLIAM MITCHELL, Winona.
C. E. VANDERBURGH, Hennepin.

It was nearly 2 o'clock of Friday morning when the Republican convention adjourned and the delegates left the People's church. It was a large convention, 709 delegates being seated.

Chairman Heartwole called the convention to order at noon of Thursday. Dr. S. G. Smith offered prayer. Mr. Bixby read the call, and as he was concluded L. P. Hunt of Mankato presented the name of Hon. Mark H. Dunnell of Owatonna for temporary chairman. There was not a dissenting voice raised against his election and the ex-congressman came forward amid a storm of applause. Gov. Barto of Sauk Center nominated A. B. Clinch of Anoka county for temporary secretary. His election was unanimous. On motion of S. A. Phillips of St. Louis county F. J. Chipman was elected an additional secretary. After appointing the usual committees the convention adjourned until 2 p. m.

On the re-assembling of the convention the committee on resolutions not being ready to report, speeches were made by W. H. Eustis, L. T. McCleary, O. D. Kinney and others. The committee on organization reported in favor of making the temporary organization permanent. The report was adopted. Chairman Simpson of the committee on resolutions presented their platform which was adopted.

The convention now being regularly organized and possessed of a platform, was ready to transact business. Nominations for governor were declared in order and the first to rise for the purpose of making a nominating speech was James A. Tawney of Winona. Mounting the platform, he gave a record of the private life and public services of Hon. Knute Nelson. S. G. Smith then arose and withdrew the name of ex-Gov. McGill.

Frank F. Davis of Hennepin seconded the nomination of Nelson. After his speech delegates rose in all parts of the hall to second the nomination of Mr. Nelson. W. R. Morris of Hennepin moved that the nomination be by acclamation and a rising vote. The chairman put the question, and everybody with the exception of several Ramsey county delegates rose and cheered, Nelson was nominated.

The chairman appointed a committee consisting of J. A. Tawney, ex-Gov. Barto and A. Anderson to notify Mr. Nelson and bring him to the hall, and after a short absence the committee returned, the applause welcoming. Mr. Nelson interrupting the nominations for secretary of state. He was escorted to the platform, and after the cheering had subsided he acknowledged the honor done him.

After the committee appointed to escort Mr. Nelson to the hall had retired nominations for lieutenant governor were declared to be in order, and Frank Nye of Minneapolis in a brief speech presented the name of David M. Clough of Minneapolis to the convention. Mr. Clough was nominated by a rising vote of the convention.

For secretary of state Warren J. Ives of McLeod was nominated by S. T. Henderson; H. E. Gibbons of Le Sueur was nominated by J. H. Rieger; George P. Johnson of Watonwan was nominated by Mr. McCallum; Capt. E. J. Osborne of Minneapolis by Mr. Peterson; Albert Berg of Chisago by R. C. Dunn and W. E. Joubert of Big Stone by Mr. Crossfield. Mr. Childs of Faribault rose amid cheers to nominate the Hon. F. P. Brown of Faribault, the present secretary of state. On the second ballot Brown received 387 votes and was declared nominated.

Col. Bobletter was nominated for state treasurer on the second ballot, receiving 407 votes. The balance of the ticket was completed as shown above.

PLATFORM.

The Republicans of Minnesota, through their delegates in convention assembled, do affirm and declare as follows:

We indorse and approve the platform of the Republican national convention adopted at Minneapolis June 10, 1892.

We indorse the wise, pure, and intensely American administration of President Harrison.

From its very infancy and for upwards of a quarter of a century, our state has been managed and guided by men and principles of the Republican party. During that period the state has grown from a mere outpost of scattered settlements to a commonwealth of 1,500,000 souls, prosperous and aggressive, and equal in moral, intellectual and commercial vigor to the best of the older states. Such a people, so prosperous and so growing, have not been badly governed. Our state administrations have been clean able and loyal to the best interests of the state.

Recognizing that in some states force and fraud are used to defeat the expression of the people, the Republicans of Minnesota are in favor of all wise means to secure to every citizen a free ballot and a fair count.

Trusts and combinations to control and unduly enhance the price of commodities are a great evil, the outgrowth of human cupidity, and exists in all civilized communities, regardless of all tariff laws. We are opposed to the same and are in favor of all proper legislation to eradicate and repress the evil. In this connection we refer with pride to the establishment and maintenance at the state prison at Stillwater of the manufacture of binding twine, which has been the means of protecting and defending our farmers against one of the great trusts and monopolies.

We believe in protecting the laboring man by all necessary and judicious legislation, and to this end we favor the enactment of suitable laws to protect the health, life and limb of all employes of transportation, mining and manufacturing companies while engaged in the service of such companies: (2) the establishment in some form of board or tribunals of conciliation and arbitration for the peaceful settlement of all disputes and disagreements between capital and labor touching wages, hours of labor and such questions pertaining to the safety and physical and moral well-being of the laborer; (3) the exclusion from our shores by suitable laws and regulations of all paupers, criminals, contract labor and other dangerous classes; and (4) the preservation of the public domain for actual and bona fide settlers under the homestead law.

Whenever the civil power, through its proper officers, is unable to preserve the peace and to properly protect life and property, and a resort to force becomes necessary, we believe that such forces, whether constabulary or military, should be resorted to and used only by the state. We regard the employment of armed forces by other than the proper authorities of the state as un-American and tending to promote lawlessness and a breach of the peace.

The farmers of this state, who constitute the chief element of our productive, wealth-creating population, are entitled to the cheapest and best facilities for storing, shipping and marketing their products, and to this end we favor such laws as will give them cheap, safe and easily obtainable elevator and warehouse facilities, and will furnish them promptly and without discrimination, at fair and reasonable rates, proper transportation facilities to all accessible markets.

Railroad, telegraph and telephone companies and all other corporations or individuals charged with and performing any public service or employment are amenable to public control, and we favor the enactment and enforcement of such laws as will compel them to render the best and most approved service at a fair, just and reasonable rate without discrimination as to persons or places.

Realizing the importance to the people of good public highways, we are in favor of the enactment of laws for the systematic improvement and maintenance of the same.

The Republicans of the state are heartily in favor of the protection of its forests so far as consistent with its general interest.

This convention approves and readopts the resolution passed by the last Republican state convention, urging upon congress the passage of the Washburn-Hatch anti-option bill.

Senator Tanney presented the following resolutions which were adopted:

Whereas the Republicans of Minnesota recognizing the conspicuous ability and fidelity of Senator Cushman K. Davis, have manifested substantial unanimity in demanding his re-election to the position he has so ably filled: and,

Whereas, notable precedents are on record for the nomination by state conventions of men who are evidently the popular choice for United States senator, thus making the recognized candidates of the party for that high office; Therefore,

Resolved, That this convention hereby presents the name of Cushman K. Davis as the chosen nominee and candidate of the Republican party of the State of Minnesota for re-election to United States senate by the legislature of 1893.

A LEGEND OF HEROISM.

The Vengeur Went Down But Would Not Surrender.

Legends based upon alleged acts of heroism die hard and, although it has been proved repeatedly that the soul-stirring story of the Vengeur is little more than a mere sailor's yarn, it is still as deeply rooted as ever in the French mind, says a Paris correspondent. As the story goes it tells us that during the memorable victory of Lord Howe over the French fleet off Ushant, in 1794, the frigate Vengeur, rather than surrender to the English, went down with the colors nailed to the mast and the crew singing the "Marseillaise" and crying "Viva la Liberte!" Whether we believe this legend or no, we owe its author a debt of gratitude, for that it has inspired the well-known artist, M. Pollpot, with the subject of the most attractive panorama ever shown in Paris. It is exhibited in the large building of the Champs Elysees, which formerly sheltered the panoramas of the Siege of Paris and the Battle of Solferino. The painter has chosen the moment when, at the close of a hard day's fighting, the French fleet, overpowered by Lord Howe's squadron, is doing its best to escape in the direction of Brest and when the sailors of the Vengeur are just going to their heroic death.

The frigate has settled down so far that only the guns on her main deck are available, and with these the artillerymen are firing a last feeble broadside at a stately British vessel of the line, from the decks of which shot and shell are being poured into the sinking ship. The ragged, wounded sailors of the Vengeur are in the act of nailing the tri-color flag to the stump of the mainmast, while an officer on the quarterdeck, raising his hat on the end of his sword, hurls defiance at a group of English marines on board his majesty's ship Brunswick. All round are the fleets of both nations, the vessels keeping up a running fight as they speed through the choppy sea. Many of the British men-of-war have already launched boats to pick up the survivors of the Vengeur, scores of whom have been washed off her decks and are clinging to floating spars. M. Philpot is to be congratulated on the admirable picture he has given us of this stirring scene.—N. Y. Recorder.

WITH DIRGE AND QUICKSTEP.

The Difference Between Going To and From a Funeral.

The jollity that prevails on many of the funeral trains returning from burials is something which adds a great deal of emphasis to the remark: "What a queer world this!" A Tribune man who has been among the passengers on many of these trains during the last twelve months has seen some emphatic contrasts in the deportment of the outgoing and incoming "friends of the deceased." This contrast is more usually found upon trains where the number of "friends" are made up of the day-laboring class and their families—people to whom a ride in steam cars to the wooded outskirts of the city always partakes more of the nature of a holiday excursion. The license which by some unwritten yet apparently well recognized law permits having a gay time by these home-bound, crape-bedecked passengers is lived up to with a rollicking spirit such as would do liberal justice to the merriest knot of picnickers that ever invaded a wooded dell.

And where's the harm?

Isn't the example for such a time on such an occasion set—to at least some extent—at every notable burial service that includes a band of music in connection with a procession?

Where is the man or woman, whatever the walk or rank in life, who hasn't heard a "funeral band" play a quickstep coming from the silent city? Indeed, it seems to be eminently the thing to do.

Is life so long that the hard working man can afford to spend all of his rarely acquired holidays in sackcloth and ashes? Within the last few days a train load of people whose big, rough hands and browned faces told that they were of the number who did the world's rough work, came in singing in mighty choruses, "Maggie Murphy's Home," "Annie Rooney," "Paddy Duffy's Cart," etc. Going the other way all was quiet, and the dullest observer could not have failed noting that the deportment was above reproach.

It is a way of the world—this world of dirges and quicksteps.—Chicago Tribune.

THE OL'-FASHIONED WAY.

You kin talk about yore anthems,
An' yore airias an' sich,
An' yore modern choir singin'
That you think so awful rich:
But you orter heerd us youngsters,
In the times now far away,
A-singin' o' the ol' tunes,
In the ol'-fashioned way.

There was some of us sung treble,
An' a few of us sung bass,
An' the tide o' song flowed smoothly,
With its 'comp'niment o' grace.
There was spirit in the music
An' a kinder solemn sway,
In singin' o' the ol' tunes
In the ol'-fashioned way.

The gals would lead the singin'
An' the boys would all jine in,
Till the volume of their voices
Battered down the walls o' sin,
An' I ust to tell the preacher
'Twas as good to sing as pray,
When the people sang the ol' tunes
In the ol'-fashioned way.

I remember oft o' standin'
In my homespun pantaloons—
On my face, the bronze an' freckles
Of the suns o' youthful Junes—
Thinkin' that no airthly singer
Ever chanted sich a lay
As the ol' tunes we was singin'
In the ol'-fashioned way.

How I long again to hear 'em
Flowin' forth from soul to soul!
With the treble high an' meller,
An' the bass's mighty roll;
But the times is very diff'rent.
An' the music heerd to-day,
Ain't the singin' o' the ol' tunes
In the ol'-fashioned way.

Little screechin' by a woman,
Little rumblin' by a man;
Then the organ's twcedle, twaddle,
Jest the empty space to span;
An' ef you should ever think it
'Tisn't proper fur to say
That you want to hear the ol' tunes
In the ol'-fashioned way.

But I think that some bright mornin'
When the toils of life are o'er
An' the sun of heav'n arisin'
Glads with light the happy shore,
I shall hear the angel chorus
In the realms of endless day
A singin' o' the ol' tunes
In the ol'-fashioned way.

"JEUNCE."

A Charcoal Sketch Drawn from Real Life.

"Miss Ma'y says please look at de waiter—it's a specimen of early repousse."

These words were addressed to me by the messenger who had just brought me a present of fruit from a friend. Before looking more particularly at the waiter, I looked at the deliverer of the message. He was a small negro whose height indicated that he was about eight years of age, but whose shrewd and serious face might have justified a claim to eighty years of human experience. He was literally as black as soot, and the color of his skin was startlingly brought out by the long white apron, whose snowy amplitude almost covered his entire person.

When he spoke he showed two enormous front teeth, as white as his apron. His face and hands and close-cropped wool were scrupulously neat, and he had altogether an air of decorum and self-possession that formed a strong contrast to the rest of his class.

"What did Miss Mary tell you to tell me?" I asked, for the sake of hearing the message repeated, and he said it over with the same exactness. Then he said good evening, and went softly away.

It was what I knew of the first estate of this little negro that made his present condition of mind and body so interesting to me. I had first heard of him as the victim of the most atrocious cruelties on the part of some negroes, not his parents, with whom the little black waif lived.

He had been whipped and cuffed and beaten, and absolutely burned with hot irons and struck with sharp instruments until some neighbor, hearing of these cruelties, brought the child into town and, telling his story, gave him up to the officers of the court to be disposed of.

The miserable little specimen, a mass of rags and scars and wounds, was then put up at the courthouse and offered to anyone who chose to take him home, to be bound to them until his coming of age.

Naturally, claimants were not very plentiful; but the pitiful tale was told to a lady whose kind heart it touched, and she took him. Her friends protested, and reminded her that the child, little as he was, had been declared an inveterate liar and thief.

But as these witnesses against him were the negroes who had treated him with such cruelty, she refused to take their evidence, or rather to share in their blame.

"I suppose," she said, "that he had to steal to escape starving; and then to lie to escape beating. And if you expect the mature spirituality which would have prevented these things from a child with his beginnings I think you are unreasonable. I am willing to try whether good treatment won't produce good conduct, just as bad treatment did bad conduct."

So she got from somewhere a suit of little clothes for him, a hap-hazard fit, and sent a colored woman to scrub the child thoroughly and put these clothes on him and bring him to her.

That evening he was ushered into her presence as she sat alone in her pretty drawing-room, and she told the maid who brought him to close the door and leave him with her.

The clothes were big enough for two boys of his size, and they made him look all the more pathetic as he stood rolling his big eyes and gazing at her with a mixture of defiance and terror.

"What is your name?" said Miss Mary.

"Jeunce," was the answer, ejected with a sort of spasmodic hiss from between his big front teeth.

"Jeunce? What is that name? Say it again."

"Jeunce," repeated the child.

"I suppose it must be Junius. I shall call you Junius. Well, Junius, come and shake hands with me."

The boy looked utterly astonished, but he put out his black atom of a paw into the white hand outstretched to him.

"Now, Junius," said Miss Mary, "I am going to take you to live with me, and I am going to be very good to you, and give you all you want to eat and nice clothes to wear, and a good, comfortable bed to sleep in, and take good care of you. But you've got to be a good boy, or I shall not keep you. You don't want to go back to Andy, that man that treated you so badly, do you?"

A look of terror came into the little black face that made her hasten to say:

"You need never go back to him, if you'll be a good child. I'll keep you always with me. You know what it is to be bad. Andy was bad, wasn't he?"

"*Orr*ful bad," said the child.

"What did he do? What made him bad?"

"He took somethin'," was the mysterious response.

"Took something? What did he take?"

"I fergets the name of it," said the child, scratching his head in perplexity.

"Was it money?"

"'Twarn't that."

"Was it food? or clothes?"

"'Twarn't none o' them," he said, his little face wrinkling with his anxiety to remember.

"Well, what was it? Can't you think?"

"'Twas—'twas—'twas—" he stammered, as if the word he sought was very near his mind; "'twas—"

"Well, what?"

"Whisky!" he exclaimed delightedly, his small face glowing with satisfaction at his mental conquest.

"Do you mean he stole it, or drank it?"

"He done steal it fuss, an' then he done drink it."

"Well, that was very wrong and wicked, and he'll get punished for it some of these days, I expect. Now I want to tell you two things that you'll get punished for if you ever do them; one is stealing and the other is lying.

"I see you know very well what they mean. I shall leave money and everything about the house where you are, but you're not to touch it. If you want money, come to me and I will give you some; and things to eat, too. And you are always to tell me the truth.

"If you tell me a story, or if you take anything that is not yours, you have got to be punished. Now, do you understand? I won't keep you with me if you do either of those things."

By putting a few more questions she saw that the child understood perfectly, and was quite responsible intellectually. So she asked him to give her a promise that he would never do either of these things. He gave it quite seriously.

"Shake hands again, Junius," she said in conclusion; and as he complied he raised his big, pathetic eyes and said:

"That ain't my name."

"Would you rather be called Jeunce?"

"Yes'm; that who I am—Jeunce." And he seemed so disconcerted by the strange new name that Miss Mary concluded to yield the point. It was evident that the change distressed him. So she said no more about it, and Jeunce he remained.

For awhile all went well. The child showed an aptitude to learn that was perfectly marvelous. He remembered and profited so well by Miss Mary's instructions that he soon grew to be a great comfort to her—waiting on her, buttoning her boots, running errands, and doing so intelligently all that was intrusted to him that he seemed an indispensable adjunct to the comfort of the house. He usually sat on a small hassock at one corner of the big fireplace, to be near at hand to bring a glass of water or to wait on Miss Mary, and when she was alone she often spent a part of each evening in teaching him.

He learned his letters at once, and showed surprising aptitude in remembering the catechism. Miss Mary never lost an opportunity of pointing a moral out of his lessons, and "Thou shalt not steal" was the commandment that he repeated with the greatest emphasis.

He walked to church behind her, carrying her books, and then went and sat on the back seat, going through the service with great propriety.

Miss Mary's friends laughed at her a great deal about her little protege, and predicted direful things of him; but she had settled down into an assured confidence in him, the awakening from which was sharp and sudden.

One afternoon she asked a friend to do a little shopping for her, and gave her for the purpose a purse containing five dollars. She happened to know that the article she wanted cost exactly two dollars, but she had not that amount in change.

The girl made the purchase for her, and brought back the parcel and the purse.

Miss Mary was entertaining visitors at the time, and laid the two articles on the table by her, thanking her friend, who immediately went away. Later, after the visitors were gone, Miss Mary went out, leaving Jeunce alone in the room with the pocketbook. She stayed several hours, and when she came back, happening to notice the pocketbook, she took it up and looked in it, expecting to find three dollars in change.

Instead of three dollars she found one. The unpleasant conviction that Jeunce's former propensities had come to the boy again forced itself upon her. She sat down and called the child to her.

"Jeunce," she said, "you must have taken the money out of my pocketbook. Tell me the truth, and I will not whip you."

"I ain't tetch no money, Miss Ma'y," said Jeunce, with a look of candid innocence. "I ain't had my han' on de pocketbook."

"Tell Milly to come to me," Miss Mary said.

The maid came and was closely interrogated. She had been in Miss Mary's service for many years, and her honesty was unimpeachable. She assured Miss Mary that no one had been in the room during her absence except Jeunce.

"That will do," said Miss Mary, and the maid retired.

"Now, Jeunce," proceeded Miss Mary, turning to the child, "I know you took that money. Every time you deny it you tell a wicked lie. If you will tell me what you have done with it and confess the truth, I will let you off this time. You needn't deny it, for I know you took it."

"Miss Ma'y, I 'clar I didn't," Jeunce began, with an expression so clear and innocent that his judge would have found it difficult to proceed with the sentence if the effrontery of the thing had not roused her indignation.

"Jeunce," she said, "don't you dare to deny it any more. I tell you you took that money, and every time you say you didn't you tell a wicked lie. Now tell me at once, what did you do with it? Tell me this minute—do you hear?"

"I—I—put it out in de barn," said Jeunce, timidly, at last.

"Then come and show me where it is," said Miss Mary, rising.

The little culprit followed her, and they walked in silence to the barn; and when they entered it Miss Mary ordered him to get the money. He began to search for it under the hay, but after quite a long time looked up and said:

"Miss Ma'y, I forgot. I put it in the greenhouse."

"Very well," said Miss Mary; "take me there and get it for me."

In the greenhouse the same thing happened—a long and fruitless search.

"Jeunce," said Miss Mary, "you have not told me the truth yet. I can't have a child that lies and steals in my house. I must send you away."

A pitiful look came into Jeunce's face, and he said, timidly: "Miss Ma'y, I love you."

This was too much for Miss Mary. She feared that in spite of herself she would soften, and the child's persistent denial was so bold and obstinate that she determined to be firm.

"I will give you one more chance," said Miss Mary, "and if you don't tell me this time I will have to whip you."

The child came so close to her that he could whisper in her ear, and in a frightened voice said:

"It's in the parlor."

Miss Mary thought she had got at the heart of the thing at last, and led the way quickly back to the house. But here the same experience was enacted. The search was fruitless.

"Go up into my room, Jeunce, and take off your jacket," she said. "I will come in a few minutes."

Jeunce immediately mounted the stairs; a pathetic little figure which Miss Mary resolutely turned her eyes away from. Then she went into the yard and broke a strong switch from a tree, and was returning resolutely to execute her threat when a servant came in at the gate.

"Miss Kate told me to give you this," she said, extending her hand. "She says she forgot to tell you when she gave your purse back that she borrowed two dollars out of it for herself, as she'd left her purse at home."

Miss Mary had only a confused recollection of what followed. She knew the switch was hastily thrown away, and she was quickly up in her own room, where she found Jeunce in the middle of the floor, looking very little without his coat and apron. What followed she has never told in detail, but from that day forward Jeunce was pampered beyond the lot of most children.

"To think," she says, "that I should have absolutely forced the child to admit a theft he never committed, and compel him to tell three stories!"

But he has had it more than made up to him since, for when he was ill with fever the next summer he was nursed and tended as if he had been a rich man's son, and it was funny to see the little black imp in the midst of the fair white linen, and quite a wonder, as some one said that he didn't smut the sheets!

The fastidious Milly was made to give him a hot bath twice a day, and he had jellies made for him, and flowers brought to him, and books read to him by the hour until he got well again, and took his place in the household as one of its most useful appendages.

Certainly his high ideal of truth was not impaired. Miss Mary dwelt so on her regret at having forced him into telling stories that he was immensely impressed by the importance of truth and used to come behind her and whisper a correction in her ear if she made the least deviation from exact accuracy of statement.

He always stood behind her chair at meals, and on one occasion, when there were guests to dinner, Miss Mary recommended the ham as of her own curing, and was startled by Jeunce's whispering solemnly in her ear:

"No, 'taint, Miss Ma'y. It come from de sto'."

Her mistake had been an unconscious one, but even such were not allowed to pass by this merciless champion of truth.

Jeunce is the comfort of her house now, and his punctilious accuracy may always be relied on. Miss Mary could probably give him a message to deliver in a foreign language, with successful results. Certainly he said "early specimen of repousse" as well as you or I could have done it.—Julia Magruder in Youth's Companion.

ASPHALT OF ANCIENT TIMES.

Used by Egyptians Thirty Centuries Ago—How It Evolves.

"This stuff called asphalt with which the streets are paved is very curious," said a scientist recently. "It was used in very ancient times. Egyptian buildings more than thirty centuries old are cemented with it, and it has been asserted that it was employed in the construction of the tower of Babel. One ingenious crank named D'Eyrinis wrote an elaborate essay one hundred and fifty years ago attempting to prove that Noah's ark was coated with asphalt to make it waterproof. The asphalt which covers the avenues of this city to-day was formed millions of years ago by the decomposition of vegetable matter beneath the surface of the earth. In the carboniferous epoch there were conditions of warmth and moisture which produced a luxuriance of vegetation. Plants, gigantic ferns being most common, grew at an astonishing rate, their decay being followed by generation after generation of their successors. Thus were formed vast beds of decomposed material, which became variously metamorphosed by chemical processes. According to the conditions governing they were transformed into deposits of coal, petroleum or bitumen, the last being what we call asphalt. Probably the vegetable beds which were changed into bitumen were laid down in the bottoms of rivers and lakes, where they were covered up by sand or clay and underwent the process of decomposition while moistened by water, but without contact with air. One spot where this occurred was in the neighborhood of the Dead sea, whence formerly great quantities of asphalt were obtained. Very little is got from there now, the most important source of supply in the world being a wonderful lake in Trinidad. Asphalt is often found combined with limestone—a very curious mixture of the vegetable and the mineral. It is believed that this has been brought about by hot vapors from decomposing vegetable beds passing through the porous rock and leaving the bitumen behind."—Washington Star.

—The Usual Tire.—Bilkins had been out on a long wheeling trip and when he returned an agent for bicycles called on him and was received by Mrs. B. After some preliminary talk the agent said: "Did he have a pneumatic tire?" "No," the good lady responded, "he had a five hundred-mile tire, and he hasn't been able to be out of bed since he got back."

"No woman can keep young who often loses her temper. When I feel that my temper is getting the better of me, I always get up and leave the room."

—George Gould didn't go to college; instead, he went into his father's office at the age of sixteen, and at twenty-eight he is now a six-millionaire in his own right. They desire to have it preserved in his memory, with many of his personal effects. Mr. Whitman left a number of unpublished manuscripts, both of prose and poetry, among them a poem, "Columbus," which was written on the coming exposition at Chicago.

—A good story has reached James Payn from Paris anent the anarchists. A friend of his went to dine at a smart restaurant, and was feeling rather dismayed at his extravagance, when he was reassured by seeing a very seedy-looking personage seated at a table near him. He was further calmed as to the prices by hearing this seedy person order a far better dinner than he himself had. But when the waiter presented the bill for payment this wreck of a man arose, with offended dignity, and exclaiming, "Je suis anarchist!" stalked proudly from the place, leaving the waiter bowing and smiling foolishly.

—"I have always taken pleasure in your presence," she said, as they were parting as friends and nothing more. "I beg your pardon," he said reflectively, "but do you mind spelling that last word?"—Vermont Watchman.

—Old Lady (to chemist)—"I want a box of canine pills." Chemist—"What's the matter with the dog." Old Lady (indignantly).—"I want you to know, sir, that my husband is a gentleman." Chemist puts up some quinine pills in profound silence."—Harper's Bazar.

—He Made the Best of It.—

The poet struggled in the August heat,
Writing a letter to his love sincere,
As the perspiration stained the sheet
He wrote: "Forgive this tear!"

—Why She Jumped.—Wagg—"It's too bad about that girl that jumped off the Washington monument, isn't it?" Woodenn—"Why, what did she jump off for?" "Why, you see she was very thin." "What had that to do with it?" "Why, she thought she'd come down plump."—Boston Courier.

—A suit had gone against the defendant, who arose and gave his opinion of the judgment and was fined ten dollars for contempt of court. A bill was handed to the clerk which proved to be twenty dollars. "I have no change," said the clerk, tendering it to the offender. "Never mind about the other ten dollars," was the retort. "Keep it; I'll take it out in contempt."—Black and White.

—Poor Human Nature.—Mr. Chugwater had been reading aloud to his family the details of the terrible tornado in Minnesota. "Is that all there is of it, Josiah?" asked Mrs. Chugwater. "Yes," he replied, laying the newspaper down. "I've read to you the whole story, names of the killed and wounded and all." "I know a great many people in Minnesota," rejoined Mrs. Chugwater, with a sigh of mild disappointment, "but none of those names sound familiar."—Chicago Tribune.

He Went to the Jeweler.

"Bessie," said the young man, pleadingly, "this is the fourth time I have called at your home since I saw you last. Is there any way by which I can always be sure of finding you in, or at least of always knowing where you are when I call for you?"

"You might ring me up, you know," responded the pretty telephone girl, looking dreamily at her shapely fingers.—Chicago Tribune.

The Favorite.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway is and always has been the popular line between St. Paul and Minneapolis and Milwaukee and Chicago.

Its road along the banks of the Mississippi from St. Paul to La Crosse, skirting also as it does the full length of beautiful Lake Pepin, gives to the traveler one of the most delightful and picturesque daylight and evening rides on this continent. From La Crosse east to Milwaukee and Chicago this road penetrates the garden of Wisconsin and touches with its mail line, the largest cities and towns in that State. Its road bed, train service and general equipment is absolutely unexcelled. The famous vestibuled limited train, with its electric lights, electric reading lamps, and elegant sleeping and dining car service, is not surpassed by any train in this country. If you are to take a trip call for the "Milwaukee"—the Government Fast Mail Line—and secure absolute comfort, speed and safety.

From Minneapolis and St. Paul to Milwaukee and Chicago, FOUR passenger trains each day.

From Minneapolis and St. Paul to Kansas City, TWO passenger trains each day.

From Minneapolis and St. Paul to St. Louis, TWO passenger trains each day.

You Should Brace Up

Whenever you feel that your general health is running down. It is good advice to "brace up," but not on "tanglefoot," "forty rod," "bitters" of innumerable names and composed of the Lord knows what, and it is not much better to fill your system with nauseating drugs even on a physician's prescription. A more agreeable tonic is a relaxation from the cares of business. If it is winter you can journey to Florida, the Gulf Coast or Southern California. In summer the lovely lakes of Minnesota or the grand mountain scenery and salubrious air of Colorado or Montana will give health and happiness. To reach any of these take "The Burlington Route"—buy your tickets over the Chicago, Burlington & Northern R. R. For full information on these matters address W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, C. CAUTION.—Beware of dealers substituting shoes without W. L. Douglas name and the price stamped on bottom. Such substitutions are fraudulent and subject to prosecution by law for obtaining money under false pretences.

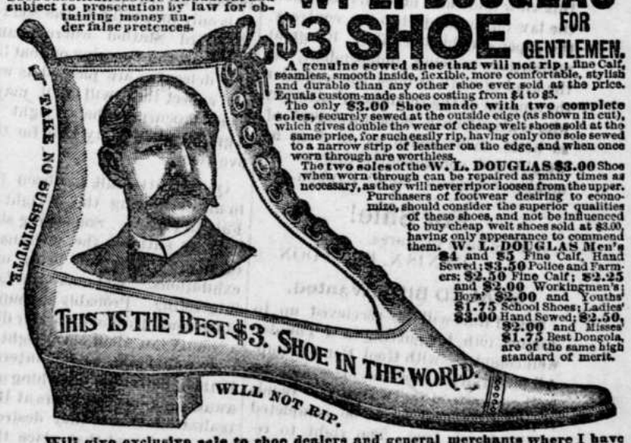
W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN.



A genuine sewed shoe that will not rip; fine Calf, seamless, smooth inside, flexible, more comfortable, stylish and durable than any other shoe ever sold at the price. Equals custom-made shoes costing from $4 to $5.

The only $3.00 Shoe made with two complete soles, securely sewed at the outside edge (as shown in cut), which gives double the wear of cheap welt shoes sold at the same price, for such easily rip, having only one sole sewed to a narrow strip of leather on the edge, and when once worn through are worthless.

The two soles of the W. L. DOUGLAS $3.00 Shoe when worn through can be repaired as many times as necessary, as they will never ripor loosen from the upper.

Purchasers of footwear desiring to economize, should consider the superior qualities of these shoes, and not be influenced to buy cheap welt shoes sold at $3.00, having only appearance to commend them. W. L. DOUGLAS Men's $4 and $3.5 Fine Calf, Hand Sewed; $3.50 Police and Farmers; $2.50 Fine Calf; $2.25 and $2.00 Workingmen's; Boys' $2.00 and Youths' $1.75 School Shoes; Ladies' $3.00 Hand Sewed; $2.50, $2.00 and Misses' $1.75 Best Dongola, are of the same high standard of merit.

Will give exclusive sale to shoe dealers and general merchants where I have no agents. Write for catalogue. If not for sale in your place send direct to Factory, stating kind, size and width wanted. Postage free. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

—W. D. Freeman is the leading horticulturalist in this part of the country. His black cap blackberries are fine.

—W. L. Terry and Frank Cramer are fully prepared to explain to all curious enough to ask, what "typelice" are.

—The mayor of Delano is hot in the collar because the village papers get and publish all the news.—St. Paul Daily News.

—The eight delegates from Franklin with one exception were present at the county convention held at Buffalo on Friday last week notwithstanding the high water and washouts.

—Some of our citizens favor the calling together, in the near future, of the citizens of Delano to see what can be done toward securing the County Fair. This is a move in the right direction.

—Mrs. Charles Ball met with quite a serious accident a few weeks since while carrying a tin dish with feed for the chickens she passed near a young colt which kicked at her striking her finger as it passed over the edge of the dish cutting the end completely off.

—The democratic county convention at Buffalo last week voted unanimously to instruct the county committee to call the next convention which will be the convention for nominating county officers, at Delano. Delano will welcome the convention in good style nd endeavor to make it pleasent for the Delegates.

—On Tuesday night of last week our part of the country was visited by one of the heaviest rains ever witnessed in this section. It knocked down the standing grain, ruined lots of hay carried away bridges and did much damage. The river was soon swolen to a great muddy stream, threatening to overflow its banks.

—The countenances of some of our worthy farmers who were merrily humming harvest tunes last week, on Wednesday morning of last week after the heavy rain, suddenly assumed elongated dimensions, and they changed their tune to one of plaintiff sorrow at the losses they felt sure they were called upon to bear. Some of them living in a strip north of town offered to sell their entire wheat crop at $4. per acre. Let us hope that they reap a better harvest than they expect.

—The Eagle seems rather partisan in its comments on the claimes made at the school meeting "that the president of the school board is not or can not be the moderator or presiding officer unless so chosen by the voters present." The Eagle mentions only the Democratic attorney as having taken this view and then proceeds to quote the law on the subject to the contrary, the paper should not after its great pretentions to being independent, do the kind of work or does she consider the opinion of the republican attorney who is also County Superintendent of so little consequence as to bear no weight and consequently deserve no mention? Explain Eagle! Explain.

F. H. Barth, of Watertown, was a GAZETTE caller on Tuesday on his way to the democratic State Convention.

On Tuesday Martin Conzet and Charley Carlson of Greenwood came in to compare notes on "Historical Facts".

Wm. Sturman, Jr., Simon Weldelee, M. A. O'Hair and Dr. Catlin attended the State Convention at Minneapolis this week.

W. W. Washburne, of Chatham, was a GAZETTE caller on Tuesday. He is one of the Wright County Republicans who does not believe in the unit rule.

County Cullings.

Buffalo had a big fire on Tnesday.

Several interesting communications were unavoidably crowded out this week.

The W. C. T. U. held a convention at Monticello last Friday and elected officers and transacted other business.

The Wayerley Tribune Announces to its patrons that it is now one year old and According to the state laws can publish legal notices.

The Howard Lake Herald claims it is hard work gathering locals now-a-days. Don't fall by the way brother it will be coalder by and by

We have it faom good Authority that Some of the ,,kid,, Republican who thought the "unit-rule" A fine thing and a splendid way for old Wright to make her mark in the convention have had an "eye opener and prefer in future that the "Unit-rule sink into oblivion before they do themelves.

In last weeks GAZETTE we ask for an answer to the question "how the tarrig on eggs, if a tax, has to be paid by the fellowswho live outside of Uncle Sam's domins while those within are repeating the benefit."

In this week's Eagle we find 'if the GAZETTE says the "Tarriff is a tax" that settles it and we must accept the inevitable?

Our County Attorney and County Commissioners don't seem to have the same kind of "specs". Leastwise they seem habitually to see many things differently. Which is it that is troubled with optical illusion the voters will be called upon to determine soon. These two eyes to our public treasury ought to be able to coardinate, and unless something is wrong they would work harmoniously.

County-seat Republicans already give it out that the Demoarats are missing it calling their convention at any other place than in Buffalo. Of course, from a county-seat point of view. But Delano Republicans are talking up bringing the next Republican convention here if possible. Let 'em come, our city council have given it out that any convention is welcome to the use of the hall, that sees fit to come.

Moving the convention to Delano seemed to meet the approval of the delegates present at Buffalo, on Friday. This is a change as they have for the past two decades been held at the county seat. The rail road facilities are such that Delano can be about as easily reached as any point in the county. It is only four miles to the Soo road at Rockford Station where teams can transport those coming on that line. If the delegates are pleased as we hope and expect they will be it may assist us in procuring the Wright County Agricultural Society Fair for the next five years.

Quite a little talk has been indulged in about moving the Wright County Fair to Delano. Something should be done to enthuse the citizens of our county a little and bring out more exhibitions. And make the fairs more interesting. Probably no county in the state could turn out a better display, at a county fair, than old Wright if everybody would take a lively interest in it. If the talk results in nothing more than awakening our neighbors at Howard to realization that if they desire to continue the fair at that place they must be up and doing it will have done some good. Delano is in the field as a bidder as good grounds, as good hotels, and as good a band, and her railroad facilities are a little better than any of her competitors. Delano is the biggest town.

HISTORICAL FACTS.

Pioneer Days In The Region North of Lake Minnetonka.

Written for the BUFFALO GAZETTE, by HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

INDIANS, CONTINUED.

In the "Facts of last week's issue the location of the Indians camp at Long Lake in December 1859 and Jan. 1860 was omitted. Shakopee and his band camped on that occasion on the present sight of Union Cemetery on Long Lake and it was from this camp that Shakopee and his band beat a hasty retreat in appehension of Chippeways. The place is sometimes yet referred to as Tee-pee Hill.

RAILROADS.

The first practical movement toward the location of a railroad through Hennepin and Wright counties was made by a corporation known as the Minnesota and Pacific R. R. Co. It was incorporated May 22, 1857. It controlled the franchises and land grant under act of Congress of March 3. 1857 for a route running from Stillwater via. St. Paul Minneapolis to the Bois Des Sioux River, and during 1857 it surveyed and made a location of its line and land grant, the latter including the odd numbered sections within a limit of six miles on either side of the line surveyed for the future R. R., the location of which through Hennepin and Wright counties, crossed the Mississippi at Minneapolis above the falls and ran north westerly to Crystal lake, where it took a westerly course on a route near the present location of the "Soo Line" to the east end of Lake Sarrah; from there it continued westerly by the southerly shores of Waverly and Howard lakes and north shore of Smith Lake, and crossing the western boundary of Wright about 4 miles north of the present village of Cokato.

This was one of the corporations which received aid from the State of Minnesota under the Five Million amendment under which arrangement some portions of its line near Minneopolis and St. Paul were graded, which operations ceased upon the depreciation of the state R. R. Bonds in the money markets during 1858-9. By act of Legislature of March 10th 1862, the franchises and land grant of the Minnesota and Pacific passed to the St. Paul and Pacific R. R. Co., and on February 6. 1864 the first division of the St. Paul and Pacific R. R. Co was organized which then came into possession of the franchises and land grant of what was then known as the Main Line of The First Div, of The St. P. & P. R.R. Co.

TOWNSHIP ORGANIZATIONS.

The general features of the law under which the townships were first organized still exists in the statutes of Minnesota to-day: one of which was the authority of the board of supervisors to lay out and discontinue township roads being a matter of great importance then. Aside from the few territorial and county roads opened across the county from Minneapolis there were no local roads laid out under the auspices of law. The settlers managed however to keep the zigzag roads, hurriedly opened by them through the wilderness in first settling on their lands, in a fairly passable condition and in a case of and obstruction by a fallen tree it was chopped off and removed, if it was not too large. Quite frequently however the settler preferred to pass around the wind fall with his ox team by lopping a few of the larger sapplings, letting the team worry with the smaller ones and brush, which as a rule did not add to the crookedness of the road. It merely varied the crooks. And in fact up to 1858 it was impossible for settlers to give much attention, excepting such as immediate necessity demanded to the matter of opening local roads. The clearing of land and combatting the effects of the grasshoppers and financial crash of 1857 required all their efforts.

Upon the organization of townships and the settlers clearings having then increased in acreage and products without further molestation from grasshoppers, the necessity for roads became apparent, and soon the boards of supervisors of the several towns were petitioned to lay out roads to connect with the through roads to Minneapolis, the nearest and only market for all kinds of farm products.

As frequently observed by the writer in the capicity of a surveyor in 1859 and years following the supervisors of the different townships found varied and difficult circumstances to contend with in establishing roads, on account of lakes, sloughs, marshes and other natural obstacles making it necessary to deviate from section or government subdivision lines in locating roads The questions of directness of road, a matter of public interest, or, of cutting a man's square quarter section into unshapely pieces, confronted the supervisors at that early day. It may be stated however while the unpleasant occurrences were somewhat frequent they were still exceptional cases, or to express it more quaintly; nearly every road laid out had its "kicker.

GINSENG.

So far as the writer has been able to learn, after some investigation the first effort to develope the ginseng trade in western Hennepin was made at Wayzata in 1858, by two parties from Virginia, namely; Edward Chilton and Joseph Chilton. They employed Benj. F. Keesling and John Bronk at $1.50 per day, each, to travel through forest with hoe and sack in quest of that herb. The latter parties while they knew ginseng when they saw it were not experts in discerning it amongst the numerous herbs growing in the "Big Woods". These two young men started out in the morning with a feeling constantly arising in their minds that thev were going more on a "Fools Errand" than on a practical mission, which impressions was not abated on their return in the evening after travelling over considerable ground amongst mosquitoes, with but four pounds of ginseng apiece. Their employers did not think so. They sent them out the next morning to travel over the same ground and on their return at evening they brought seven pounds each. They went out the third morning and returned with several pounds of ginsing.

These experiments were so satisfactory to the Chiltons that they immediately proceeded to open up a trade in that commodity at Wayzata, buying and curing it there, using some of the buildings on the premises of A. W. Day, and also some of the rooms of the latter's hotel for their operations. Thus during the latter part of the summer and fall of 1858 the ginsing commerce was commenced at Wayzata, which was followed in the spring of 1859 by extended operations in that line on the part of the Chiltons at Wayzata, and by others elsewhere, which proved to be, as it was then expressed, a "God Send" to the people of the Big Woods, under the financial pressure still existing in that region. Happily here was an article existing in great abundance in the country occupied by that depressed people which they could gather with ease and sell for the crash, and soon men, women and children were seen roaming through the woods hunting ginseng for which they received five cents per pound for the green and unwashed roots delivered at Wayzata. The "Dollar of the Dads" and the gold dollar were taken by the settler. The question of comparitive value of the two coins cutting no figure then, of which the settlers became posessed to a considerable extent much to their relief not only in the matter ot having a sufficient supply of the necessaries of life but in not being compelled to barter or exchange the few products of their clearing which they could scarcely spare from their household for other articles that they needed more. It may be here stated in this connection that in 1858 there was a good crop raised and many managed to have some products either of their own raising or those obtained from the woods as cranberries, wild plums and other fruits accompanied by game, venison mostly, to offer on the Minneapolis market, but it was difficult to make a sale for the cash. Exchanging or bartering for other goods was about the only method to dispose of products, which was unsatisfactory. The seller being obliged frequently to take such articles as he could get in exchange, without much choice as to their adaptability to the purposes. So it can be seen what a benefit the ginsing trade was to Minnesota at that time.

William Culkin, the Chairman of the Republican County Committee says the jangle over nominating a Congressman at Duluth "was about the prettiest little fight I ever saw" Fight! Then they did have a fight Sure enough, even though the gag-law in the shape of the unit rule was saddled onto the delegates before they went.

World's Fair Notes.

All of the great World's Fair buildings except two, are practically finished. A portion of the interior finishing and decorating is all that remains to be done on most of them. On the Manufacturers' building and Machinery Hall work is being pushed sixteen hours a day, and they are fast catching up with the other structures.

The Exposition authorities have appropriated $175,000 for the purpose of providing orchestra music for the World's Fair. Thev also set apart 12,500 for the entertainment of distinguished composers and orchestra leaders who have been invited.

In June more than 90,000 people, or a daily average of 3,100, visited the World's Fair grounds and paid 25 cents each to see the sights. The largest attendance on any one day was 12,038 on May 29.

The national convention of the Prohibition party passed a resolution favoring "a liberal appropriation by the general government for the World's Columbian Exposition, but only upon the condition that the sale of intoxicating liquor upon the grounds be prohibited, and that the Exposition be kept closed on the Sabbath day.

Director-General Davis has asked the State Department at Washington to make public the following ruling regarding the placarding of goods at the Exposition: "Foreign exhibitors in the World's Columbian Exposition will be permitted to state upon placards attached to their exhibits the prices at which said products will be sold at the place of manufacture, and also the prices in bond and out of bond, or exclusive of the customs duties in Chicago.

PLEASANTRIES.

MR. PETERS AND HIS CITY RELATIONS.

I don't know how it is but I don't seem to get on well,
With them o' relations that down in the city dwell—
Except when summer's comin', or when summer's really here;
Them times they sort o' treat me like as though they held me dear.
'Nd though July 'nd August I most generally sees
A half dozen of 'em here beneath my elium trees.
But when it comes to winter, when there's nothin' much to do,
'Nd I go down to see them in the town a week or two,
You'd think the way they look at me, they'd never heard my name,
Or that I'd brought upon them all some everlastin' shame.
Why, 'long about last New Years time, I happened in one night
When they was havin' dinner, and you'd thought I was a blight.
My cousin's wife she got as red as any healthy beet
When I declined some oyster cakes 'nd ast for solid meat,—
She turned her back on roast corn' beef 'nd made a meal on pie.
'Nd just because I ast a dude they had at that there meal,
If he was Mary Anne's young man, "Maree" began to squeal.
It ain't their hearts that's want'in —they're affectionate enough—
They show that when they come to me when city heat gets tough.
It's in the brain,—and, after all, I ain't a bit surprised
By just one week of city life I'm nearly paralyzed.
'Nd all their little queernesses had ought to be set down,
I think, to that unnat'ral life they lead down there in town.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

For Governor.
DANIEL W. LAWLER, of St. Paul.

Tariff is a Tax.

Daniel W. Lawler says so.

The Gazette says so.

WITH Grover Cleveland for President, Daniel W. Lawler for Governor. and Tariff Reform for the battle cry it looks as if Minnesota might wheel into line with several other western states and give a Democratic plurality if not a rousing majority.

Sixth District Congressman.

At the Democratic Congressional Convention held at Brainerd, on the 9th inst., W. R. Baldwin, of Duluth, was placed in nomination. This selection appears to suit St. Louis county, as they now have a chance to vote for a man whose interests are in their city, and as the late Republican convention resulted in such a row, to the discomfiture of Mr. Kendall, the Duluth man, Democrats are expecting a regular land slide to Mr. Baldwin, which, with the regular Democratic vote throughout the balance of the district will help elect a Democratic Congressman from the new Sixth District.

NEWSPAPERDOM in Delano, Wright county, is all agog over the burning issue of eggs. * * * * *

The Democratic organ, the GAZETTE, after incubating over the subject for a week hatches out a column editorial in which the entire history of the Minnesota hen and her fruit, from 1856 down to August, 1892, is exhausted. The GAZETTE defends the Democratic faith in free eggs. * * * *

It is evident that this is going to be a campaign principle, and when it comes to a discussion of economics and the tariff it is clear that Delano's local mind-moulders are no addled pated spring chickens. Discarding superannuated campaign arguments, they get right down to the fresh yelk of the business and something has to incubate.—Minneapolis Tribune.

OUR Republican friends appear to be having poor luck with their state ticket. First they headed it with the Hon. Knute Nelson, who allowing his Norwegian teachings to assert themselves in his tariff votes while in Congress, and who, proving himself, as the majority of the Norwegians in Minnesota have, to be demooratic, on this, the great issue of the campaign, was relegated to the shades of political oblivision and a successor nominated for his place in Congress, while he fattened at the corporation crib, as a railroad attorney, only to be hauled out now, because he is a Norwegian, and placed in nomination to save the g. o. p. from utter annihilation by drawing the entire Scandinavian vote of the state to him, because he is a native of their country, and not because he represents their views on protection, any more than does the Hon. C. K. Davis, who was instrumental in getting the tariff on binding twine reduced, and whom Mr. Nelson took occasion in his speech of acceptance to compliment. Not being satisfied that Mr. Nelson, with his free trade sentiments would be sure to bring the entire vote of these people, they went to work and crowded off from the electorial ticket Mr. F. L. McGhee. St. Paul's negro lawyer, possibly thinking the voters they were after would take him for Irish, to make room for the name of Prof. Carlson, of St. Peter, who, we understand, is a gentleman, and whose vote will probably be as sure, if elected, to be cast for President Harrison as would the ballott of F. L. McGhee. Of course the professor being Swede is expected to draw that nationality, but the 4,000 negro voters are apt to vote for Dan Lawler. and the Scandinavians are becoming so Americanized as to be able to cast their votes for Cleveland's electors, because they believe in his stand, if they see fit, even if they are American citizens decended from some other countryman than their own.

THIS morning's papers deny the rumor that Dr. A. A. Ames had shot his daughter and himself.

THE first session of the Fifty-second Congress adjourned last Friday evening. Her members will doubtless spend a few months campaigning.

WE have no tariff between individuals nor between towns, nor counties, nor even between states. Why then is it necessary to have a tariff between nations?

A MAN who will be "no mans man and wears no mans collar" is fit to be placed on the ticket with the man who is "to large to swallow and to heavy too carry" for Tammany, or any other clique.

DON'T you notice that the Republican party is filled with ex-confederates and all the grand old abolitionists are in the Democratic party. Won't you stop a minute and take your bearings? —Negro World.

J. ADAM BEDE is said to have followed, through mistake the Salvation Army Band, instead of the Brainerd Band we are not sure which is complimented the Salvation Band, the Brainerd Band or J. Adam Bede.

LAWLER'S alleged race for the governorship will be entirely fruitless. The advertising he is receiving as a brilliant young lawyer will prove a most potent tonic and stimulant to his practice. The Tribune does not begrudge its own contribution, for Mr. Lawler is said to be a most deserving young man.—Minneapolis Tribune.

THE New York Press in a recent is sue, pictures Grover Cleveland astride a big tiger which finds its weight too much for it to travel under, and labels it "Too big to swallow and too heavy to carry" This is the best reason they could give why western voters are for Grover, he will do what is right, and will not be coaxed nor forced to do otherwise.

THE Sixth Congressional District of Minnesota has as varried interests as any in the state. Agriculture, mining, pine lands. Railroads, waterways to the ocean and many other subjects of legislation are especially dear to her people. Its inhahitants are from almost every nation on the globe, and its territory extends from Delano to Duluth. Who will be more likely to understand her wants and look after them than Mayor Baldwin, of Duluth.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Aug. 5, 1892.

A democratic caucus of members of the House has adopted a compromise which it is hoped will put an end to the fillibustering on the World's Fair appropriation, but as there were several friends of the apppropriation and as many of its cpponents who refused to be bound and left the caucus, it is by no means certain. The compromise proposes to stike out the amendment to the Sundry Civil appropriation bill appropriating $5,000,000 for the fair and allowing a vote to be taken Saturday afternoon on a separate bill appropriating $2,500,000. The opponents of the appropriation say they can defeat this bill, but if they do it is predicted that the Senate will insist upon its amendment to the Sundry Civil bill being concurred in, and will refuse to allow adjournment to take place. The whole situation continues to be so full of "ifs" that it is folley to attempt to say in advance what will be the final result.

Southern democrats regard the result of the Alabama State election as the people's party movement in the South, so far as its controlling any electoral votes is concerned, and they think it will also aid in keeping a number of Congressional districts democratic that might have elected people's party men if that party had carried Alabama.

At this week's cabinet meeting the queston of when action should be taken under the recently enacted law, authorizing the president to retaliate upon Canadian vessles, was discussed, but as only the two Fosters and Attorney-General Miller were present no definite conclusion was arrived at.

All sorts of sensational stories have been current about the disagreement of the sub-committee which went to Homestead to investigate the strike in the Carnegie Mills on the report written by chairman Oates. There is nothing sensational about the facts. Chairman Oats prepared the report in the usual manner, and when it was read to the sub-committee every member agreed that it was a fair and impartial statement of what the committee had learned at Homestead, but some of the conclusions arrived at concerning organized labor were unsatis. factory to two democrats and one republican, making a majority of the sub committee, so the report was rejected by the sub-committee and referred to the full Judiciary committee for final action. If the full committee sustains the action of the sub-committee Mr. Oates says his report will be submitted to the House as a minority report, and a new majority report will be written by Representative Bynum, one of the dissenting democrats.

Tom Watson, of Georgia, made a miserable failure to prove his charge of drunkenness against members of the House. The only member he dared to name was Judge Cobb, of Alabama, and against his assertion that he believed him to have been intoxicated when he made a speech in the House was the positive statements of a score of prominent members that Mr. Cobb was not even in the slightest way under the influene of liquor when he made the speech referred to. Watson refused to name any other member to the investigating committee. What action the committee will take is not at this time known, but it is believed that a disinclination to feed Watson's craving for notoriety will prevent the committee taking any action that would result in allowing him to pose as a martyr. At one time it looked like sharp language between Representative Boatner of Louisiana, and Mr. Watson might result in a personal encounter between those gentlemen, outside of the committee room, but so far peace reigns.

After several prominent republican Senators, including Sherman and Hawley, had openly expressed their sympathy for the Carnegie Company, the Senate adopted a resolution providing for an investigation of the Homestead strike, and the following Senators were named as members of the committee: Gallinger, Peffer, Hansbrough, Felton, Sanders, White, and Hill. Some comment has been made because only two democrats were named for service on this committee.

Attorney-General Miller is said to be mad because instead of giving him the place on the bench of the Supreme Court which went to Mr. Shiras as a peace-offering to Mr. Blaine, to whose wife he is related Mr. Harrison gave the promise that he should have the first vacancy that occurs during his second term. Mr. Miller regards the probability of a second term as entirely too etherial to be satisfying, but he does not openly kick against the man who brought him from obscurity to the Attorney-General's office.

HISTORICAL FACTS.

Pioneer Days In The Region North of Lake Minnetonka.

Written for the BUFFALO GAZETTE, by HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

About 1856 a general store was opened in the village of Greenwood by J. M. Burt, which he carried on for some time, when he sold to A. H. Taisey who later sold the store to Thos. R. Briggs who closed out the stock in the fall of 1858. The first young ladies in Greenwood were Miss Ruth A. Powers daughter of J. F. Powers and Miss Taisey daughter of Matthew Taisey. The first marriage in Greenwood was that of James D. Young and Miss Ruth A. Powers occuring Sept. 17. 1827.

SETTLERS.

Other settlers came to Greenwood as follows: Carl Hafften and family 1857. His children were: Chas., dec'd, August, John, William, Louis, Albert, Robert, Emma, Frederick, Matilda, Henry and Mary;

A. J. Roberts, first 1857, went east, returned to Minnesota some years afterwards and settled permanently; Albert and Gil. Roberts were sons of A. J. Roberts; John Haffner and family in 1858, of which John Haffner hardware merchant now of Delano was a member; John Jacobs, in 1858; John O, Meara and wife, Miss F. Emory in 1859. Miss Sophlia Conzet daughter of Martin Conzet was the first white child born in the township of Greenwood; that event occurring Feb. 1860.

PUBLIC LANDS.

Between 1857 and 1861, the number of new settlers coming into western Hennepin and eastern Wright counties were limited owing partly to the depressed financial condition existing then and partly to the fact that the desirable lands of that locality were already claimed in quantities of 160 acres to each settler. While a number of these claims were pre-empted at that time many were held peacably by their filings. The land market went begging. Many tried to sell their lands and leave the country without success, so they were obliged to remain and make the best of their condition.

During the latter part of the summer of 1859 a proclamation was issued by President Buchanan bringing certain public lands in Minnesota including those in Hennepin and Wright counties, into market and requiring those who had not already pre-empted to proye up and pay for their lands at the rate of $1.25 per acre, before a certain date, about three months hence. This was indeed a gloomy outlook for those who up to this time had only been able to obtain a scant sustenance without being able to save anything for any other emergency. How to raise the means to pay for their lands in so short a time under their prospects, was an agonizing puzzle. Finally the president withdrew the lands in Hennepin, Wright and other counties temporarily which afforded relief in the way of giving the settler time to consider and to make efforts to raise the means to pay for his lands. One year later (1860) these lands were again brought into market and many settlers in compliance with the Presidents Procalamation, pre-empted, raising means by advances on the part of bankers or money lenders, on the good faith of the settler till he should prove up and obtain title. The pre-empter keeping his promise secured the advance by mortgaging his land after obtaining title. There were a few exceptional cases where parties had raised means within themselves to pay for their lands. A great number however failed to meet the requirements of the proclamation, and according to the general and special acts of Congress, and ruling of the general land office at Washington, those claims still remaining unpre-empted in even numbered sections became subject to private entry and those in odd numbered sections became R. R. lands. Some perhaps in hopes of obtaining the title to their claims under the future homestead act, which was then agitated in Congress and amongst the people, with a prospect ot becoming a law, may have delayed pre-empting. The result was that after a certain date specified in the proclamation for the sale of lands and through the operations of the land grant acts, unpre-empted land in even numbered sections became doubled in price, $2.50 per acre, and thse in odd number sections became R R. lands Those parties on even numbered sections being in possession of their land by occupation were not disturbed by any attempts to purchase those lands at the U. S. Land Office at Forest City. Many parties re-filed after the land sale. Those on odd numbered sections also remained undisturbed in their occupation, and the act of Legislation putting the St. Paul & Pacific R. R. Co, in possession of the franchises and land grant contained provisions allowing those parties who had failed to pre-empt to purchase the land from the R. R. Co, at $2.50 per acre, of which they availed themselves generally. On the passage of the homestead law, settlers were allowed to take 80 acres as a homestead and to purchase the other eighty at $2.50 per acre. The eighty acre homestead was as a rule taken by the claimant; the other 80 acres of the original pre-emption claim was in some instances paid for at $2.50 per acre by the pre-emption claimant but frequently he allowed it to be taken by a relative or friend under the homestead law, which had the effect to increase the number of settlers.

GREENWOOD.

In 1861 when the war of the rebellion commenced and Preident Lincoln issued his call for troops the communities of the Big Woods responded with alacrity. The "Wright County Rebels" and their neighbors on the east side of Crow River in Greenwood, Independence, Franklin and other towns hurried to Minneapolis to enter the U. S. service and aid in subjugating the "Southern Rebels". The frequent calls for troops during that four years war had a decimating effect on the new settlements. An old settler of Greenwood describes the situation thus; although every able bodied man of the town (Greenwood) had enlisted or been drafted and served in the war, and only the cripples were left, but in spite of this fact, the town was not able to fill its quota, for the reason that many of her citizens had taken bounty and were of course credited to other towns or cities. This condition was applicable to most of the Big Woods Townships as well as Greenwood.

The following is a list of those from Greenwood who served in the war of the Rebellion, viz;

ANNANDALE ANNALS.

Lots of rain and a few mosquitoes.

Some pieces of small grain are badly lodged. The richer the land in most cases the worse it is down.

An enthusiastic meeting was held at Colton's hall, August 4, the occasion being the formation of a Democratic Club which was organized with a membership of 106. The meeting was addressed by Messrs. Wendell and Cutting who each made convincing tariff speeches. One noticeable feature was Republicans, or rather people who had been Republicans embracing the Democratic tariff for revenue only religion.

THE bark Alice, from Auckland, New Zealand, which arrived in New York the other day, met June 18 an iceberg 400 feet high. June 19 more than 300 bergs were counted, and at noon the hull was inclosed with ice on all sides as far as the eye could see. They were imprisoned in ice until June 21.

THE following conversation was heard on the hotel piazza at a summer resort: "I knew that woman when she lived in an attic." "Yes, I can remember that time perfectly. It was when you were living in the basement of the same house." Then there was a silence, and the waves gossiping to the beach had it all to themselves.

THE death of Palo Alto caused genuine grief in San Francisco, where the famous stallion was as highly regarded as if he had been an eminent citizen. The attendants and others present when the great horse died were affected almost to tears. There was a painful silence for several minutes, unbroken until some one went to dispatch a cablegram to Senator Stanford in Switzerland. Palo Alto was fairly idolized by the senator, who loved the horse next to the pet university which he built to commemorate the untimely death of his son.

CHARLES F. BURELL of the United States census department says: "We have just completed the religions census, and find the total number of church members to be 20,000,000. These figures represent church members, not adherents. I cannot make a comparison of the religious growth, for it is fifty years since any religious census was taken; but you can rely on the figures being accurate. The statistics have been carefully gathered from pastors, then when proofs were prepared they were submitted to the pastors for verification."

BEDMINSTER, in Somerset county, N. J., boasts of a resident who has passed the 103d anniversary of her birth. It is Aunt Sarah Heath. Her maiden name was Cool, and she was born near Flemington. In 1809 she married Robert Heath. Her husband had previously erected a home in Mine Brook, Somerset county, and that cottage is still in a good state of preservation. The couple had two sons and two daughters, only one of whom, William, aged 75, is living. Mrs. Heath has five grandchildren, seventeen great-grandchildren and six great-great-grandchildren. Her memory is excellent.

THE first pensions ever granted by the United States were provided for in bills introduced in congress in April, 1778. On May 15, 1778, congress passed a bill granting that "all officers who shall serve to the close of the war shall receive half pay for seven years thereafter, and all privates shall secure a reward of $80." The same congress gave permission to South Carolina and Georgia to raise 3,000 troops of able bodied negroes for service, for whom congress agreed to pay $1,000 for every soldier; "provided that no bounty or pay be allowed said negroes," and that such negroes be emancipated and receive $50.

THE DEMOCRATS.

D. W. LAWLER FOR GOVERNOR.

The Minnesota Democrats Meet in Convention and Nominate a State and Electoral Ticket.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 4.—It was a few minutes after 12 o'clock yesterday when Chairman Campbell called the Minnesota Democratic convention to order. After a prayer by Rev. Wilkinson it was announced that Alfred Jacques of Duluth had been selected as temporary chairman, with John A. Johnson of St. Peter and B. J. Mulloney of Minneapolis as assistants. After appointing the committee on credentials the convention took a recess.

Upon reassembling the committee on credentials reported no contests and a list of delegates entitled to seats in the convention. The report was accepted, and on the committee's report the temporary organization was made permanent, when the convention stood finally organized.

A motion to nominate the three judges of the Supreme Court was defeated and a roll of counties was ordered called for the purpose of making nominations, and Aitkin, the first on the list, gave way to Ramsey amid cheers, and Judge C. E. Flandrau of St. Paul ascended the platform, and in a short speech nominated Daniel W Lawler of Ramsey for governor.

When the cheers died away after Judge Flandrau retired there were loud calls for Cyrus Wellington of Ramsey, and in response he made a fiery speech seconding the nomination of Mr. Lawler. After several other seconding speeches Mr. Lawler was by acclamation declared nominee of the Convention.

The committee on resolution submitted the report which was adopted and the convention adjourned until evening.

At 8:30 the delegates were again in their seats. Harry Hawkins of Carleton, was nominated for Lieutenant Governor by acclamation. The ticket was completed as follows:

Secretary of State—Peter Nelson of Goodhue.

Treasurer—Joseph Leicht of Winona.

Attorney General—John C. Nethaway of Washington.

Judges of the Supreme Court—Daniel Buck, Blue Earth; Thomas Canty Hennepin; William Mitchell, Winona.

Electors—First district, D. R. P. Hibbs, Albert Lea; Second, A. L. Sackett, St. Peter; Third, S. N. Jones, Gaylord; Fourth, J. T. Barron, Stillwater; Fifth, J. C. Oswald, Minneapolis; Sixth, William Quinn, Wright county; Seventh, Martin Shea, Otter Tail.

The chair appointed F. Nelson of Hennepin and R. A. Smith of Ramsey electors at large.

THE PLATFORM.

The Democrats of Minnesota gathered in delegate convention, mingle their rejoicing with that of their fellows in the nation that the earnest voices of the rank and file of the party was heard and obeyed by the national convention and found expression in the nomination of the able and courageous Cleveland for our leader, and in the bold, explicit declarations that Republican protection is a fraud, in proof of which we point to Homestead, where the militia of a state is keeping peace in a quarrel over the spoil between the real and supposed beneficiaries of protection.

We denounce the rapacious and conscienceless combination which has grown up in this state, with the connivance of Republican legislatures, between the elevator companies, the millers and the railroads, by which our grain markets have been monopolized and our farmers robbed of the fruits of their hard labors. We reaffirm our belief that this combination rests upon the fact that the railroads of this state have injured one of their prime functions, the provision of suitable means for handling grain, and have given the same over to the control of private parties, and we again declare our belief that the remedy, simple but efficient, lies in legislation requiring the railroads to resume this proper function, thus giving to every station a free and open market.

We recognize the great, conspicuous fact that the prosperity of our government rests upon labor, and that all legislation should be shaped, so far as possible, to relieve it from all unjust and oppressive burdens and to secure to it its just share of the benefit of our general prosperity.

We are opposed to state interference with parental rights and rights of conscience in the education of children as an infringement of the fundamental Democratic doctrine that the largest individual liberty consistent with the rights of others insures the highest type of citizenship and best government.

We again call the attention of voters to the manifest injustice and inequality of our tax laws, under which wealth easily evades its share of public burdens and compels moderate accumulations to bear the part it shirks, and we again invite the coming legislature to a serious consideration of the subject, to the end that a just, evenly-bearing system may be adopted.

The Democratic party has always been and is to-day the consistent opponent of all legislation the result of which is to create law-made wealth which impoverishes the poor and those of moderate means in order to enrich the few. We condemn all use of the taxing powers for this purpose. We call the attention of the people of the state to the fact that mineral wealth at the northern part of this state is not bearing its just share of the public burdens. The non-resident millionaires who own iron mines whose value is, at a moderate estimate, $20,000,000, under our present statutes pay less than $9,000 per annum in taxes. In exchange for the votes of 2,000 employes, coerced into voting the Republican ticket, the Republican party has covenanted to perpetuate this system and to deliver to these men the government of the counties of the state.

We demand that this condition of things be rectified. We denounce all bounties and exemptions and demand that all taxes to be raised in this state shall be as nearly equal as may be, and that all property on which taxes are to be levied shall have a cash valuation and be equalized and uniform, and we call upon all good citizens, without distinction to party, to join with us in defeating the proposed constitutional amendment, known as chapter 2, of the General Laws of 1891, to be voted upon this fall, which seeks to perpetrate this unjust system of taxation, and while it pretends to levy taxes upon sleeping car and other similar corporations, it repeals the existing constitutional tax of 3 per cent upon gross earnings of our railroads, now realizing for the state a revenue of $725,000 and annually increasing, and places the rate of taxation upon the earnings of such railroads at the caprice of the legislature.

We especially call attention to and denounce the form of the ballot for the proposed amendment to be voted on at the coming election, which is known as "Senate File No. 124," as being especially designed to mislead the voters, and we call upon all honest citizens to assist in rebuking such trickery.

Resolved, That we are in favor of a radical change in the laws of this state, and demand such legislation as will provide for intelligent and economical supervision of the building and maintenance of our country roads.

That for the better security of our government we recommend an amendment to the federal constitution extending the presidential term to six years and making a president ineligible for re-election.

We favor also the election of president and vice-president and senators of the United States by the direct vote of the people.

[The following resolution was introduced after the platform was adopted, and it was also adopted by the convention:]

Resolved, Believing the contract system in force in the state penitentiary to be wrong in principle, prejudicial to the interests of the state, the welfare of the convicts and an injustice to honest labor, we demand its discontinuance at the expiration of the present contracts, and that the legislature prohibit any future contracts and provide for the employment by the state and for the state of all convicts and persons confined in the penal and reformatory institutions of this state.

The chairman then announced the new state central committee as follows:

Owen Austin, Hastings; Dan Aberle, St. Paul; Chris H. Heffron, Rochester; John Coleman, Anoka; R. O. Craig, Janesville; J. C. Wise, Mankato; C. A. Moody, Benton; George DuToit, Chaska, M. Mullen, New Ulm; J. D. Sheedy, Austin; Morris Thomas, Duluth; J. M. Spicer, Willmar; James Manning, Washington; Fourteenth, James D. O'Brien, Crookston; Fifteenth, Werner Hempstead Brainerd; Sixteenth, Charles Cater, Grant county; Hennepin county, Lars M. Rand; Ramsey county, Crawford Livingston.

A LESSON IN CIVILITY.

"Getting Even" With an Unobliging Street-Car Conductor.

The street-car conductor was inclined to be disagreeable and unaccommodating, and only got what he deserved. He had some bills, but when the passenger tendered him a five-dollar bill, apologizing for so doing, he carefully counted out four dollars and ninety-five cents in small change and handed it over. There were two or three quarters, a few dimes, twenty-five or thirty pennies and any number of nickels.

Of course the passenger protested.

"I don't mind taking some of your small change," he said, "but I don't want it all. You have something larger."

"You can take that or nothing," retorted the conductor. "It's all you'll get."

Now that didn't tend to make the passenger feel kindly toward the conductor, but he apparently had no redress except to report him for incivility. A moment later, however, he recalled that the road sold tickets and he smiled.

The conductor didn't wish to sell any tickets to this particular passenger, but he had to. He hesitated, but a prompt threat to report him induced him to sell twelve tickets for twenty-five pennies and five nickels.

Then a man sitting next to the passenger leaned over and said:

"I need some tickets. I'll give you half a dollar for those."

He got them and then the conductor was called back.

"I want some more tickets," said the passenger.

The conductor grew red in the face as he saw everyone in the car smiling, but he gave twelve tickets for ten nickels and then hurried to the rear platform.

"I'll take those tickets," said a man across the aisle to the passenger with the small change.

He got them, and the conductor was called back again.

Everyone in the car was interested by this time, and some even laughed aloud at the conductor's discomfiture. Moreover they took the tickets off the passenger's hands as fast as he bought them from the conductor. When the latter had sold four dollars' worth he swore he had no more, but under threat of being reported he discovered enough to exchange for the remainder of the change he had given the passenger.

He was mad, so mad that he added to his discomfiture by making a mistake in ringing up fares, but he had afforded the passengers some amusement, and—well, he had learned to be more obliging.—Detroit Free Press.

WHY HE MOURNS.

A Young Man Who Has Lost Faith in Humanity.

Among the many acquaintances of the Growler residing up on the South Side is a young man who is entitled to a growl because he is minus a pair of light trousers, a figured white vest, a dress shirt, a white lawn tie and a pair of cuffs. His loss came about in this wise: Not long ago he gave a whist party at which refreshments were to be served. In casting about for some one to serve them he thought of the colored youth who did odd jobs about the house, and he proceeded to question him. Did he know any thing about waiting on table? He did, as he had once hustled dishes in some of the leading hotels. Would he hustle dishes single-handed at the whist party? He would—for the usual consideration. And so he was engaged. The eventful evening arrived and the colored youth turned up. He spent the afternoon in a desperate wrestle with a few tons of coal and a barrel and he hardly looked in trim to serve the ice-cream and cake to a genteel whist party. The young host took him in hand and effected a great transformation. When the colored servitor descended to the kitchen he wore a grin that resembled two shelves in a crockery store. His lavender trousers were a trifle brief in the legs and an inch or two in the waist, but the figured white vest made amends for these discrepancies and the expanse of shirt front, topped by the lawn tie and supplemented by the cuffs, had produced a very satisfactory waiter. He acquitted himself admirably, though inclined to be a little gallus with his tray, to the imminent danger of fine china. After the festivities he was given a place to sleep and he departed at an early hour the next morning. The young host consulted the hired girl as to his whereabouts when he came down stairs.

"Shure he's gone, already, sir," was the reply to his query.

"Did he leave any clothes?"

"No, he did not, sir; he wore them away."

"What did he say?"

"He grinned and said: 'The boys will laugh when they see me in these.'"

And the colored servitor has not visited the neighborhood since. If this catches his eye and he will return the buttons on the vest he may keep the rest of the outfit. The next darky the young host dresses up will be padlocked to his clothes with a bicycle chain.—Chicago Post.

Cheese Factory for the State Fair.

Extensive preparations are being made for the dairy exhibit at the state fair, and Assistant Dairy Commissioner Lawrence, who will have charge of the department, promises that it will be a thoroughly representative display of the dairy interests of the state. One of the most striking features of the exhibit will be a cheese factory in full operation under the direction of State Cheese Instructor E. B. Williams, assisted by W. L. Chappell. This factory, complete in every detail, will manufacture cheese daily in full view of the visitors at the fair.

Driven Into the Mud.

Prof. Edward Hope, the balloonist, met instant death at Inver grove, near St. Paul, in a peculiar manner. After his balloon had gone up about half a mile it began to drift rapidly toward the Mississippi before a west wind. Becoming alarmed, Hope cut away his parachute and began to descend. The machine worked badly, however, and he dropped to the earth like a shot. He fell in a slough and was driven 12 feet into the soft mud. It required nearly an hour to dig his body out.

Crushed Under Buildings.

By the breaking of a dam at Page street in St. Paul three houses were wrecked. Mrs. August Adams and her mother, Mrs. Horn, were crushed to death, and six other persons were seriously injured. When the dam broke the water rushed down Page street, between Woodbury street and Brown avenue, with such force that houses were swept before it like straws, three of them being shot over the bluff to the Kansas City railway track below.

Carl Magnusson, a laborer on the farm of Fred Jacobson, near Canby, died from the effects of a knife wound in the abdomen, inflicted, he said, by Jacobson. The latter and his victim and another hired man sat up all night in a granary drinking beer. About midnight the men quarreled and Jacobson stabbed Magnusson with a jackknife. After the cutting the victim was left lying in his blood the rest of the night and all the next day without food or water.

Crops Destroyed.

A hailstorm swept from the west across Kittson and Marshall counties and ruined thousands of acres of the most promising grain. Over 1,000 acres of wheat on the Dennis Ryan farm were destroyed and replowing had begun on the fields. The path destroyed was from 7 to 8 miles wide. The loss to the two counties was very severe.

New Medical Society.

The physicians of southern Minnesota met in Winona and organized the Southern Minnesota Medical association. Between thirty and forty were present. The following officers were elected: President, Franklin Staples, of Winona; vice president, N. S. Teft, of Plainview; secretary and treasurer, H. H. Witherstine, of Rochester.

The News Briefly Stated.

The receipts at the state prison during the month of June amounted to $6,167.79.

J. M. Sawyer, general freight agent of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie road, died at his home in Minneapolis.

Soren Listoe, of St. Paul, has been appointed consul to Dusseldorf. He is editor of the Nordvestern, a newspaper published in the Norwegian language.

Hans P. Sorensen has sued the Minneapolis Street Railway Company in the United States court for $20,000 for damages sustained by his daughter.

The body of Axel Laff, who was drowned below Minnehaha falls, was discovered floating on the water near St. Paul.

Forest fires in the Mesoba range did considerable damage to timber.

The blacksmith shops of the Great Northern railroad in St. Paul were burned, causing a loss of about $10,000.

Hogbarth Laplgaard, for the past twenty-two years vice consul of Sweden and Norway in St. Paul, died of spinal trouble. He was 48 years of age.

The granary of P. H. Rahilly in Mount Pleasant was struck by lightning and burned. It contained a large amount of grain, which was insured.

The quarterly meeting of the Southeastern Minnesota and Western Wisconsin Bee Keepers' association was held at La Crescent.

Mrs. Rose Murray, aged 29 and the mother of six children, was sent from St. Paul to the insane asylum. Her trouble was the result of puerperal fever.

A negro named Taylor attempted to murder Hi Adams, the well-known horse tamer and jockey at Winona. The only reason the negro gave for the deed was that Adams was not giving him wages enough.

Secretary Hart, of the state board of charities and corrections, in his report shows the number of persons in poor houses in Minnesota during the month of June was 331. In 1891 there were 338, and in 1890 310 in the same month.

The collector of customs at St. Paul reports receipts for the month of July to be $23,000, and Col. Edwards, internal revenue collector, received during the same time $241,327.83.

At Lake City Marshal R. Rogers was shot dead by Daniel Busch, an insane man he was trying to arrest. Busch was captured by a posse of citizens after he had been fatally shot.

The matter of holding a county fair at Duluth this fall was considered at a meeting of the chamber of commerce and the general sentiment was that such an undertaking could not be made a success.

POSITIVELY and honestinjun, next season will be Patti's last. For many, many years that songstress has fared well at the hands of American public, and in all probability she will keep right on farewelling this good-natured country until her voice changes.

WHEN Gen. Schnitzenpodskigraf entered the dining room with the wife of Col. Iztukatixgenzatieff on his arm, the haughty butler merely ignited a bunch of firecrackers and turned loose all the stops on the soda fountain and the guests looked around and exclaimed: "What! are those people here?"

THE bark Alice, from Auckland, New Zealand, which arrived in New York the other day, met June 18 an iceberg 400 feet high. June 19 more than 500 bergs were counted, and at noon the hull was inclosed with ice on all sides as far as the eye could see. They were imprisoned in ice until June 21.

THE following conversation was heard on the hotel piazza at a summer resort: "I knew that woman when she lived in an attic." "Yes, I can remember that time perfectly. It was when you were living in the basement of the same house." Then there was a silence, and the waves gossiping to the beach had it all to themselves.

THE death of Palo Alto caused genuine grief in San Francisco, where the famous stallion was as highly regarded as if he had been an eminent citizen. The attendants and others present when the great horse died were affected almost to tears. There was a painful silence for several minutes, unbroken until some one went to dispatch a cablegram to Senator Stanford in Switzerland. Palo Alto was fairly idolized by the senator, who loved the horse next to the pet university which he built to commemorate the untimely death of his son.

CHARLES F. BURELL of the United States census department says: "We have just completed the religious census, and find the total number of church members to be 20,000,000. These figures represent church members, not adherents. I cannot make a comparison of the religious growth, for it is fifty years since any religious census was taken; but you can rely on the figures being accurate. The statistics have been carefully gathered from pastors, then when proofs were prepared they were submitted to the pastors for verification."

BEDMINSTER, in Somerset county, N. J., boasts of a resident who has passed the 103d anniversary of her birth. It is Aunt Sarah Heath. Her maiden name was Cool, and she was born near Flemington. In 1809 she married Robert Heath. Her husband had previously erected a home in Mine Brook, Somerset county, and that cottage is still in a good state of preservation. The couple had two sons and two daughters, only one of whom, William, aged 75, is living. Mrs. Heath has five grandchildren, seventeen great-grandchildren and six great-great-grandchildren. Her memory is excellent.

SINCE the time some Phœnician sailors were shipwrecked in the bay of Naples and were obliged to subsist on the mollusks so plentiful there poets and doctors have united in praising the oyster. But now comes a Philadelphia physician who declares that the clam is in every respect superior to the oyster. It supplies the material for the brain and all the nerves and he declares that clam juice will counteract the effects of opium, tobacco and alcohol and will cure a large number of organic diseases. It is the best food for infants, next to milk, and is most desirable for persons of an advanced age.

THE first pensions ever granted by the United States were provided for in bills introduced in congress in April, 1778. On May 15, 1778, congress passed a bill granting that "all officers who shall serve to the close of the war shall receive half pay for seven years thereafter, and all privates shall secure a reward of $80." The same congress gave permission to South Carolina and Georgia to raise 3,000 troops of able bodied negroes for service, for whom congress agreed to pay $1,000 for every soldier; "provided that no bounty or pay be allowed said negroes," and that such negroes be emancipated and receive $50.

THE DEMOCRATS.

D. W. LAWLER FOR GOVERNOR.

The Minnesota Democrats Meet in Convention and Nominate a State and Electoral Ticket.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 4.—It was a few minutes after 12 o'clock yesterday when Chairman Campbell called the Minnesota Democratic convention to order. After a prayer by Rev. Wilkinson it was announced that Alfred Jacques of Duluth had been selected as temporary chairman, with John A. Johnson of St. Peter and B. J. Mulloney of Minneapolis as assistants. After appointing the committee on credentials the convention took a recess.

Upon reassembling the committee on credentials reported no contests and a list of delegates entitled to seats in the convention. The report was accepted, and on the committee's report the temporary organization was made permanent, when the convention stood finally organized.

A motion to nominate the three judges of the Supreme Court was defeated and a roll of counties was ordered called for the purpose of making nominations, and Aitkin, the first on the list, gave way to Ramsey amid cheers, and Judge C. E. Flandrau of St. Paul ascended the platform, and in a short speech nominated Daniel W Lawler of Ramsey for governor.

When the cheers died away after Judge Flandrau retired there were loud calls for Cyrus Wellington of Ramsey, and in response he made a fiery speech seconding the nomination of Mr. Lawler. After several other seconding speeches Mr. Lawler was by acclamation declared nominee of the Convention.

The committee on resolution submitted the report which was adopted and the convention adjourned until evening.

At 8:30 the delegates were again in their seats. Harry Hawkins of Carleton, was nominated for Lieutenant Governor by acclamation. The ticket was completed as follows:

Secretary of State—Peter Nelson of Goodhue.

Treasurer—Joseph Leicht of Winona.

Attorney General—John C. Nethaway of Washington.

Judges of the Supreme Court—Daniel Buck, Blue Earth; Thomas Canty Hennepin; William Mitchell, Winona.

Electors—First district, D. R. P. Hibbs, Albert Lea; Second, A. L. Sackett, St. Peter; Third, S. N. Jones, Gaylord; Fourth, J. T. Barron, Stillwater; Fifth, J. C. Oswald, Minneapolis; Sixth, William Quinn, Wright county; Seventh, Martin Shea, Otter Tail.

The chair appointed F. Nelson of Hennepin and R. A. Smith of Ramsey electors at large.

THE PLATFORM.

The Democrats of Minnesota gathered in delegate convention, mingle their rejoicing with that of their fellows in the nation that the earnest voices of the rank and file of the party was heard and obeyed by the national convention and found expression in the nomination of the able and courageous Cleveland for our leader, and in the bold, explicit declarations that Republican protection is a fraud, in proof of which we point to Homestead, where the militia of a state is keeping peace in a quarrel over the spoil between the real and supposed beneficiaries of protection.

We denounce the rapacious and conscienceless combination which has grown up in this state, with the connivance of Republican legislatures, between the elevator companies, the millers and the railroads, by which our grain markets have been monopolized and our farmers robbed of the fruits of their hard labors. We reaffirm our belief that this combination rests upon the fact that the railroads of this state have injured one of their prime functions, the provision of suitable means for handling grain, and have given the same over to the control of private parties, and we again declare our belief that the remedy, simple but efficient, lies in legislation requiring the railroads to resume this proper function, thus giving to every station a free and open market.

We recognize the great, conspicuous fact that the prosperity of our government rests upon labor, and that all legislation should be shaped, so far as possible, to relieve it from all unjust and oppressive burdens and to secure to it its just share of the benefit of our general prosperity.

We are opposed to state interference with parental rights and rights of conscience in the education of children as an infringement of the fundamental Democratic doctrine that the largest individual liberty consistent with the rights of others insures the highest type of citizenship and best government.

We again call the attention of voters to the manifest injustice and inequality of our tax laws, under which wealth easily evades its share of public burdens and compels moderate accumulations to bear the part it shirks, and we again invite the coming legislature to a serious consideration of the subject, to the end that a just, evenly-bearing system may be adopted.

The Democratic party has always been and is to-day the consistent opponent of all legislation the result of which is to create law-made wealth which impoverishes the poor and those of moderate means in order to enrich the few. We condemn all use of the taxing powers for this purpose. We call the attention of the people of the state to the fact that mineral wealth at the northern part of this state is not bearing its just share of the public burdens. The non-resident millionaires who own iron mines whose value is, at a moderate estimate, $20,000,000, under our present statutes pay less than $9,000 per annum in taxes. In exchange for the votes of 2,000 employes, coerced into voting the Republican ticket, the Republican party has covenanted to perpetuate this system and to deliver to these men the government of the counties of the state.

We demand that this condition of things be rectified. We denounce all bounties and exemptions and demand that all taxes to be raised in this state shall be as nearly equal as may be, and that all property on which taxes are to be levied shall have a cash valuation and be equalized and uniform, and we call upon all good citizens, without distinction to party, to join with us in defeating the proposed constitutional amendment, known as chapter 2, of the General Laws of 1891, to be voted upon this fall, which seeks to perpetrate this unjust system of taxation, and while it pretends to levy taxes upon sleeping car and other similar corporations, it repeals the existing constitutional tax of 3 per cent upon gross earnings of our railroads, now realizing for the state a revenue of $725,000 and annually increasing, and places the rate of taxation upon the earnings of such railroads at the caprice of the legislature.

We especially call attention to and denounce the form of the ballot for the proposed amendment to be voted on at the coming election, which is known as "Senate File No. 124," as being especially designed to mislead the voters, and we call upon all honest citizens to assist in rebuking such trickery.

Resolved, That we are in favor of a radical change in the laws of this state, and demand such legislation as will provide for intelligent and economical supervision of the building and maintenance of our country roads.

That for the better security of our government we recommend an amendment to the federal constitution extending the presidential term to six years and making a president ineligible for re-election.

We favor also the election of president and vice-president and senators of the United States by the direct vote of the people.

[The following resolution was introduced after the platform was adopted, and it was also adopted by the convention:]

Resolved, Believing the contract system in force in the state penitentiary to be wrong in principle, prejudicial to the interests of the state, the welfare of the convicts and an injustice to honest labor, we demand its discontinuance at the expiration of the present contracts, and that the legislature prohibit any future contracts and provide for the employment by the state and for the state of all convicts and persons confined in the penal and reformatory institutions of this state.

The chairman then announced the new state central committee as follows:

Owen Austin, Hastings; Dan Aberle, St. Paul; Chris H. Heffron, Rochester; John Coleman, Anoka; R. O. Craig, Janesville; J. C. Wise, Mankato; C. A. Moody, Benton; George DuToit, Chaska, M. Mullen, New Ulm; J. D. Sheedy, Austin; Morris Thomas, Duluth; J. M. Spicer, Willmar; James Manning, Washington; Fourteenth, James D. O'Brien, Crookston; Fifteenth, Werner Hempstead Brainerd; Sixteenth, Charles Cater, Grant county; Hennepin county, Lars M. Rand; Ramsey county, Crawford Livingston.

A LESSON IN CIVILITY.

"Getting Even" With an Unobliging Street-Car Conductor.

The street-car conductor was inclined to be disagreeable and unaccommodating, and only got what he deserved. He had some bills, but when the passenger tendered him a five-dollar bill, apologizing for so doing, he carefully counted out four dollars and ninety-five cents in small change and handed it over. There were two or three quarters, a few dimes, twenty-five or thirty pennies and any number of nickels.

Of course the passenger protested.

"I don't mind taking some of your small change," he said, "but I don't want it all. You have something larger."

"You can take that or nothing," retorted the conductor. "It's all you'll get."

Now that didn't tend to make the passenger feel kindly toward the conductor, but he apparently had no redress except to report him for incivility. A moment later, however, he recalled that the road sold tickets and he smiled.

The conductor didn't wish to sell any tickets to this particular passenger, but he had to. He hesitated, but a prompt threat to report him induced him to sell twelve tickets for twenty-five pennies and five nickels.

Then a man sitting next to the passenger leaned over and said:

"I need some tickets. I'll give you half a dollar for those."

He got them and then the conductor was called back.

"I want some more tickets," said the passenger.

The conductor grew red in the face as he saw everyone in the car smiling, but he gave twelve tickets for ten nickels and then hurried to the rear platform.

"I'll take those tickets," said a man across the aisle to the passenger with the small change.

He got them, and the conductor was called back again.

Everyone in the car was interested by this time, and some even laughed aloud at the conductor's discomfiture. Moreover they took the tickets off the passenger's hands as fast as he bought them from the conductor. When the latter had sold four dollars' worth he swore he had no more, but under threat of being reported he discovered enough to exchange for the remainder of the change he had given the passenger.

He was mad, so mad that he added to his discomfiture by making a mistake in ringing up fares, but he had afforded the passengers some amusement, and—well, he had learned to be more obliging.—Detroit Free Press.

WHY HE MOURNS.

A Young Man Who Has Lost Faith in Humanity.

Among the many acquaintances of the Growler residing up on the South Side is a young man who is entitled to a growl because he is minus a pair of light trousers, a figured white vest, a dress shirt, a white lawn tie and a pair of cuffs. His loss came about in this wise: Not long ago he gave a whist party at which refreshments were to be served. In casting about for some one to serve them he thought of the colored youth who did odd jobs about the house, and he proceeded to question him. Did he know any thing about waiting on table? He did, as he had once hustled dishes in some of the leading hotels. Would he hustle dishes single-handed at the whist party? He would—for the usual consideration And so he was engaged. The eventful evening arrived and the colored youth turned up. He spent the afternoon in a desperate wrestle with a few tons of coal and a barrel and he hardly looked in trim to serve the ice-cream and cake to a genteel whist party. The young host took him in hand and effected a great transformation. When the colored servitor descended to the kitchen he wore a grin that resembled two shelves in a crockery store. His lavender trousers were a trifle brief in the legs and an inch or two in the waist, but the figured white vest made amends for these discrepancies and the expanse of shirt front, topped by the lawn tie and supplemented by the cuffs, had produced a very satisfactory waiter. He acquitted himself admirably, though inclined to be a little gallus with his tray, to the imminent danger of fine china. After the festivities he was given a place to sleep and he departed at an early hour the next morning. The young host consulted the hired girl as to his whereabouts when he came down stairs.

"Shure he's gone, already, sir," was the reply to his query.

"Did he leave any clothes?"

"No, he did not, sir; he wore them away."

"What did he say?"

"He grinned and said: 'The boys will laugh when they see me in these.'"

And the colored servitor has not visited the neighborhood since. If this catches his eye and he will return the buttons on the vest he may keep the rest of the outfit. The next darky the young host dresses up will be padlocked to his clothes with a bicycle chain.—Chicago Post.

Cheese Factory for the State Fair.

Extensive preparations are being made for the dairy exhibit at the state fair, and Assistant Dairy Commissioner Lawrence, who will have charge of the department, promises that it will be a thoroughly representative display of the dairy interests of the state. One of the most striking features of the exhibit will be a cheese factory in full operation under the direction of State Cheese Instructor E. B. Williams, assisted by W. L. Chappell. This factory, complete in every detail, will manufacture cheese daily in full view of the visitors at the fair.

Driven Into the Mud.

Prof. Edward Hope, the balloonist, met instant death at Inver grove, near St. Paul, in a peculiar manner. After his balloon had gone up about half a mile it began to drift rapidly toward the Mississippi before a west wind. Becoming alarmed, Hope cut away his parachute and began to descend. The machine worked badly, however, and he dropped to the earth like a shot. He fell in a slough and was driven 12 feet into the soft mud. It required nearly an hour to dig his body out.

Crushed Under Buildings.

By the breaking of a dam at Page street in St. Paul three houses were wrecked. Mrs. August Adams and her mother, Mrs. Horn, were crushed to death, and six other persons were seriously injured. When the dam broke the water rushed down Page street, between Woodbury street and Brown avenue, with such force that houses were swept before it like straws, three of them being shot over the bluff to the Kansas City railway track below.

Carl Magnusson, a laborer on the farm of Fred Jacobson, near Canby, died from the effects of a knife wound in the abdomen, inflicted, he said, by Jacobson. The latter and his victim and another hired man sat up all night in a granary drinking beer. About midnight the men quarreled and Jacobson stabbed Magnusson with a jackknife. After the cutting the victim was left lying in his blood the rest of the night and all the next day without food or water.

Crops Destroyed.

A hailstorm swept from the west across Kittson and Marshall counties and ruined thousands of acres of the most promising grain. Over 1,000 acres of wheat on the Dennis Ryan farm were destroyed and replowing had begun on the fields. The path destroyed was from 7 to 8 miles wide. The loss to the two counties was very severe.

New Medical Society.

The physicians of southern Minnesota met in Winona and organized the Southern Minnesota Medical association. Between thirty and forty were present. The following officers were elected: President, Franklin Staples, of Winona; vice president, N. S. Teft, of Plainview; secretary and treasurer, H. H. Witherstine, of Rochester.

The News Briefly Stated.

The receipts at the state prison during the month of June amounted to $6,167.79.

J. M. Sawyer, general freight agent of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie road, died at his home in Minneapolis.

Soren Listoe, of St. Paul, has been appointed consul to Dusseldorf. He is editor of the Nordvestern, a newspaper published in the Norwegian language.

Hans P. Sorensen has sued the Minneapolis Street Railway Company in the United States court for $20,000 for damages sustained by his daughter.

The body of Axel Laff, who was drowned below Minnehaha falls, was discovered floating on the water near St. Paul.

Forest fires in the Mesoba range did considerable damage to timber.

The blacksmith shops of the Great Northern railroad in St. Paul were burned, causing a loss of about $10,000.

Hogbarth Laplgaard, for the past twenty-two years vice consul of Sweden and Norway in St. Paul, died of spinal trouble. He was 48 years of age.

The granary of P. H. Rahilly in Mount Pleasant was struck by lightning and burned. It contained a large amount of grain, which was insured.

The quarterly meeting of the Southeastern Minnesota and Western Wisconsin Bee Keepers' association was held at La Crescent.

Mrs. Rose Murray, aged 29 and the mother of six children, was sent from St. Paul to the insane asylum. Her trouble was the result of puerperal fever.

A negro named Taylor attempted to murder Hi Adams, the well-known horse tamer and jockey at Winona. The only reason the negro gave for the deed was that Adams was not giving him wages enough.

Secretary Hart, of the state board of charities and corrections, in his report shows the number of persons in poor houses in Minnesota during the month of June was 331. In 1891 there were 338, and in 1890 310 in the same month.

The collector of customs at St. Paul reports receipts for the month of July to be $23,006, and Col. Edwards, internal revenue collector, received during the same time $241,327.83.

At Lake City Marshal R. Rogers was shot dead by Daniel Busch, an insane man he was trying to arrest. Busch was captured by a posse of citizens after he had been fatally shot.

The matter of holding a county fair at Duluth this fall was considered at a meeting of the chamber of commerce and the general sentiment was that such an undertaking could not be made a success.

HE WROTE FOR ALL.

"The world is cruel! careless! cold!"
I sighed; "and cares for naught but gold!
Why should my troubled pages plead
A brother's woe—a brother's need!"

"My song is drowned in mammon's roar,"
(I flung my pen upon the floor),
"The hand that fortune stoops to bless
Must crush the buds of tenderness."

My toddling wee one put the pen
Into my trembling hand again,
And clambering upon my knee,
Said archly: "Papa, wite for me."

I wrote—a homely, childish tale
Of hope and love—no pensive wail
Of others' wrongs—but what her smile
Had wakened in my heart the while.

And when the ink had scarcely dried,
I heard the song on every side;
It filled the land from sea to sea,
While thousands cried—he wrote for me.

A MOUNTAIN LION.

An Adventure with a Savage Denizen of the Mountains.

N THE remoter regions of the Black Hills, far from the towns and mining camps, the original denizens, bear, deer, elk and mountain lions, enjoy almost undisputed possession. In the shadowy canyons and dense thickets the cunning mountain lion trails his prey. This animal, one of the most formidable of the cat species, more nearly resembles the tiger or panther than his noble namesake. His is a policy of stealth, and it is only when wounded or at bay that he will attack the human species. He rarely falls a prey to the rifle of the hunter or mountain ranchman. The latter wages a relentless warfare against him because of his fondness for the blood of young colts and his frequent inroads upon the herds that pasture the mountain meadows.

With all his cunning, the mountain lion often comes to grief in the ranchman's bear trap, and his career of blood and depredation is changed for one of innocence and usefulness as a parlor rug. A miner who returned recently from a prospecting tour in the western hills gives an account of an adventure with a lion which well illustrates the habits of the animal and the danger of attacking him at a disadvantage.

"I was prospecting for gold on the Limestone range about a month ago," said he, "and stopped over night with a ranchman named Jones, who had quite a herd of horses. He complained bitterly of his losses from the lions. I asked him why he did not hunt them, and he answered that it was useless, as it was very rarely that a sight could be had of the animals. He had trapped four in the last few months, but his losses still continued, and hardly a week passed that he did not find the half-eaten carcass of a colt or horse. The next morning I started out to begin prospecting upon a ridge near the ranchman's cabin. In reaching the point to which I was bound I had to cross a stream at a short distance from the ranch. As I was leaving the bank I noticed in the soft earth foot prints which looked like those of a giant cat. It had rained the night before, and I had no difficulty in following the trail, which I at once recognized as that of a mountain lion.

I had no arms with me except a large revolver, but knowing that these animals rarely attack a man I had no fear of an encounter, and thought that I might possibly get a shot at the ranchman's enemy. The track led up along a path through the thicket and toward the mouth of a small canyon. As I proceeded I saw that the trail, which was quite fresh, circled around toward the point where I had crossed the stream, and when I arrived again at the crossing I was somewhat startled to see in the sand by the side of the stream, close to one of my own footprints, made not ten minutes before, a second track of the mountain king.

This was becoming interesting. The lion was upon my trail, and it sent a cold shiver over me to fancy a sudden spring from rock or tree, followed by a weight of four hundred pounds of wildcat upon my shoulders. I at once determined to leave the trail and seek a point of vantage among the rocks at the mouth of the canyon. This I did, not omitting an occasional glance over my shoulder, half expecting to see my pursuer in the act of crouching for a spring. I reached the rocks and had just seated myself upon a bowlder screened by stunted pieces and overlooking the path when another feature was added to the scene. A band of horses which had evidently been up the canyon to a spring to water came slowly down the ravine in single file. They were headed by a coal black stallion, who tossed his head proudly, and stopped occasionally to crop a bunch of grass or nip a tender sprig of birch, his train pausing obediently at his will. Behind him came his numerous family, mild-eyed dams, with young colts capering at their sides, yearlings biting each other playfully as they trotted along, and young mares as light and graceful in their airs as a bevy of schoolgirls.

In the interest of this scene of pastoral life and freedom I had almost forgotten the prowling beast of prey who, but a few moments ago, was dogging my footsteps and who was perhaps at that very instant watching the unconscious band and choosing from its number some particularly fat and juicy member for his morning meal. The black stallion suddenly paused in the pathway, put his nose to the earth like a dog, raised one of his forefeet, and gave a wild snort of fear. He had scented the trail of the mountain terror, and, turning quickly, galloped rapidly back up the canyon. Most of his band followed, snorting and giving short neighs of terror. In an instant one young mare who had left the path to snatch a mouthful of tempting grass upon the hillside alone remained, and she seemed not to have recognized the signal of danger, for she lifted her head leisurely, and then seeing the flanks and tails of her fleeing friends trotted after them.

At this moment, glancing across the gulch, I saw a huge mountain lion leap lightly upon the trunk of a tree which leaned over the gulch nearly opposite to me and just above the retreating mare. A moment he rested upon the trunk and then launched himself with a graceful spring, landing squarely upon the back of the horse, fixing his claws in her shoulders and resisting every attempt to shake him off. A loud shriek of brute terror and agony was heard, and the mare, feeling that terrible weight upon her back, stood trembling with fear. The lion lost no time. Leaning over her shoulders he fastened his fangs in her neck, where he hung fast, sucking her life away.

For a moment I had been stupefied by the suddenness of the attack, but now pity for the young mare and anger at the boldness and cruelty of her fierce assailant filled me. Without a thought of consequences I reached for my revolver, took quick aim and fired. This sudden interruption of his bloody feast, and the pain of my bullet, which, as I afterward learned, struck him in one of the fore paws, caused him to release his hold and drop to the ground, and the terrified mare sprang away like the wind up the canyon path. I had saved her life, but as I came down from my perch to get a better view of the situation I realized that my chivalry had brought me into danger. The lion crouched where he had fallen, growling savagely and licking his wounded paw. Suddenly he saw me, and, recognizing the cause of his discomfiture, prepared to attack me.

"I was now but a few paces off, and again leveled my revolver and fired. The shot went wide of the mark, and I saw that I was now at the mercy of the very claws from which I had freed the mare. I braced myself to receive the spring, and grasped my revolver by the barrel to use over the lion's head. I had weighed all my chances and decided there was no escape, when suddenly, almost as the lion rose to spring upon me, the report of a rifle rang and reechoed along the canyon walls, and the tawny brute lay rolling in his death agony.

"Jones, the ranchman, hearing the cry of his terrified stallion, had grasped his rifle and rushed to the rescue. His steps were hastened by the cry of the mare, and when he stood in the mouth of the gulch and saw the animal ready to spring upon me his hand was nerved to his task and the bullet did its work unerringly."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Curious Telephone Line.

A curious telephone line has been working for the last three years between two private houses in the suburbs of London, England. The singular point about the line consists in the use of an electric-light circuit for telephonic communications and electric lighting purposes either independently or simultaneously. The interference when the two lines are working is so slight as to be barely noticeable and a novice would never guess from the slight rustling heard when the engine is running that a ten or twelve amphere current was passing along the line and that the vocal sounds were being produced by a slight variation caused by the respective telephone transmitters at either end of the line. The length of the line is comparatively short, as the houses between which it runs are only a quarter of a mile apart. The wires at either end are tapped for the telephone in the particular room required by simply connecting a short length of wire from the lead to the terminal of the telephone.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

Faith and Works.

A peculiar sort of a parson in a Highland glen, much given to contradiction, was debating with a boatman one day, while crossing a small river, about faith and works. The minister contended that faith without works was good. "Na, na," retorted the boatman, with much seriousness, "faith without works 'll no do. I'll gie you an instance. We'll ca' this oar 'faith' an' this ither oar 'works.' Very well. Tak' faith first," and while rowing with it alone the boat went round and round. "Now," said the boatman, "let's tak' 'works' next," and rowing with it alone the boat went round the other way. "We will noo," continued the boatman, "tak' 'faith' an' 'works' tegither. Noo," said he, triumphantly, as he rowed with both oars at the same time, "we can get over the water; an' this is the only way that we can get over the troubled ocean o' the warl' tae the peaceful shores o' immortality!"—Scottish-American.

Zach Taylor's Wife Liked Her Pipe.

Zachary Taylor never felt at his ease in the white house. He was rather portly and had a big head covered with luxuriant white hair. Whenever he appeared in public and was greeted with applause, he would wave his hand and say: "Your humble servant, ladies; heaven bless you, gentlemen." He was fond of morning walks through the streets of Washington, wearing an old silk hat perched on the back of his head and a black broadcloth suit much too large for him. His wife took little or no part in society, but remained quietly at home knitting and smoking her pipe.—Augusta Chronicle.

THE DAIRY.

THE DAIRYMAN'S COW.

Surprises Which a Thorough Test Will Sometimes Bring Out.

There are good cows in all breeds, including the native, but none of them will return a profit to their owners unless they are properly fed and cared for. A good cow will not respond in a good flow of rich milk if fed dry timothy hay, rotten cornstalks or straw, nor if forced to stand out and face blizzards and shiver on the lee side of a barbed wire fence. Such treatment and food are for reduction and not production. We have seen herds of cows standing in the blinding storm, as if their owners were trying to find out by experiment which of them could stand the most abuse. Such treatment is expensive and costs cash in food and butter fats. The owner cannot afford it. To do better will be to improve upon such barbarous treatment.

If a man does not know better in this age of improvements, books, farmers' institutes and agricultural papers, than to thus abuse his cows and waste his foods, he should learn better or go out of the dairy business. On stormy days every animal should be in a warm, comfortable stable, and be fed and watered there. The temperature of the cow's body is about ninety-eight degrees, and it must be maintained with food and shelter. Such treatment of a cow as we saw meant excess of food. Again, milk contains 87 per cent. water, showing the necessity of furnishing the cow that is giving milk all she will drink just when she needs it, and at a proper temperature, which should not be below 50°. Given ice water to drink, she must, to bring it to the temperature of her body, use some extra food to keep the fire burning inside to heat it—another loss to her owner, both in foods and butter fats. So then, if you are going to pursue such a system of care and feeding, it will not matter much which breed of cows you select.

If, on the contrary, you are going to join the procession of intelligent, progressive dairymen who are traveling in a better path and practicing a better way, buy a test and scale, then weigh and test the milk of each cow in your herd. The revelation will be a big surprise to you, as it has been to every man who has made the tests. You will find some of your cows which you thought were the best, the poorest in the herd, and vice versa. Test thoroughly, then weed out all that are getting trusted for their board and stable rent, and who will never pay you a cent for it all. Don't keep free cow boarding houses all winter and come out in the spring with empty hay mows and corn bins, and with nothing but a lot of half-starved cows and no cash to show for it.

Each cow has an individuality; develop this, and if it is high enough to pay a cash dividend, retain her; if she is losing money for you, turn her over to the butcher. The cow is a machine and should be kept for profit, not sentiment; for making the largest possible amount of butter, not the giving of a large amount of worthless milk. The manufacturer throws out the old, worn out machine and replaces it with another. He does not hesitate and say, "I cannot afford it," but on the contrary, "I cannot afford to do without it."—J. Powell, in Field and Farm.

CHURNING TEST.

Cream From Fresh Cows and Strippers Compared.

During the last six week's session of a class in the Minnesota Dairy school, the milk from the Station herd of cows was used exclusively, which afforded the opportunity to make some trials in the relative churnability of the milk from cows that had not advanced over six months in their period of milk giving, and milk from what are generally termed "strippers." No special examination was made as to exhaustive churning, but a record was kept as to the time required to make each churning. The herd was divided into two lots, one contained the milk from the cows which had not given milk over six months, the other was milk from the strippers. Care was taken to give each student the same quantity of cream, two gallons, and that the churns containing the cream from the fresh cows and those containing the cream from the strippers were turned at the same velocity. It required on an average forty-nine minutes to churn the cream from the strippers, and fifty minutes the cream from the balance of the herd. I had expected that it would require more time to churn the cream from the strippers than from the others. The theory that cream taken by the centrifugal process will churn more quickly than that raised by the gravity process, was shown to be correct. The average time required to churn the cream from the separator was only twenty minutes, not half the time required to churn the cream raised by the gravity process. From these tests it appears that cream from cows in advanced lactation churns as quickly as does that from cows comparatively fresh.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Dairy Notes.

—A good silo, well filled, is the first step toward making winter dairying profitable. A field of evergreen corn would be a good thing to fill it with.—Western Rural.

—Of average milk, one hundred pounds will make four to four and one-half pounds of butter. But of some milk the same quantity will produce seven pounds.—The difference in profit is apparent.—Prairie Farmer.

—The longer cows are in milk, the harder the work to get up the fat globules. It is an advantage to such milk to dilute it. There is no advantage in diluting the milk of fresh cows. You will also find it valuable to dilute cream in winter time with a little warm water.—Farm and Home.

—A grade Ayrshire cow, five years old, which has never eaten any kind of grain, gave recently, on a seven days' test, 338 pounds 3 ounces of milk, from which 14 pounds 13 ounces of butter were made. This was doing pretty well for an ordinary cow on ordinary pasture.—N. Y. Examiner.

—There is no truth in the old saying that "kicking cows give rich milk." That some of them do is not questioned, and they are tolerated on this account; it is the redeeming feature, and because they are profitable milkers they are retained. The chronic kicker rarely ever forgets her meanness and reforms. An animal given to this habit is a nuisance, and the shortest cut to get at her usefulness is to test her ability, and despite other considerations, let her fate be decided thereby.—Colman's Rural World.

A QUACK IN AFRICA.

He Took Cattle as Fees and Soon Acquired a Thousand Animals.

A German agent in the southwest African possessions of Germany writes to headquarters in Berlin that confidence men and scamps have invaded even that sparsely settled and half-savage region. He says that a year ago a white man went wandering through the country carrying on his back a bag filled with medical nostrums. Little attention was paid to him, but it was found later that he knew nothing whatever of medicine, and that his little plasters, wafers and drugs were worth no more than so much fetish. He heralded his coming everywhere, just as the quack doctors do in this country, and the simple-minded natives flocked to him from far and near to secure the benefits of his wonderful treatment. He remained only two or three weeks in a place, and then would seek other fields. He took payment in cattle, and from place to place he drove his herd, which cost him nothing for food and kept rapidly increasing in size.

Finally he reappeared on the coast with a herd of about one thousand six hundred cattle out of which he had bunkoed the natives. As he had no medical skill and the contents of the mysterious bag probably were not worth ten dollars, he found the business a paying one. The natives, after he had swindled them, made up their minds as to his true character, and the German agent writes that it probably would not be safe now for any itinerate dealer in medicine and cures to travel through the country; however honest and competent he might be.

The agent says, however, that there is a fine opening in southwest Africa for some young practitioner who is having hard work building up a practice in Germany. He names the town where the young man should settle, and says he is confident that a few years' practice among the natives there would enable him to return to Germany with a snug little fortune. The agent will exercise great care to prevent any more quacks and humbugs from getting into the country and giving the natives an unfavorable impression of all white men.—Chicago Times.

AN ADEPT AT RESIGNING.

The Accountant's Novel Method of Taking a Vacation.

Living in a fashionable town within commuting distance of New York is a gentleman who invariably attracts attention by his long hair. Strangers always conclude that he is nothing less than a great lawyer or bank president. When the more curious ask his fellow-townsmen about him they are told the following story:

One day the gentleman, who is one of the best accountants in the metropolis, stepped up to the president of the bank by which he is employed and said he had decided to resign and that the resignation must go into effect immediately.

The president was loth to lose so valuable a man and urged him to reconsider the matter. He talked with him for an hour but to no purpose. The employe, whose skill as a mathematician was beyond anything ever met with by the officials of the bank, was bound to leave the institution but absolutely refused to give any reason for his doings.

The accountant left that day and the bank was obliged to get along as best it could without him.

Ten days later the cashier was astonished on entering the bank to find the accountant hard at work at his old desk. The mathematician said good morning, just as he had done every day for years before he resigned, but offered no explanation.

The president and cashier decided to let their strange-acting employe keep at his work and ask no questions.

Three months later the accountant went into the president's office again and tendered his resignation. It was accepted, and the man was absent for a week or more. Then he suddenly returned.

The same thing was repeated again and again. Now it is a standing joke in that bank that the accountant has resigned. It is his way of taking a vacation. He never stays away more than two weeks.—N. Y. Commercial.

Important Typewriter Decision.

"Judge Lacombe, sitting in the United States Circuit Court here, has, on the motion of the Remington Typewriter Company, granted an injunction against the agents of the Franklin, restraining the sale of that machine on account of infringement of Remington patents. The decision is an important one as it proves the control of the fundamental patents, and may affect other makers of typewriters. The Remington people have heretofore been quite passive, but it is stated on good authority that they are now likely to proceed against all other typewriter manufacturing companies.

"In some cases purchasers of machines which infringe Remington patents may also be proceeded against for infringement. Until these cases are definitely settled this action will deter many people from purchasing type writers which are colorable imitations of the Remington. To save a few dollars a man does not want to buy a machine with a law suit attachment, especially when the other machine is the best."—N. Y. Journalist, June 18, 1892.

BOOK NOTES.

JULES VERNE is now writing his seventy-fourth novel.

DICKENS wrote twenty-four books, comprising 1,125 characters.

THE copyright of "Barnaby Rudge" brought Dickens twenty-thousand dollars. The original agreement has been recently sold in London.

GEN. LONGSTREET'S history of the late war will soon be published. He views the war in its purely military light, telling the story with the skill of a master.

THE first edition of Gray's "Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard," was sold recently for fifty-nine pounds. One hundred and forty-one years ago it brought six pence.

WILLIAM T. ADAMS, better known as "Oliver Optic," has written altogether more than a hundred books for boys, and he is now busy at work with another. Mr. Adams is seventy, but well enough preserved to last for thirty years to come.

SEDGES AND GRASSES.

Curious Facts About Two Numerous Orders of Plants.

"After the grasses the most widely distributed order of plants in the world is that of the sedges," said a botanist recently. "Whereas the former are the most useful of all vegetable products to mankind the latter are among the most useless. Whether found in marshes, ditches or by running streams, flourishing in meadows and forests, or on naked rocks, growing on the loose sand of the seashore or elsewhere, they are almost uniformly worthless. Nevertheless, some few members of the family serve one purpose or another, as the rushes, which are employed in the manufacture of candles, mats and chairs. In ancient times the 'papyrus,' likewise belonging to the order, was a very precious plant indeed, affording material for writing upon. Our word 'paper' is derived from it, as everyone knows.

"The Egyptian name for papyrus was 'biblion,' from which our term 'Bible' comes. Ordinarily the plant grows in stagnant pools and lakes, but it will flourish in rapid streams, the angles of its three-cornered stem adapting themselves to break the force of the current. Although the material used for writing on is commonly supposed to have been obtained from the leaves, such was not the case. It was got by separating the thin plates of cellular tissue which lie just beneath the outer coat of the stem. These were trimmed at their edges so as to meet equally, and were laid side by side upon a flat table. Other pieces similarly cut, were laid across them at right angles. They thus formed a sheet of many pieces, which were made into one united substance, and so transformed into a single sheet by simply sprinkling them with water, the gummy matter in them disolving and causing them to adhere.

"The ancient Egyptians produced in this manner papyrus sheets of a prodigious length. One obtained by the famous traveler Belzoni was 23 feet long by 18 inches wide. From Egypt this primitive paper was for centuries exported in great quantities, especially to Greece and Rome. Until the invention of parchment—about 250 B. C.—it was employed exclusively for writings which were destined to be preserved. However, parchment did not for a long time supersede papyrus, the demand for which at Rome continued for a considerable period after the beginning of the Christian era. The supply was interrupted by the invasion of Egypt by the Saracens in the seventh century, and from that time on parchment was employed almost exclusively as a substitute. Nevertheless its manufacture was continued as late as the eleventh century.—Washington Star.

STARVING THE TEETH.

Our Food Deficient in the Elements That Make Bone.

Teeth are just as easily starved to death as the stomach. In one way it is a blessing to have been born of poor parents. What food the poor give to their children is of the variety that goes to make strong bones and teeth. It is the outside of all the grains, of all cereal foods, that contains the carbonate and phosphate of lime and traces of other earthly salts which nourish the bony tissue and build the frame up.

If we do not furnish to the teeth of the young that pabulum they require, they can not possibly be built up. It is the outside of corn, oats, wheat, barley and the like, or the bran, so-called, that we sift away and feed to the swine, that the teeth actually require for their proper nourishment. The wisdom of man has proven his folly, shown in every succeeding generation of teeth, which become more fragile and weak. These flouring mills are working destruction upon the teeth of every man, woman and child who partake of their fine bolted flour. They sift out the carbonates and the phosphates of lime in order that they may provide that fine white flour which is proving a whitened sepulchre to teeth.

Oatmeal is one of the best foods for supplying the teeth with nourishment. It makes the dentine, cementum and enamel strong, flint-like and able to resist all forms of decay. If you have children, never allow any white bread upon your table. Bread made of whole wheat ground, not bolted, so that the bran which contains the minute quantities of lime is present, is best. To make a good, wholesome, nourishing bread, take two bowls of wheat meal and one bowl of white or bolted flour and make by the usual process. Nothing is superior to brown bread for bone and teeth building. This is made out of rye meal and corn meal. Baked beans, too, have a considerable supply of these lime salts and should be on your table, hot or cold, three times a week. In brushing the teeth, always brush up and down from the gum instead of across. Brush away from the gum and on the grinding surface of the teeth.—American Analyst.

The "Eating" of Clothes

—the rotting and ruining of them—won't show right away. Your new washing powder may be dangerous, but you'll have to wait a little for its results. It is doing its work, though. After a while, your clothes go to pieces, all at once.

Now isn't it better not to run any risk? Isn't it better to trust to an article like Pearline, which has been tried and tested and proved? Pearline is the original washing compound, with 15 years of success. Hundreds of millions of packages have been consumed. All the other so-called washing compounds are followers and imitations of it.

HE WROTE FOR ALL.

"The world is cruel! careless! cold!"
I sighed; "and cares for naught but gold!
Why should my troubled pages plead
A brother's woe—a brother's need!"

"My song is drowned in mammon's roar,"
(I flung my pen upon the floor),
"The hand that fortune stoops to bless
Must crush the buds of tenderness."

My toddling wee one put the pen
Into my trembling hand again,
And clambering upon my knee,
Said archly: "Papa, wite for me."

I wrote—a homely, childish tale
Of hope and love—no pensive wail
Of others' wrongs—but what her smile
Had wakened in my heart the while.

And when the ink had scarcely dried,
I heard the song on every side;
It filled the land from sea to sea,
While thousands cried—he wrote for me.

A MOUNTAIN LION.

An Adventure with a Savage Denizen of the Mountains.

IN THE remoter regions of the Black Hills, far from the towns and mining camps, the original denizens, bear, deer, elk and mountain lions, enjoy almost undisputed possession. In the shadowy canyons and dense thickets the cunning mountain lion trails his prey. This animal, one of the most formidable of the cat species, more nearly resembles the tiger or panther than his noble namesake. His is a policy of stealth, and it is only when wounded or at bay that he will attack the human species. He rarely falls a prey to the rifle of the hunter or mountain ranchman. The latter wages a relentless warfare against him because of his fondness for the blood of young colts and his frequent inroads upon the herds that pasture the mountain meadows.

With all his cunning, the mountain lion often comes to grief in the ranchman's bear trap, and his career of blood and depredation is changed for one of innocence and usefulness as a parlor rug. A miner who returned recently from a prospecting tour in the western hills gives an account of an adventure with a lion which well illustrates the habits of the animal and the danger of attacking him at a disadvantage.

"I was prospecting for gold on the Limestone range about a month ago," said he, "and stopped over night with a ranchman named Jones, who had quite a herd of horses. He complained bitterly of his losses from the lions. I asked him why he did not hunt them, and he answered that it was useless, as it was very rarely that a sight could be had of the animals. He had trapped four in the last few months, but his losses still continued, and hardly a week passed that he did not find the half-eaten carcass of a colt or horse. The next morning I started out to begin prospecting upon a ridge near the ranchman's cabin. In reaching the point to which I was bound I had to cross a stream at a short distance from the ranch. As I was leaving the bank I noticed in the soft earth foot prints which looked like those of a giant cat. It had rained the night before, and I had no difficulty in following the trail, which I at once recognized as that of a mountain lion.

I had no arms with me except a large revolver, but knowing that these animals rarely attack a man I had no fear of an encounter, and thought that I might possibly get a shot at the ranchman's enemy. The track led up along a path through the thicket and toward the mouth of a small canyon. As I proceeded I saw that the trail, which was quite fresh, circled around toward the point where I had crossed the stream, and when I arrived again at the crossing I was somewhat startled to see in the sand by the side of the stream, close to one of my own footprints, made not ten minutes before, a second track of the mountain king.

This was becoming interesting. The lion was upon my trail, and it sent a cold shiver over me to fancy a sudden spring from rock or tree, followed by a weight of four hundred pounds of wildcat upon my shoulders. I at once determined to leave the trail and seek a point of vantage among the rocks at the mouth of the canyon. This I did, not omitting an occasional glance over my shoulder, half expecting to see my pursuer in the act of crouching for a spring. I reached the rocks and had just seated myself upon a bowlder screened by stunted pieces and overlooking the path when another feature was added to the scene. A band of horses which had evidently been up the canyon to a spring to water came slowly down the ravine in single file. They were headed by a coal black stallion, who tossed his head proudly, and stopped occasionally to crop a bunch of grass or nip a tender sprig of birch, his train pausing obediently at his will. Behind him came his numerous family, mild-eyed dams, with young colts capering at their sides, yearlings biting each other playfully as they trotted along, and young mares as light and graceful in their airs as a bevy of schoolgirls.

In the interest of this scene of pastoral life and freedom I had almost forgotten the prowling beast of prey who, but a few moments ago, was dogging my footsteps and who was perhaps at that very instant watching the unconscious band and choosing from its number some particularly fat and juicy member for his morning meal. The black stallion suddenly paused in the pathway, put his nose to the earth like a dog, raised one of his forefeet, and gave a wild snort of fear. He had scented the trail of the mountain terror, and, turning quickly, galloped rapidly back up the canyon. Most of his band followed, snorting and giving short neighs of terror. In an instant one young mare who had left the path to snatch a mouthful of tempting grass upon the hillside alone remained, and she seemed not to have recognized the signal of danger, for she lifted her head leisurely, and then seeing the flanks and tails of her fleeing friends trotted after them.

At this moment, glancing across the gulch, I saw a huge mountain lion leap lightly upon the trunk of a tree which leaned over the gulch nearly opposite to me and just above the retreating mare. A moment he rested upon the trunk and then launched himself with a graceful spring, landing squarely upon the back of the horse, fixing his claws in her shoulders and resisting every attempt to shake him off. A loud shriek of brute terror and agony was heard, and the mare, feeling that terrible weight upon her back, stood trembling with fear. The lion lost no time. Leaning over her shoulders he fastened his fangs in her neck, where he hung fast, sucking her life away.

For a moment I had been stupefied by the suddenness of the attack, but now pity for the young mare and anger at the boldness and cruelty of her fierce assailant filled me. Without a thought of consequences I reached for my revolver, took quick aim and fired. This sudden interruption of his bloody feast, and the pain of my bullet, which, as I afterward learned, struck him in one of the fore paws, caused him to release his hold and drop to the ground, and the terrified mare sprang away like the wind up the canyon path. I had saved her life, but as I came down from my perch to get a better view of the situation I realized that my chivalry had brought me into danger. The lion crouched where he had fallen, growling savagely and licking his wounded paw. Suddenly he saw me, and, recognizing the cause of his discomfiture, prepared to attack me.

"I was now but a few paces off, and again leveled my revolver and fired. The shot went wide of the mark, and I saw that I was now at the mercy of the very claws from which I had freed the mare. I braced myself to receive the spring, and grasped my revolver by the barrel to use over the lion's head. I had weighed all my chances and decided there was no escape, when suddenly, almost as the lion rose to spring upon me, the report of a rifle rang and reechoed along the canyon walls, and the tawny brute lay rolling in his death agony.

"Jones, the ranchman, hearing the cry of his terrified stallion, had grasped his rifle and rushed to the rescue. His steps were hastened by the cry of the mare, and when he stood in the mouth of the gulch and saw the animal ready to spring upon me his hand was nerved to his task and the bullet did its work unerringly."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Curious Telephone Line.

A curious telephone line has been working for the last three years between two private houses in the suburbs of London, England. The singular point about the line consists in the use of an electric-light circuit for telephonic communications and electric lighting purposes either independently or simultaneously. The interference when the two lines are working is so slight as to be barely noticeable and a novice would never guess from the slight rustling heard when the engine is running that a ten or twelve amphere current was passing along the line and that the vocal sounds were being produced by a slight variation caused by the respective telephone transmitters at either end of the line. The length of the line is comparatively short, as the houses between which it runs are only a quarter of a mile apart. The wires at either end are tapped for the telephone in the particular room required by simply connecting a short length of wire from the lead to the terminal of the telephone.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

Faith and Works.

A peculiar sort of a parson in a Highland glen, much given to contradiction, was debating with a boatman one day, while crossing a small river, about faith and works. The minister contended that faith without works was good. "Na, na," retorted the boatman, with much seriousness, "faith without works 'll no do. I'll gie you an instance. We'll ca' this oar 'faith' an' this ither oar 'works.' Very well. Tak' faith first," and while rowing with it alone the boat went round and round. "Now," said the boatman, "let's tak' 'works' next," and rowing with it alone the boat went round the other way. "We will noo," continued the boatman, "tak' 'faith' an' 'works' tegither. Noo," said he, triumphantly, as he rowed with both oars at the same time, "we can get over the water; an' this is the only way that we can get over the troubled ocean o' the warl' tae the peaceful' shores o' immortality!"—Scottish-American.

Zach Taylor's Wife Liked Her Pipe.

Zachary Taylor never felt at his ease in the white house. He was rather portly and had a big head covered with luxuriant white hair. Whenever he appeared in public and was greeted with applause, he would wave his hand and say: "Your humble servant, ladies; heaven bless you, gentlemen." He was fond of morning walks through the streets of Washington, wearing an old silk hat perched on the back of his head and a black broadcloth suit much too large for him. His wife took little or no part in society, but remained quietly at home knitting and smoking her pipe.—Augusta Chronicle.

THE DAIRY.

THE DAIRYMAN'S COW.

Surprises Which a Thorough Test Will Sometimes Bring Out.

There are good cows in all breeds, including the native, but none of them will return a profit to their owners unless they are properly fed and cared for. A good cow will not respond in a good flow of rich milk if fed dry timothy hay, rotten cornstalks or straw, nor if forced to stand out and face blizzards and shiver on the lee side of a barbed wire fence. Such treatment and food are for reduction and not production. We have seen herds of cows standing in the blinding storm, as if their owners were trying to find out by experiment which of them could stand the most abuse. Such treatment is expensive and costs cash in food and butter fats. The owner cannot afford it. To do better will be to improve upon such barbarous treatment.

If a man does not know better in this age of improvements, books, farmers' institutes and agricultural papers, than to thus abuse his cows and waste his foods, he should learn better or go out of the dairy business. On stormy days every animal should be in a warm, comfortable stable, and be fed and watered there. The temperature of the cow's body is about ninety-eight degrees, and it must be maintained with food and shelter. Such treatment of a cow as we saw meant excess of food. Again, milk contains 87 per cent. water, showing the necessity of furnishing the cow that is giving milk all she will drink just when she needs it, and at a proper temperature, which should not be below 50°. Given ice water to drink, she must, to bring it to the temperature of her body, use some extra food to keep the fire burning inside to heat it—another loss to her owner, both in foods and butter fats. So then, if you are going to pursue such a system of care and feeding, it will not matter much which breed of cows you select.

If, on the contrary, you are going to join the procession of intelligent, progressive dairymen who are traveling in a better path and practicing a better way, buy a test and scale, then weigh and test the milk of each cow in your herd. The revelation will be a big surprise to you, as it has been to every man who has made the tests. You will find some of your cows which you thought were the best, the poorest in the herd, and vice versa. Test thoroughly, then weed out all that are getting trusted for their board and stable rent, and who will never pay you a cent for it all. Don't keep free cow boarding houses all winter and come out in the spring with empty hay mows and corn bins, and with nothing but a lot of half-starved cows and no cash to show for it.

Each cow has an individuality; develop this, and if it is high enough to pay a cash dividend, retain her; if she is losing money for you, turn her over to the butcher. The cow is a machine and should be kept for profit, not sentiment; for making the largest possible amount of butter, not the giving of a large amount of worthless milk. The manufacturer throws out the old, worn out machine and replaces it with another. He does not hesitate and say, "I cannot afford it," but on the contrary, "I cannot afford to do without it."—J. Powell, in Field and Farm.

CHURNING TEST.

Cream From Fresh Cows and Strippers Compared.

During the last six week's session of a class in the Minnesota Dairy school, the milk from the Station herd of cows was used exclusively, which afforded the opportunity to make some trials in the relative churnability of the milk from cows that had not advanced over six months in their period of milk giving, and milk from what are generally termed "strippers." No special examination was made as to exhaustive churning, but a record was kept as to the time required to make each churning. The herd was divided into two lots, one contained the milk from the cows which had not given milk over six months, the other was milk from the strippers. Care was taken to give each student the same quantity of cream, two gallons, and that the churns containing the cream from the fresh cows and those containing the cream from the strippers were turned at the same velocity. It required on an average forty-nine minutes to churn the cream from the strippers, and fifty minutes the cream from the balance of the herd. I had expected that it would require more time to churn the cream from the strippers than from the others. The theory that cream taken by the centrifugal process will churn more quickly than that raised by the gravity process, was shown to be correct. The average time required to churn the cream from the separator was only twenty minutes, not half the time required to churn the cream raised by the gravity process. From these tests it appears that cream from cows in advanced lactation churns as quickly as does that from cows comparatively fresh.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Dairy Notes.

—A good silo, well filled, is the first step toward making winter dairying profitable. A field of evergreen corn would be a good thing to fill it with.—Western Rural.

—Of average milk, one hundred pounds will make four to four and one-half pounds of butter. But of some milk the same quantity will produce seven pounds.—The difference in profit is apparent.—Prairie Farmer.

—The longer cows are in milk, the harder the work to get up the fat globules. It is an advantage to such milk to dilute it. There is no advantage in diluting the milk of fresh cows. You will also find it valuable to dilute cream in winter time with a little warm water.—Farm and Home.

—A grade Ayrshire cow, five years old, which has never eaten any kind of grain, gave recently, on a seven days' test, 338 pounds 3 ounces of milk, from which 14 pounds 12 ounces of butter were made. This was doing pretty well for an ordinary cow on ordinary pasture.—N. Y. Examiner.

—There is no truth in the old saying that "kicking cows give rich milk." That some of them do is not questioned, and they are tolerated on this account; it is the redeeming feature, and because they are profitable milkers they are retained. The chronic kicker rarely ever forgets her meanness and reforms. An animal given to this habit is a nuisance, and the shortest cut to get at her usefulness is to test her ability, and despite other considerations, let her fate be decided thereby.—Colman's Rural World

A QUACK IN AFRICA.

He Took Cattle as Fees and Soon Acquired a Thousand Animals.

A German agent in the southwest African possessions of Germany writes to headquarters in Berlin that confidence men and scamps have invaded even that sparsely settled and half-savage region. He says that a year ago a white man went wandering through the country carrying on his back a bag filled with medical nostrums. Little attention was paid to him, but it was found later that he knew nothing whatever of medicine, and that his little plasters, wafers and drugs were worth no more than so much fetish. He heralded his coming everywhere, just as the quack doctors do in this country, and the simple-minded natives flocked to him from far and near to secure the benefits of his wonderful treatment. He remained only two or three weeks in a place, and then would seek other fields. He took payment in cattle, and from place to place he drove his herd, which cost him nothing for food and kept rapidly increasing in size.

Finally he reappeared on the coast with a herd of about one thousand six hundred cattle out of which he had bunkoed the natives. As he had no medical skill and the contents of the mysterious bag probably were not worth ten dollars, he found the business a paying one. The natives, after he had swindled them, made up their minds as to his true character, and the German agent writes that it probably would not be safe now for any itinerate dealer in medicine and cures to travel through the country; however honest and competent he might be.

The agent says, however, that there is a fine opening in southwest Africa for some young practitioner who is having hard work building up a practice in Germany. He names the town where the young man should settle, and says he is confident that a few years' practice among the natives there would enable him to return to Germany with a snug little fortune. The agent will exercise great care to prevent any more quacks and humbugs from getting into the country and giving the natives an unfavorable impression of all white men.—Chicago Times.

AN ADEPT AT RESIGNING.

The Accountant's Novel Method of Taking a Vacation.

Living in a fashionable town within commuting distance of New York is a gentleman who invariably attracts attention by his long hair. Strangers always conclude that he is nothing less than a great lawyer or bank president. When the more curious ask his fellow-townsmen about him they are told the following story;

One day the gentleman, who is one of the best accountants in the metropolis, stepped up to the president of the bank by which he is employed and said he had decided to resign and that the resignation must go into effect immediately.

The president was loth to lose so valuable a man and urged him to reconsider the matter. He talked with him for an hour but to no purpose. The employe, whose skill as a mathematician was beyond anything ever met with by the officials of the bank, was bound to leave the institution but absolutely refused to give any reason for his doings.

The accountant left that day and the bank was obliged to get along as best it could without him.

Ten days later the cashier was astonished on entering the bank to find the accountant hard at work at his old desk. The mathematician said good morning, just as he had done every day for years before he resigned, but offered no explanation.

The president and cashier decided to let their strange-acting employe keep at his work and ask no questions.

Three months later the accountant went into the president's office again and tendered his resignation. It was accepted, and the man was absent for a week or more. Then he suddenly returned.

The same thing was repeated again and again. Now it is a standing joke in that bank that the accountant has resigned. It is his way of taking a vacation. He never stays away more than two weeks.—N. Y. Commercial.

Important Typewriter Decision.

"Judge Lacombe, sitting in the United States Circuit Court here, has, on the motion of the Remington Typewriter Company, granted an injunction against the agents of the Franklin, restraining the sale of that machine on account of infringement of Remington patents. The decision is an important one as it proves the control of the fundamental patents, and may affect other makers of typewriters. The Remington people have heretofore been quite passive, but it is stated on good authority that they are now likely to proceed against all other typewriter manufacturing companies.

"In some cases purchasers of machines which infringe Remington patents may also be proceeded against for infringement. Until these cases are definitely settled this action will deter many people from purchasing type writers which are colorable imitations of the Remington. To save a few dollars a man does not want to buy a machine with a law suit attachment, especially when the other machine is the best."—N. Y. Journalist, June 18, 1892.

BOOK NOTES.

JULES VERNE is now writing his seventy-fourth novel.

DICKENS wrote twenty-four books, comprising 1,125 characters.

THE copyright of "Barnaby Rudge" brought Dickens twenty-thousand dollars. The original agreement has been recently sold in London.

SEDGES AND GRASSES.

Curious Facts About Two Numerous Orders of Plants.

"After the grasses the most widely distributed order of plants in the world is that of the sedges," said a botanist recently. "Whereas the former are the most useful of all vegetable products to mankind the latter are among the most useless. Whether found in marshes, ditches or by running streams, flourishing in meadows and forests, or on naked rocks, growing on the loose sand of the seashore or elsewhere, they are almost uniformly worthless. Nevertheless, some few members of the family serve one purpose or another, as the rushes, which are employed in the manufacture of candles, mats and chairs. In ancient times the 'papyrus,' likewise belonging to the order, was a very precious plant indeed, affording material for writing upon. Our word 'paper' is derived from it, as everyone knows.

"The Egyptian name for papyrus was 'biblion,' from which our term 'Bible' comes. Ordinarily the plant grows in stagnant pools and lakes, but it will flourish in rapid streams, the angles of its three-cornered stem adapting themselves to break the force of the current. Although the material used for writing on is commonly supposed to have been obtained from the leaves, such was not the case. It was got by separating the thin plates of cellular tissue which lie just beneath the outer coat of the stem. These were trimmed at their edges so as to meet equally, and were laid side by side upon a flat table. Other pieces similarly cut, were laid across them at right angles. They thus formed a sheet of many pieces, which were made into one united substance, and so transformed into a single sheet by simply sprinkling them with water, the gummy matter in them disolving and causing them to adhere.

"The ancient Egyptians produced in this manner papyrus sheets of a prodigious length. One obtained by the famous traveler Belzoni was 23 feet long by 18 inches wide. From Egypt this primitive paper was for centuries exported in great quantities, especially to Greece and Rome. Until the invention of parchment—about 250 B. C.—it was employed exclusively for writings which were destined to be preserved. However, parchment did not for a long time supersede papyrus, the demand for which at Rome continued for a considerable period after the beginning of the Christian era. The supply was interrupted by the invasion of Egypt by the Saracens in the seventh century, and from that time on parchment was employed almost exclusively as a substitute. Nevertheless its manufacture was continued as late as the eleventh century.—Washington Star.

STARVING THE TEETH.

Our Food Deficient in the Elements That Make Bone.

Teeth are just as easily starved to death as the stomach. In one way it is a blessing to have been born of poor parents. What food the poor give to their children is of the variety that goes to make strong bones and teeth. It is the outside of all the grains, of all cereal foods, that contains the carbonate and phosphate of lime and traces of other earthly salts which nourish the bony tissue and build the frame up.

If we do not furnish to the teeth of the young that pabulum they require, they can not possibly be built up. It is the outside of corn, oats, wheat, barley and the like, or the bran, so-called, that we sift away and feed to the swine, that the teeth actually require for their proper nourishment. The wisdom of man has proven his folly, shown in every succeeding generation of teeth, which become more fragile and weak. These flouring mills are working destruction upon the teeth of every man, woman and child who partake of their fine bolted flour. They sift out the carbonates and the phosphates of lime in order that they may provide that fine white flour which is proving a whitened sepulchre to teeth.

Oatmeal is one of the best foods for supplying the teeth with nourishment. It makes the dentine, cementum and enamel strong, flint-like and able to resist all forms of decay. If you have children, never allow any white bread upon your table. Bread made of whole wheat ground, not bolted, so that the bran which contains the minute quantities of lime is present, is best. To make a good, wholesome, nourishing bread, take two bowls of wheat meal and one bowl of white or bolted flour and make by the usual process. Nothing is superior to brown bread for bone and teeth building. This is made out of rye meal and corn meal. Baked beans, too, have a considerable supply of these lime salts and should be on your table, hot or cold, three times a week. In brushing the teeth, always brush up and down from the gum instead of across. Brush away from the gum and on the grinding surface of the teeth.—American Analyst.

The "Eating" of Clothes

—the rotting and ruining of them—won't show right away. Your new washing powder may be dangerous, but you'll have to wait a little for its results. It is doing its work, though. After a while, your clothes go to pieces, all at once.

Now isn't it better not to run any risk? Isn't it better to trust to an article like Pearline, which has been tried and tested and proved? Pearline is the original washing compound, with 15 years of success. Hundreds of millions of packages have been consumed. All the other so-called washing compounds are followers and imitations of it.

Send it Back — Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 343 JAMES PYLE, New York.

IT IS A DUTY you owe yourself and family to get the best value for your money. Economize in your footwear by purchasing W. L. Douglas Shoes, which represent the best value for prices asked, as thousands will testify.
TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN,
THE BEST SHOE IN THE WORLD FOR THE MONEY.

A genuine sewed shoe, that will not rip, fine calf, seamless, smooth inside, flexible, more comfortable, stylish and durable than any other shoe ever sold at the price. Equals custom made shoes costing from $4 to $5.

$4 and $5 Hand-sewed, fine calf shoes. The most stylish, easy and durable shoes ever sold at these prices. They equal fine imported shoes costing from $8 to $12.

$3. 50 Police Shoe, worn by farmers and all others who want a good heavy calf, three soled, extension edge shoe, easy to walk in, and will keep the feet dry and warm.

$2. 50 Fine Calf, $2.25 and $2 Workingmen's Shoes will give more wear for the money than any other make. They are made for service. The increasing sales show that workingmen have found this out.

BOYS' $2 and Youths' $1.75 School Shoes are worn by the boys everywhere. The most serviceable shoes sold at these prices.

LADIES' $3 Hand-Sewed, $2.50, $2 and $1.75 Shoes for Misses are made of the best Dongola or fine Calf, as desired. They are very stylish, comfortable and durable. The $3 shoe equals custom made shoes costing from $4 to $6. Ladies who wish to economize in their footwear are finding this out.

CAUTION.—Beware of dealers substituting shoes without W. L. Douglas' name and the price stamped on bottom. Such substitutions are fraudulent, and subject to prosecution by law for obtaining money under false pretences.

ASK FOR W. L. DOUGLAS' SHOES.

If not for sale in your place send direct to Factory, stating kind, size and width wanted. Postage free. Will give exclusive sale to shoe dealers and general merchants where I have no agents. Write for Catalogue. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

DELANO DIARY

—A. F. Corey is increasing his stock daily.

—Feed mills are again being started up after their summers rest.

—The city grocery delivery wagon is to be seen often on our streets.

—Tomper's confectionery receives its share of the lovers of sweets.

—Frank Cramer is another of our rising young men who objects to being abused by the Eagle so often.

—John Klick smilingly greets his patrons at his old stand on River street and anticipates a rush after harvest.

—J. D. Young has purchased the old bank building and is putting up a livery barn. Opposition is the life of trade.

—An account of the Democratic State Convention with the Democratic platform, can be found on the inside of this paper.

—Mrs Charlie Eppel was in on Fair day to assist the boys in the store. Most all the farmers find an excuse to visit Delano on Fair day.

—The shrill whistle of the thresher engine is again heard in the land. Several crops of rye have been threshed, turning out satisfactorily to the farmers.

—George P. Schaffer says he has never been sorry he moved his place of business as his customers followed him and many new ones have been added to his list.

—Ennis N. Brandon has purchased a half-interest in the livery business of Danforth Bros, and the new firm will occupy the old Young's hotel barn. Competition in this line will be red hot.

—Every Democrat should provide himself with the GAZETTE, at least during the campaign, so that he may keep posted on the Democratic doings and the anti democratic doings in the county.

—A long list of names has been secured to the membership of the Delano Cleveland Club, which meets at 7:30 p. m. on Saturday, Aug. 27, at the city hall, to have one of the most rousing meetings of the campaign. Come everybody.

—The Delano Furniture Company appear to be picking up their share of the trade. Farmers are becoming better able to have good furniture than they were a few years ago when three legged stools, made at home, took the places now occupied by nice chairs of modern make.

—Some two or three weeks since the village council ordered the street commissioner to secure teams and clean the alleys where notices had been given by the board of health, but so far no move has been made, although sufficient notice was given a long time ago.

—E. J. Swedeback is building a new house on land leased from August Berneck, to be occupied by Yancy's barber shop while Mrs. Swedeback will open up a stock of millinery in her old quarters which Mr. Yancy will vacate.

—John Plathner is opening up a fine new stock of general merchandise at the old Swedeback stand on River street where he will be pleased to meet all his old customers. Johnny is well and favorably known in our community and will doubtless receive his share of the patronage.

—Wm. Stanley, one of Franklin's enterprising agriculturists, was in on Monday. He says his wheat would go about 30 bushels to the acre but he is willing to give more than half of it for harvesting the crop. He thinks three weeks more will give him the finest corn crop he ever raised.

—Edward Schumacher, an old settler of Frankfort town, died August 6, 1892. In an accident which happened to him about a month ago by horses running away he had a leg broken and was hurt internally, the latter injury seems to have been the cause of his death. Ed. served in the late unpleasantness down south, and was a man of stereling character and was respected by all who knew him. May he rest in peace.

—One of the Eagle's force has Gott a new gallie of which he is quite proud.

—James Danforth has sold his interest in the livery business to Wm. Jacobs.

—Call at Green's for an enlarged photograph of any photo you may have on buying $15.00 worth of goods.

—Don't fail to hear the "Silver Tongued Orator" Chris. A. Galligher at the City Hall on Saturday evening Aug. 27.

—Mrs. Ida Willard, two daughters and her sister, Miss Lillie Coburn, all of St. Paul, are visiting the Lange family in this city.—St. Peter Tribune.

—Last Saturday Richard Dunn was placed on the soliciting committee for names to the Democratic Club. We understand that ne has Dunn well.

—Ferdenand Kelsey is building a neat little house on North River street, which we hear, he expects in the near future, to occupy as a residence.

—Most of our farmers in this vicinity have good reason to be thankful to a kind providence for providing them with an abundant harvest in good shape for harvesting.

—M. A. O'Hair's residence under the supervision of Swedeback & Erickson is assuming a metropolitan appearance. We don't know if it will be "green gables" or not.

—Presiding Elder, John Stafford, one of the ablest of Minnesota's Methodist preachers will preach and hold quarterly meeting services at the M. E. church next Monday evening. August 15, at 7:45 p. m.

—At the meeting of the Delano Dramatic Club held last week the following officers were elected: Manager, E. H. Bowen; Pres., C. J. Buckley; Treas., J. C. Hitz; Secy., H. E. Grafft. The club intend to put on the play, "After Ten Years," at Buffalo during the teachers' institute.

—During Sunday night's storm the lighting struck the tower on the City Hall but done little damage further than tearing off a few shingles. The electric fluid followed the bell pipe down to the ground. A tree in Charley Conzet's yard also caught a charge as did the tree on top the hill near Charles Eppes place.

—Read the notice of Teachers' Institute in another column. This institute is paid for out of the State Treasury, for the purpose of brightening up our county teachers, and they should make it a point to be present as much of the time as possible, and reap the benefit to be passed along to their pupils.

—Considerable of an excitement was occasioned on south River street the other evening by several children getting into a fight and their mothers coming to reinforce the respective combatents. Eye witnesses say it was a sight to see the women sorting out their children and to hear the cuss words of a women or two was terrible.

—Mrs. Morrison, the new landlady at Young's Hotel, gave a reception on Wednesday evening. Quite a houseful of our citizens were entertained pleasantly. The cornet band furnished music until about 9 o'clock when Messrs. Coolen, Billings and Blackwell commenced with fife and drums, which seemed to stir the audience much more effectually than the full band. Ice cream and cake were served which would compare favorably with city makes. The hotel has been put in elegant shape and we predict it will be known as a good house to stop at by the traveling public, and a benefit to to the village.

Cleveland Club.

Pursuant to call a meeting was held in the city hall on Saturday afternoon, for the purpose of organizing a Cleveland Club. The meeting was called to order and F. J. Brandes elected chairman and T. J. Catlin secretary. On motion M. A. O'Hair was elected president; Wm. Ziebarth, secretary and A. W. Wittman, treasurer of the Cleveland club.

On motion a committee was appointed consisting of Richard Dunn, Earnest Otto, Paul Janekula, Charles Weise, James Sherry and William Sturman, Jr., to solicit names for members of the club.

A committee consisting of H. E. Grafft, A. W. Wittman and T. J. Catlin was appointed on constitutions and by-laws.

On motion it was voted to hold a meeting on three weeks from to-night (Aug. 27) at 7:30 p. m. at which we will have present a speaker from abroad. Meeting adjourned.

T. J. CATLIN, Sec'y.

List of Patents.

Granted to Minnesota inventors this week. Reported by C. A. Snow & Co., Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C:

R. Ashworth, St. Cloud, hawser clamp; W. Herrick, Russell, car coupling; B. Horovitz, Stillwater, Rubber shoe; A. H. Kirk, Fergus Falls, wheat seperator; A. Meron, St. Paul, combined kitchen cabinet and ironing board; R. S. Pease, Rose, sporting trap; J. Pfleger, Minneapolis, velocipede; G. E. Purple and C. W. Purple, Minneapolis, trolley for electric cars; H. S. Sutton, St. Paul, music chart.

Personals.

Tom Rader, of Dassel, visited Delano friends this week.

George Blackwell returned from Minneapolis on Monday.

W. W. Holcomb, the music man, was in our village on Wednesday.

Fritz Kasheimer was among visitors to the Sawdust city this week.

John Elliott, one of Rockford's Democrats, was a GAZETTE caller on Tuesday.

Sylvanus Brandon, of Eden Valley, is renewing acquaintances in Delano to-day.

Messrs J. J. Quinn and Ed Powell, of Waverly were in town last night.

Jesse D. Brandon and family of Howard Lake, drove down yesterday.

Dr. Catlin visited Montrose, professionally, on Tuesday morning at an early hour.

Jim Nelson, of Minneapolis, was shaking hands with Delanoites last evening.

Miss Tillie Kliever, of Minneapolis, is visiting at Mayor Coolen's

Miss Ross, of Minneapolis, returned to her home Tuesday morning after a visit to her sister, Mrs. Geo. W. Bolton.

Willis E. Johnson and family left on Wednesday for St. Cloud, where the professor will attend the Normal School this winter.

Warren Merriman and his son Joe are at home again after spending the summer among the friends of Wisconsin.

Mrs. Morrison, with her family, from Mound City, have moved into Young's Hotel which they have leased.

A. R. Chaffee, of Independence, passed through town on Wednesday, on his way home from Bellvedier, Illinois.

John Lohmiller came home from Montrose yesterday evening. Report says he ran his own train in opposition to Jim Hill's.

Hon. Chris. A. Galligher, the "Silver Tongued Orator," will address Delano Democrats on Saturday, Aug. 27, at the City Hall.

County Attorney Cutting passed through Delano Monday evening on his return to the county seat from a professional visit at Wright county's Dublin.

A. F. Corey has been entertaining his father J. M. Corey, of Minneapolis, and his sister-in-law Mrs, C. H. Corey and daughter Minnie of Howard Lake, this week.

County Cullings.

Montrose and Maple Lake each expect to have a paper of their own this week and after, according to reports.

In winding up an article on the defunct Alliance party the Buffalo Journal says. "It is a matter of regret that honest men should be made the dupes of such unprincipaled villians" Wonder which class A. Y. belonged to?

County politics seem to be rather dormant and apt to be until the county convention is called when candidates are apt to be plenty; Be sure and get the best men your party can afford in your vicinity far delegates to the convention which is to be held at Delano and get up the best possible ticket. This is the way to win. Deserve Success and then you will get it.

The St. Paul Globe is authority for our supposing our delegates to Brainerd had a nice time it says "Billy" Quinn, Dr. O'Hair, Sheriff Nugent and J. H. Wendell represented Wright County and were in what is generally known as the very fore-front of the bald-headed row," at a theatrical performance, held while they were in Brainerd. Wright County delegates are bound to come to the front anywhere.

Suicide Near Montrose.

Special to the Globe.

MONTROSE, Minn., Aug. 10.—This morning at about 5 o'clock Samuel Bland, son of Joseph Bland, a prominent farmer who resides about three miles north of this place shot himself with a 42-caliber revolver, with suicidal intent. He did not die until 7:40 a. m. This is his seccond attempt at taking his own life, he haying tried to cut his throat about a year since.

How the Northwest Grows.

Kalispell, in the Flathead valley of Montana now a year old, has 1,509 people.

Bonner's Ferry, Idaho, has grown to a place of 500 population in six months. Steamers on Kootenai River run from there to the Nelson, Ainsworth and Kaslow mines.

What splendid agricultural, lumbering and mining resources await development in Western Montana, Northern Idaho and Eastern Washington, along the Pacific extention of the Great Northern.

Through train service begins August 14th, between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Spokane, Washington.

The extention opens up 65 new stations, and is the short line between the East and Spokane. For further information see Agent Geo. W. Bolton. 1t.

How to Improve the Voice.

Lung power and capacity may be wonderfully inreased and strengthened by a constant repetition of the syllable "ah" on the three or four notes in the voice that is the 3 or 4 notes which one sings most naturally and with the least effort. Let the pupil get one note get clear-cut, round, full, and musical; then from that note, as a starting point let him go up and down gradually working out the huskiness from the adjacent notes and sounding them until they became pure and reson-and can be delivered without strain or effort. Let him work systematically, and, above all, avoid the pernicious trick of learning "pieces" by rote or ear. His first effort should be to increase the purity and range of his voice and to that end he should as suggested above use the broad syllable "ah" only for a time; and on no account should he try to sing an air until he can do so understandingly, with a full knowledge of musical notation and and a perfect command of his vocal resources.—From "How to Sing Without a Master," in Demorest's Family Magazine for August.

Teachers Institute.

A State Teachers Institute for Wright County will be held at Buffalo commencing on Monday, at 11 o'clock, August 22nd and continuing five days conducted by Prof. W. F. Racheleau and an assistant.

Every effort will be made by the County Superintendent to bring this Institute up to the hign standard of our former Institutes.

Teachers are requested to bring teeir books and we will make this a working Institute.

One evening will be devoted to reports from the several districts of Wright County Teachers association, one to a lecture by State Supt. D. L. Kiehle: One to a sociable for the teachers; and on one evening the Delano Dramatic club will give a play in Dudleys opera House.

All of the teachers of Wright county are expected to be in attendance during the entire week.

The teachers who come and work will be greatly benefited,

F. H. Lindsley.
Co. Superintendent

Millinery Store.

I have closed my business for a three week's vacation while my old stand, now occupided by Mr. Yancy, is being fitted up, when I will open up a new and complete assortment of Millinery Goods, one of the finest ever in Delano. Silks, Ribbons, Hats, Caps, and everything usually found in a first class establishment. Look out for them at my old stand about September 1st. MRS. E. J. SWEDEBACK.

World's Fair Notes.

The Marquis de Lacaze, of Paris, has a portrait of George Washington, made by Stewart, an American painter, which he offers to lend to the World's Fair at Chicago. It was taken to France by his wife's grandfather, at one time minister to the United States. As the portrait is by an American artist, it cannot be exhibited in the French section, but the Marquis de Lacaze offers to send it over if the government will pay the charges, which it undoubtedly will do.

At the World's Fair an oyster exhibij will be made by the shell fish commission of Connecticut. An oyster bed, models of oyster boats, the system of dredging, etc., will be shown.

Two of the cannon which, it is believed, were at one time mounted on board Christopher Columbus' flagship were received at Chicago recently. The cannon are of ancient and clumsy pat tern of such guns turned out in the fifteenth century. Nothing but the body of the guns remains, the woodwork, of course, having rotted away centuries ago. The guns themselves are almost worn to pieces and are not much more than huge chunks of rust. Indeed the cannon are put on the "scrap iron" list in the custom house papers. The historic old pieces have been secured for exhibition at the World's Fair. One of the naval officers who was detailed for work in connection with the Columbian Exposition found the relics at one of the West Indian islands. Tradition and substantial proof showed that the cannon had been used in a fort erected by Columbus' son, and that they were brought from Spain with Columbus' fleet. The ruins of the fort are still to be seen.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage duly made, executed and delivered by G. O. Trow and his wife Abbie Trow, as mortgagors, to George E. Bull as mortgagee, bearing date the first day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty seven (1887) with a power of sale therein contained, which mortgage was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Wright and State of Minnesota on the twenty-second (22) day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven (1887), at nine (9) o'clock a. m. in book four (4) of mortgages on page one (1).

Whereas said mortgage was given to secure the payment at maturity of the sum of nine hundred ($900) dollars with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, according to the conditions of ten (10) cupon notes bearing even dates with said mortgage. Whereas said mortgagee did on the 30th day of April 1892 pay taxes for the years 1890 and 1891 then due and unpaid as follows, to-wit: For the year 1890 the sum of ten dollars and seventy eight cents, for the year 1891, the sum of thirty-nine dollars and forty-eight cents, which sum is also claimed to be recovered as an additional loan on said lands and whereas there is claimed to be due and there is due and unpaid on said mortgage and on the notes secured thereby at the date of this notice the sum of ten hundred and sixty-two dollars and seventy cents ($1062.70) principle and interest besides the taxes paid as aforesaid, and interest on said taxes amounting to the sum of one dollar and forty cents and whereas no proceedings at law or in equity has been instituted to recover said mortgage debt or taxes as aforesaid, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sail of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage to-wit: Lot number one (1) and block number thirteen (13) situated in the village of Cokato, Wright county, Minnesota, according to the duly recorded plat of record, in the Register of Deeds office in and for the county of Wright and state of Minnesota, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of saidoWright county at the front door of the court house in the village of Buffalo in said county on Thursday, the twenty-ninth (29) day of September, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two (1892) at two o'clock p. m. at public vendue to the highest bidder, for cash, to pay said mortgage debt, principle and interest and taxes paid as aforesaid with costs of these proceedings, together with the sum of thirty-five ($35) dollars attorney's fee stipulated in said mortgage to be paid in case of foreclosure.

Dated August 10, 1892.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

For Congressman,

HON. J. M. CASTLE, has been renominated to Congress from the 4th district.

I. DONNELLY and Judge McDonald opened the People's party campaign last night in Minneapolis. A big meeting is reported.

ALTHOUGH that noted orator, the Alliance candidate, has withdrawn, there is still in the field a full quartette of gubernatorial candidates. Lawler, Nelson, Donnelly and Dean promise to keep things lively.

ONE of the most viscious and costly and abused liberties our legislators have had is that of enacting special legislation. Hunt up the proposed amendment to the constitution to be voted on at the coming election and see what you think of it and vote intelligently on the subject. It is the first chapter in the general laws of the last session of the legislature. The laws sent out as a supplement to nearly every newspaper in the state after the close of the last session. Counties, towns, corporations and individuals are granted privileges in altogether too loose a manner, and it is time that something be done.

THE Litchfield News Ledger quotes from the GAZETTE that "Tariff is a Tax, Daniel W. Lawler says so. Tariff is a Tax, the GAZETTE says so," and says, "This settles it of course," and further says that "a large number of smart men in this country say that the tariff is not a tax." Wonder where the News Ledger finds that kind of smart men. It can't be McKinley for he has been around trying to convince people that the foreigners pay the tariff. It can't be C. K. Davis, unless he has changed since his great speech on binding twine. It can't be Knute Nelson, for he knew better than that when he supported the Mills Bill. Point 'em out News Ledger, point 'em out.

What is a tariff?
A tax.
What for?
To raise money to run the Government.
Who pays it?
The people that use the goods on which tariff is collected.
What do Republicans want to do?
They want to make the tax so high on some goods that they cannot be brought here from other countries.
Where is the wrong in that?
People in this country must in some instances put up with poor goods at high prices or go without many things.
What do Democrats want to do?
They want no more tax than is actually necessary to pay government expenses and that distributed equally on the people.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Aug. 12, 1892.

The Republicans are doing lots of loud talking about Democratic rainbow chasing, which is all they pretend to think that the preparations to make an aggressive Democratic campaign in Illinois, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin, will amount to; but it is a well-known fact that among themselves Republicans admit to each other that the states named are extremely doubtful with the chances against the Republicans; and, I know, that Chairman Carter has approved and promised to put up the money to put in operation a scheme by which it is hoped to gain enough electoral votes from the southern states to offset probable Republican losses in the northwest. The southern states in which this scheme is to be operated are the two Virginias, Tennessee, and North Carolina, and in Alabama an attempt is to be made by the Repuplican managers to throw the solid negro vote to the People's party national and congressional tickets, hoping thus to keep this state out of the Democratic column. Southern Democrats who come to Washington are unanimous in saying that whatever the opinion of voters in that section may be on other questions, Republican advocacy of the force bill has made it certain that every southern state will cast its electoral vote for Cleveland and Stevenson.

At the headquarters of the Democratic congressional campaign committee in this city things are humming, which shows that the greates interest is being taken in the congressional fight by the voters of the country. The committee has already distributed more than 1,000,000 copies of speeches, principally on the tariff, and has in addition sent out a vast quantity of other campaign material, and the committee is fortunate enough to have all the money necessary to keep up the work to the end of the campaign, supplying every demand for documents that may be made upon it. Representative Holman's statement of the appropriations made by the first session of the Fifty-second Congress is now being distributed and present indications are that it will have a very wide circulation, as will the statement concerning appropriations made by the House prepared by Representatives Sayers and Dockery, prominent members of the House committee on appropriations. It is rather early yet to make specific predictions but from the advices of the committee there is nothing to indicate that the Democrats will not have a good working majority in the next House. It is hardly to be expected that the present phenomenal majority will be retained.

Senator Carisle has written a letter to one of his constituents defining his position on the silver question, in which he says: "I believe that the gold and silver bullion should be treated exactly alike in the mints of the United States—that is, that a dollar's worth of gold should be coined into a gold dollar and a dollar's worth of silver into a silver dollar, and if no charge is made for coining the one, then no charge should be made for coining the other. In my opinion the declaration made upon the subject by the Democratic National Convention is perfectly sound in principle and enunciates the only true public policy."

If Public Printer Palmer accedes to the demands which are being made by the Republican bosses he will find himself in very hot water next winter. There are a considerable number of Democrats employed in the Government printing office, many of them "put on" by Democratic members of the House, who found Mr. Palmer very, very obliging in the early days of Congress—he knew that the goodwill of the Democrats was absolutely necessary in a House that was two-thirds Democratic. After every session of Congress a large number employes are necessarily discharged from the office, and the Republicans have demanded of Palmer that he shall discharge only Democrats. Whether he will obey remains to be seen, but he had better be careful, as the list of discharged employes will be very carefully studied and if they are all Democrats there will be trouble for Palmer.

Local Republicans are not pleased with the notification that they have been assessed $15,000 by the National committee as their share of the campaign fund. They say the assessment is excessive.

HISTORICAL FACTS.

Pioneer Days In The Region North of Lake Minnetonka.

Written for the BUFFALO GAZETTE, by HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

ORONO.

Other settleas of Orono were: Michael Murphy and Robert McHugh about 1856. Settlers of 1858 were Joel Stubbs and family; Perry Parrish and family, of which Charles, Carlos F., Mrs. Snow, and Mrs. A. C. Bailey were members; Bradford Wakefield and family, of which John B., Thomas C., Warren, and Kee Wakefield, M. D., and Mrs. B. F. Udell and Amy (Mrs. B. F. Christlieb deceased) were members.

A CALAMITY.

On the night of October 18, 1859, a sailboat containing B. Stone and wife and their two children and three other persons; Mr. Loveland, Mr. Butterfield and Robt L. McKenzie was capsized by the wind on Lake Minnetonka, through which all on board, excepting McKenzie, lost their lives. They were removing Stone and family from Haines Bay to Minnetonka Mills by means of the sail boat, which, at the time of the disaster, was loaded with household goods besides the seven persons. The accident occurred opposite Orono point. For a time after the capsizing of the boat Mrs. Stone and the two children were kept afloat above the sail and mast by a feather bed, which was, however, insufficient to keep them afloat and resist the wind, and soon the mother and children were swept into eternity. The men sustained themselves above water by clinging to the boat, until the wind, by means of the sail turned the boat over when Mr. Stone perished. During the night Butterfield and Loveland becomming benumbed and exhausted, sank to rise no more. Mc Kenzie, who was a youth of 18 years, still clung to the boat and by the next morning, about 10 o'clock the boat had drifted to a place within ten rods of the south shore where it was stopped by weeds. Nobody being in sight at any time to come to the relief of the party, or McKenzie even after daylight, and in his benumed condition he was obliged to make the effort to swim ashore. And after swimming to the extent of his endurance furtunately touched bottom with his feet and managed to wade ashore, after which he found his way to the house of Samuel Bartow and reported the sad occurence.

OTHER SETTLERS.

B. F. Christlieb came early in May, 1859, and in 1860, Mr. and Mrs. John Fleming, parents of Wm. C. and Franklin N. Fleming, came with other members of the family, viz: John L. and Anna (Mrs. Dillman). They were accompanied by a grand child, who is now S. J. Wooster, M. D. During this year Andrew Cruikshank brought in his family, of which Andrew, Jr., Donald and James Cruikshank were members. John T. Coates came in 1860; W. S. Gray came in 1861 and in 1862 William J. Lydiard and wife, parents of Samuel and David Lydiard arrived with other members of the family of which Joseph H. Lydiard, Mrs. Weeks and the two Mesdames Higgins, of Hutchinson were members. They were accompanied by Andrew Brown and the family of which Mrs. Beny Drake and Mrs. Mary H. Dodge, deceased, were members. Mrs. Brown was a daughter of Wm. J. Lydiard. Christopher Dillman and wife, parents of James D. Dillman and Mrs. E. F. Walsh came with the rest of the Dillman family of which Jacob, George, Mrs. Ladenberg, of Marshall and Mrs. Franklin of Delano were members.

During the Sioux war and massacre of 1862-3, the panic caused thereby especially on the occasions of the attacks and depredations on and about Acton, Forest City and Hutchinson, extended far beyond those localities into the Big Woods, and soon the roads leading to Minneapolis were lined with people, on foot and with ox and horse teams, fleeing in apprehension of Indians, and it seemed that the panic became more intense, as the distance from the scenes of bloodshed increased. While many of the fugitives went to the cities, others congregated at certain places during night time. In the vicinity of Long Lake the places at which the people at that locality and those who had fled from the vicinity of Watertown and from Wright and Meeker counties thus far, assembled on those occasions, were George Knettles, John A. Colemans, shores of Long Lake, Isaac A. Christlieb's and James Johnston. Precautions being taken to have sentries placed on the lookout for Indians. A block house or log fortress was then erected on the premises of John A. Coleman about September, 1862 as a place of refuge, in case of an attact from the Indians. It stood on the present townsite of Long Lake, lot 17, block 1. It never became necessary to use the structure for the purpose for which it was erected. Those scenes mostly took place in August and September, 1862, there was a repetition of them to some extent about July 1, 1863, on the occasions of the massacre of the Dustin family near Smith Lake, and the shooting of Little Crow by Lampson, which was intensified by a report of several Indians being seen near James Mooney's north of Long Lake.

In 1861 and the years following, the locality constituting the present town of Orono furnished a considerable number of soldiers upon the different calls for troops to subdue the Rebellion and Indian outbreak of 1862. The following are names of soldiers from that locality, viz:

DELANO, Wright Co., - MINN.

MASSACHUSETTS has four surviving ex-governors—Boutwell, Claflin, Rice and Butler—all of whom were born in 1818.

THE highest price ever paid for a horse was $150,000, the amount paid by Senator Stanford to Malcolm Forbes for Axtell.

IT is just one hundred years since the Cornishman, William Murdock, discovered that coal gas might be used as an illuminant.

THE census of India, just completed, shows that country to have a population of 288,000,000, a gain of 11 per cent. in ten years.

THE number of cigars, cigarettes and cheroots smoked in this country last year is placed at about 7,442,000 by a recent government report.

RAIN has only fallen twice in twenty-nine years in Aden, Arabia. Previous to the last rain, which occurred in 1888, none had fallen in twenty-six years.

A MAINE woman with a lazy husband tried to rasp the beard from the lawn with the machine upside down. She was so mad when her husband laughed at her that he has had to split all of the family wood since.

NOTHING ever has more clearly demonstrated the superstitious ignorance of the lower classes in India and Russia than the mobs which have killed the doctors and nurses and destroyed hospitals in the cholera infected districts.

THE custodian of the Washington monument at Washington says that the foundation of the shaft has risen instead of lowered, and consequently the shaft is growing higher. He should reflect that Washington carefully abstained from telling any himself.

AT the rural points in Maine, where they know how, flying kites to which lighted Chinese lanterns are attached is a very popular amusement. A good-sized kite will carry a number of lanterns, and the effect when it is some distance in the air is very striking.

THE American school-teacher is drawing $80,000,000 annually. The fact that many of them go off and get married in the very teeth of the boards of education shows how high a value is placed on the genus Homo Americanus by bright women who are right up to snuff.

THERE is a prize of 100,000 francs in the treasury of the French Academy of Sciences for the man who will discover some means of communicating with the people of Mars. The great trouble about getting the money is that the man who does the signaling must get an answer.

AT the general conference of American rabbis in New York it was declared as the voice of the conference that the women shall have an equal share with the men in all the affairs of the synagogue, and at the next meeting of the rabbis, in the fall of 1893, plans will be presented for an organization of the congregations which will give woman her full rights in that church.

A WOMAN has made an invention at last that will be appreciated by "the lords of creation." It is an instrument attached to a platter which holds a fowl in place while it is being carved and dished out. With the aid of this device the most awkward carver can dissect an old goose as easily as he can cut a piece of pumpkin pie, and never have occasion to remark that the knife is dull.

THE Salvation Army is to have a cavalry troop for each state to ride over the country districts and small towns which cannot support a regular force of soldiers or a barracks. This idea of cavalry in the Salvation Army originated in California, where it is said to be very successful in the country districts. Commander Ballington Booth has decided to adopt it in other states and make it a permanent feature of the Salvation work.

FROM a nuisance and cumberer of the ground cotton seed has become of immense commercial value. The residuary products of the manufacture of gas used to go to poison the air; now every particle is utilized. Before many years the sewage of cities will be utilized for the manufacture of fertilizers. And for farmers who are burning their flax straw, there are better things in prospect. Man's victory over nature is not yet complete, but no other era of the world ever saw such rapid strides.

CITIES in Australia, like those in America, are fast absorbing the great mass of the population. Of the 1,140,000 inhabitants of Victoria 491,000 reside in Melbourne and its suburbs, while more than one-third of the remainder live in other large towns. New South Wales has a population of 1,134,000, of which 386,000 live in Sydney and its suburbs. Of the 315,000 people in South Australia, 130,000 reside in Adelaide. Queenstown, the colony last organized, has wonderful agricultural resources, and we should expect most of the people to live on farms. But 93,000 of the 393,000 live at Brisbane.

THE king of Uganda, which is called the garden of central Africa, changes his religious views every few months and expects all his subjects to change theirs at the same time. Not long ago he roasted everyone who embraced Christianity. But some French missionaries converted him, and he insists that his subjects shall become Catholics. At last accounts he was a Protestant, and he has asked the commander of the British East African Company to aid him to expel the French soldiers and priests. The prospect now is that the English will possess the country unless the king turns Mohammedan.

FOR a century ending with the breaking out of the civil war about half the vessels constructed in the United States were built in Maine. During the past few years there has been a rivalry of ship building in Maine, and the shipyards at Bath present the lively appearance they did years ago. The vessels built there have been constructed of wood, of which Maine furnishes the best varieties. Last year two iron vessels for our navy were built there that gave admirable satisfaction. This year the builders of these cruisers are constructing several iron steamers and sailing vessels for commercial purposes.

Epitome of the Week.

INTERESTING NEWS COMPILATION.

FROM WASHINGTON.

THE treasury department has decided that a foreigner who makes a contract in this country to work here and then returns to his own country cannot come back to the United States for the purpose of fulfilling the contract without violating the provisions of the alien contract labor law.

LATER NEWS.

Militia Called Out.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 15.—The only event that relieved the daylight monotony of events on the Buffalo & Southwestern yesterday was a little episode which occurred next to the lumber yard just east of the Elk street crossing. About 4:30 p. m. an engine was pulling a freight train into the city when twenty or thirty of the striking switchmen came up from behind the lumber yard, boarded the cars, set the brakes, stalled the train, pulled the coupling pins, threw pins and links into a stagnant pool at the side of the track and disappeared. The engineer ran down to a crossing, got a new supply of pins and links, and hauled the train in with policemen on every car.

One of the strikers said he would tomorrow morning prefer charges against three policemen who had boarded a train and set the brakes to frustrate the work of the switchmen. The two Buffalo switchmen stationed in Buffalo Creek Junction were ordered out by the union to-day. Others stationed at Seneca street adopted a like course of action.

The Sixty-fifth regiment has been sent to Cheeklowaga to guard the Lehigh Valley and the Erie yards the rest of the night.

The Fortieth regiment has been called out to protect the Central and West Shore property, it being feared that the switchmen on these roads may go out to-night. No disturbance is reported to-night at the Cheeklowaga yards, except the burning of one empty Lehigh freight car at 8:30 p. m.

WITHOUT BAIL.

Lizzie Borden Held to Answer the Charge of Murdering Her Father and Stepmother.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 13.—Lizzie C. Borden was arraigned in the second district court before Judge J. C. Blaisdell Friday morning charged with the killing of her father and stepmother. The courtroom was crowded to suffocation. Miss Borden's friends at court were very few in number. Mr. Morse, Bridget Sullivan, Miss Emma Borden and City Missionary Buck were present. Miss Borden, the prisoner, was represented by Andrew J. Jennings. She was dressed in a dark-blue tailor-made gown and wore a black-lace hat adorned with a few red berries. She entered the courtroom leaning on Missionary Buck's arm. She was somewhat nervous, but did not show either tears or trembling. She was given a seat beside her counsel. Her sister Emma and Rev. E. A. Buck occupied a seat in front of the prisoner's dock.

The trial was commenced by the entering of a plea signed and sworn to by the prisoner. It recited that the prisoner objected to the opening of a trial before a justice who was already sitting at an inquest held to determine who committed the crime charged against her. This plea was overruled for the time being, and the judge asked for the reading of the complaint. The reading was waived and Mr. Jennings said he would enter a plea of not guilty. District Attorney Knowlton, who was conducting the prosecution, insisted that Miss Borden plead herself.

Augustus B. Leonard, clerk of the court, asked her to stand up, which she did firmly and without assistance. She was then asked to plead to charges of homicide and did so in a very weak voice at first, saying, "Not guilty." The clerk did not hear her and she raised her voice and said in quite a loud voice, "Not guilty," putting strong emphasis on the first word.

Mr. Jennings then began to argue for the acceptance of his plea that his client should not be examined at the inquest. The proceeding was contrary to all law and justice. He, as attorney for Lizzie Borden, had been refused permission to enter and guide his client while an inquiry was being made. It was not to be expected of human nature that the same judge could act at an inquest and a trial and decide fairly in both cases. The proceeding was wholly unprecedented.

District Attorney Knowlton entered a demurrer against the plea. He said he knew more than twenty cases in his career where similar proceedings were gone through with, and they failed to attract attention because the crimes were not attended by such extraordinary circumstances as those which preceded this arraignment. The matters of an inquest and the matters of a trial were entirely distinct, and it was not complimentary to his honor's judgment to say that he could not act fairly in both cases. There was hot sparring, the prisoner's counsel displaying pugnacious powers.

The government's demurrer was finally sustained and Mr. Jennings filed an exception. He moved for a trial at once. District Attorney Knowlton objected on the ground that an inquest was still going on. He asked for a continuance until Monday, August 22, and it was granted. Mr. Morse and Bridget Sullivan were held as witnesses in bail of $500 each.

Miss Borden was asked to stand up and was committed without bail. She left the courtroom leaning on Mr. Buck's arm and was closely followed by City Marshal Hilliard, who again placed her in charge of Matron Russell. Miss Borden was taken to Taunton jail later in the afternoon.

Marshal Hilliard said that there was a great deal yet to be proven before the crime could be finally fastened upon Miss Borden.

INUNDATIONS IN JAPAN.

Ashigawa River Rose Twenty-Four Feet—Hundreds of Lives Lost.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 13.—Advices from Japan brought by the steamer Rio Janeiro include reports of damage done by storms and inundations at Okayama, Tokushima, Bamanashi, Gumma, Saitama, Chiba and Hyogo. Of these Okayama seems to have suffered most. Rain began falling July 20, and was followed by a terrible typhoon July 23. The Ashigawa river rose 24 feet, causing the embankment to give way in several places. Over 5,000 houses were submerged and about 100 persons drowned, in addition to which several thousand acres of cultivated land were laid waste. In Tokushima on the 23d a number of houses were blown down, while the streets were inundated through the effects of a tidal wave, forty-one persons were crushed to death through the falling of houses. Reports from Saitama-Ken concerning a whirlwind say the wind in its passage left a track of destroyed and wrecked houses, in the midst of which were found men and cattle crushed to death under rafters. Trees were either snapped or uprooted, but the damage to crops was not so great. Nitta-Gun suffered severely from the storm, which continued about two hours. Over 100 houses were demolished, six persons crushed to death and about thirty others injured. Several bridges were swept away. In Meiji-Mura and Minion-aimura fourteen houses were demolished, while forty-one persons were crushed to death and seven others injured. In Chiba and Hyogo there was some damage from inundations.

ALL ARE DEAD.

An Austrian Clerk Kills His Family and Himself.

VIENNA, Aug. 13.—A clerk in this city named Johann Singer, who had been out of employment for some time, and who saw no means of supporting the woman with whom he was living and by whom he had three children, determined to kill them and then commit suicide. The means employed was burning charcoal. He started the fire in the room in which the woman and children were asleep, and inhaling the fumes they soon died. Singer himself remained in the room and died shortly after his victims.

Run Down by a Train.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—As W. S. Gray, of Pullman, stepped from a suburban train and started south on the Illinois Central tracks toward his home Friday night he saw two men lying on the ground close to the station. One of them was dead and the other unconscious, both legs having been cut off above the knee. The dead man was William Sthiuttki, of 530 North Severson street. His companion was Oswald Wagner, who lives at the same place. The men were walking along the tracks near the Pullman station when they were struck by a south-bound train.

GAVE CASH TO A BANK.

How Funds of the Iron Hall Were Given to a Philadelphia Concern to Prevent Its Going Into a Receiver's Hands.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 13.—Supreme Justice Somerby was on the witness stand in the Iron Hall receivership case during the entire day Friday and was subjected to a rigid examination, which brought out all the facts regarding his connection with the order and the methods adopted to save the bank in Philadelphia of which he is an officer, and in which so much of the order's money is deposited.

On the point as to the assets of the order the supreme justice testified that the order owned the building in which the offices are located in this city. He thought it was probably worth $35,000. He testified that he did not know what securities in the way of bonds the order owned. It had not invested in any bonds or mortgages since he had been supreme justice. The order's money had not been loaned at interest and had not returned any profit. He said there was at the present time under the control of the supreme sitting $1,300,000 in cash. He was asked as to where the money was deposited and he said he thought about $518,000 was deposited in Indianapolis banks. He said $713,000 was transferred to his bank in Philadelphia.

Mr. Somerby then admitted that when the Mutual Trust and Banking Company (his bank) of Philadelphia was embarrassed last April he used $170,000 of the funds of the Iron Hall to avert, as he expressed it, "the wreckage of the Iron Hall through the bank."

The witness was asked a number of questions regarding the different funds in the bank, but he appeared not to be well posted upon its affairs, his only information being such as he received from others. He finally confessed that he had had trouble with one of the directors, and since that time he had not been near the bank. He was asked if a warrant was drawn for the $170,000 that was given to the bank, and replied that it was not, but confessed that the constitution required warrants to be issued for all sums drawn from the treasury.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 13.—The sub-committee of the Iron Hall, which has been engaged for some days in making an examination of the books, has finished its work and made a report, which it is claimed is authentic. The portion of the report showing the financial condition of the order is as follows:

Benefit fund—Balance on hand January 1, 1892, $1,005,518.71. Received from assessments, $1,299,639.60; from reserve fund, $160,618.02; life division, $8,300.00; division No. 3, $41,507.45; total $2,520,583.78. Disbursements—6,522 sick and disability claims, $310,686.41; 177 death benefits, $52,122.50; 1,436 final dividends, $1,033,365.00; total, $1,396,173.91. Balance on hand in benefit fund $1,124,409.87.

Reserve fund—Balance in hand of banks, including all accumulation to August 1, $1,332,403,64; reserve in the hands of the supreme cashier, $148,431.35; total, $1,500,924.99

General fund—Balance on hand December 31, 1891, $15,174.97; receipts to August 1, 1892, $70,931.16; total, $86,106 13. Disbursements—Warrants from 1,151 to 1,794, $63,166.73. Balance in general fund, $22,934.40, improved real estate, $38,000. Total assets (in all funds), $2,686,274.26.

TOILERS MANGLED.

A Score of Workmen Buried in the Ruins of a Collapsed Building.

OGDEN, N. J., Aug. 13.—A building which was being erected here fell Friday afternoon, burying twenty men beneath the ruins. One dead man and four fatally injured have already been taken from the ruins, and the work of digging out the remainder is still going on. The accident occurred by the sudden giving way of a derrick, causing the entire structure of massive wooden beams and timbers to collapse. But few of the workmen on the building escaped.

There was great excitement and a big crowd of men employed in other factories stopped work and the search for the bodies under the wreck of the collapsed building was immediately begun. The first victim taken out was an Italian workman. The man was dead. His body was terribly mangled. Soon after three others were removed in a dying condition.

Up to a late hour at night twelve men had been taken out from the ruins of the collapsed factory, all seriously and four fatally wounded. The injuries of those taken from the ruins are of the most terrible nature, the limbs of some being torn off, while the faces and bodies of others are crushed almost beyond recognition.

BOSTON STREETS FLOODED.

Much Damage Caused by a Heavy Rainfall—Many Houses Struck by Lightning—The Same Agency Destroys Two Lives and Injures Several Persons.

BOSTON, Aug. 13.—The terrific thunderstorm which swept across eastern Massachusetts Friday morning broke all records as a producer of rain and lightning. In Boston the fall of rain in the first ten minutes of the shower measured 85-100 of an inch and the total fall for the three hours during which it rained was 2 29-100 inches. Many stores were flooded in Boston, the heaviest sufferers being H. H. Cotton & Co., carpet dealers, whose stock was damaged to the extent of $15,000. Tremont street, in Boston, was in some places flooded from curb to curb, while all were temporarily transformed into rivers.

The lightning was unusually severe in Boston and vicinity. From the returns now in the record of the lightning's work in three hours is as follows: Number of dwellings and stores struck, 27; number of barns, 6; number of persons killed, 2; number of persons injured, 15.

KNIGHTS LEAVING DENVER.

The Triennial Conclave Is Over and the Templars Are Going Home.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 13.—The knights are leaving town rapidly, some to go home and others to make tours of the state. There are enough remaining, however, to make the city extremely lively. It is estimated that 109,500 visitors were in Denver this week. During the week Denver took care of a crowd of people equal to its own population. Over 300,000 pieces of baggage were handled and as many packages. The Pullman company handled 600 cars.

Will Not Order a Boycott.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 13.—The executive board of the American Federation of Labor met here Friday, and after an all-day's session decided that no boycott would be placed upon the Carnegie products at present. The reasons for this, according to an official statement given out, are that the council is of the opinion that the firm is not turning out enough material or of a quality to justify a boycott. Should it be necessary in the future to order a boycott, however, the board says it will not hesitate to do so, notwithstanding the threats of the firm to use the conspiracy law.

DISORDER AT BUFFALO.

Switchmen Strike, and Resort to Violence—Accused of Incendiarism.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 15.—There is no further disguising the fact that the strike of the Erie and Lehigh Valley switchmen is a serious matter. Whether it would have proved so very serious to the railroads to have 150 or 200 men leave their posts of duty without warning is not now the question. Property belonging to the railroad company has been destroyed by incendiary fires; men engaged in the peaceful performance of their duties have been assaulted and sent to the hospitals; the movement of trains has been seriously interfered with, and the lives of innocent persons who were in no way connected with the strike and had not even heard of it have been endangered by the derailment of a passenger train on one of the roads.

There had been more or less trouble Saturday between the strikers and their sympathizers and the men who were doing the strikers' work, and a few desultory assaults had occurred. Things began to put on a more serious aspect at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, when a series of incendiary fires broke out simultaneously in the Lehigh valley yards. Eighteen or twenty freight cars, filled with wool, cotton, hay and various other merchandise, two passenger coaches and two watchmen's houses were burned. The fires occurred at places where the firemen could not successfully stay the flames on account of an absence of water, besides the difficulty of access to the fires. The water tank adjacent to the coal trestles was smashed and an engine that was taking water there was wrecked by a string of runaway coal cars that had been turned loose from the trestle.

Fire was discovered in the east-bound yards, east of Dingen street. Here a little office building and two or three freight cars were destroyed. At this time Yardmaster Mead discovered flames in two passenger coaches used for the conveyance of workmen and turned in an alarm from William and Dingen streets.

In the yards east of Dingen street fire raged among the cars of merchandise. It took the hose from three carts to reach the flames from the nearest hydrant. The firemen, however, prevented the destruction of a great number of cars and the loss of perhaps hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property. The cars destroyed were in the midst of a great number of other cars. The firemen uncoupled a number of cars and removed them from danger. A dozen or so cars were thrown from the Lehigh tracks and a similar number from the Erie by misplaced switches.

The first intimation of anything wrong was when the coal cars were set loose and demolished the water tank. Then the fires broke out simultaneously. Capt. Wurtz, of the Eleventh precinct, put a force of a dozen officers in the yard as soon as the alarm was given. The officers were unable to find any suspicious characters.

Three men are at the hospital badly hurt. One was assaulted at 3 o'clock Sunday morning, two others at 11 and another at 3 Sunday afternoon. The man who was assaulted at the Western New York & Pennsylvania crossing was on his way for the wrecker at the time and was turning a switch. The strikers had turned switches and thrown six cars from his train before that. He was struck on the head and when he was taken to the hospital was completely dazed and did not know what had occurred. One of the men was assaulted at the passenger station and two at William street.

One of the most cowardly things done was the throwing of switches under passenger train No. 17 at William street at 7:30 o'clock Sunday night. Two passenger coaches were thrown from the track, but the conductor does not think anybody was hurt, though many were badly frightened.

Fifty men boarded passenger train No. 3 at 11 o'clock Sunday morning and molested the employes, driving them off. The crew finally succeeded in getting the train into the station. The mob took possession of the Seneca street switches three or four times during the day and drove off the signal men.

Two trains of freight cars standing on sidings at Cheektowaga, the railroad suburb of Buffalo, were burned Sunday night. The Lehigh Valley has called on the sheriff for protection. He sent six deputies to the scene and will swear in more this morning. The police have yards in seven out of eleven precincts in the city to guard and all the reserves are called out.

The strikers say they are determined to win the fight and they assert the roads are losing heavily by not having men to perform the work of the strikers. They say the Erie is thoroughly demoralized on account of the strike and that every side track on the Buffalo division is completely blocked.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Aug. 15.—The strike of switchmen inaugurated at Buffalo on the Erie and Lehigh Valley lines has extended to Waverly and Sayre on the Lehigh and all freight trains on that line are at a standstill. A train of beef stands on an Erie siding there, the switchmen refusing to allow it to be switched to the Lehigh tracks to proceed to its destination.

Some Rich Premiums.

The managers of the state fair, which is to be held next month, in making up their list of premiums, have left a considerable space for feminine exhibitors. Nearly $1,000 has been offered in premiums, with the stipulation that all handiwork sent to the fair must be the work of and owned by the exhibitor. The department is in charge of the president of the association, assisted by Mrs. Crossley, of 313 Aurora avenue, St. Paul, to whom all requests for information should be sent.

A Storm Causes Ruin.

In Lincoln, Yellow Medicine and Lyon counties during a wind and rainstorm, trees were blown down, houses wrecked, grain flattened to the ground or washed out, and altogether some hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of damage done. Near Cummings the Icelandic Lutheran church, built last year, was picked up, turned bottom up, and, striking on its roof, was demolished. Two Polanders were reported killed in Marshall.

A Sad Case.

C. A. B. Weide, of St. Paul, who wandered away from home while temporarily deranged last winter, and was found nearly frozen to death in a barn in West Minneapolis a week later, has been committed to the insane asylum at Rochester. It was found necessary to amputate both of his feet at the time and he has remained partially insane since. Weide has made considerable money in real estate transactions in St. Paul.

Tried to Burn a Grocery.

A desperate attempt was made to burn the grocery store of J. B. Wheeler at Faribault. Three barrels saturated with oil were rolled along the side of the store and fired. The flames had made great headway before they were discovered and were not extinguished till damage to the amount of $5,000 had been done.

Withdrew Its Ticket.

The state executive committee of the farmers' alliance met in St. Paul and decided to withdraw its state electoral ticket from the political contest. They will therefore have no ticket in the field at the fall election. The committee decided to retain the organization of its state central committee.

The News Briefly Stated.

The estimated loss by the recent hail storm west and north of Echo is 700 acres.

Fire at Faribault partly destroyed the fine residence of L. Lockwood. Loss about $10,000.

The Swift Manufacturing Company's plant at Robinsondale was struck by lightning and burned at a loss of $23,000; insurance, $12,000.

Charles Smith, of Winona, and Lydia P. Dickinson were married, their ages together footing up 120 years.

The Swedish Lutherans of Little Falls have begun the preliminary work on a church building.

The Northern Pacific Elevator Company places the yield of wheat in Minnesota this season at 50,000,000 bushels.

H. Daburk, the Winona baker, who mysteriously disappeared on July 25, leaving many debts, has been arrested at Bellaire, O.

The expenses at the soldiers' home in July were $3,882.48. The $32,500 allotted to the building fund has been expended, and of the repair fund but $457 was left at the close of the fiscal year.

The receipts of the Faribault institute for defectives for the quarter ended July 31 were $1,350.60.

A young man at Wadena was given a baby to hold by a woman who got off the train to "see the agent." He is holding it yet.

William Ferris, a young man from Minneapolis connected with the free Methodist camp meeting in progress at Owatonna, was drowned while attempting to swim in the Straight river.

Hundreds of acres of grain were entirely ruined by a hail and windstorm near Litchfield. It was the worst storm for years. The loss will be thousands of dollars.

Benjamin Richardson, while engaged in repairing a telephone wire at Winona, received a shock that may prove fatal.

The large Norwegian Lutheran stone church, about 2 miles from Houston was struck by lightning, completely demolishing the large steeple, the stone falling through the roof. The sides are also badly cracked.

The coroner's jury at St. Paul found that Frederick Kreiger, one of the flood victims, came to his death through the negligence of the city engineer and his assistants in not properly attending to the drainage of the accumulation of water.

Mrs. Williams, wife of Judge Williams, state railroad commissioner, died at Fergus Falls of cancer of the stomach after a long illness.

Capt. S. R. Van Sant, of Winona, a wealthy and well-known man in the steamboat business, at the risk of his own life jumped into the river and saved a boy, Edwin Rother, from drowning.

During a storm in St. Paul and Minneapolis a number of houses were struck by lightning and were more or less damaged by the fire that followed it, while the damage by the wind and rain was great.

THE EMPTY NEST.

In the hawthorn tree, I found to-day,
An empty nest;
The pretty robins had flown away,
That loved it best.
Last spring it was wrought with loving care,
With a whisp of straw, enlaced with hair,
A twig and a feather here and there
From the mother's breast.
Last spring they twittered the whole day long;
And now, not one.
I list in vain for the robins' song,
With the morning sun.
Do they ever think of the empty nest?
Does a pitiful longing fill each breast,
For the hawthorn home, when they fly to rest,
When the day is done?

And I think of another empty nest,
I loved it so—
A group of nestlings, a mother's breast,
My sad tears flow.
Some fell asleep, some flew away,
Like the little robins that sang all day
In the dear old tree where we used to play,
In the long ago.

And I think of the songs the children sung,
With a stilled sigh;
And the walls where the pictured faces hung;
I know not why.
But I dream of the empty cradle there,
The old-time clock, the rocking chair,
Where we knelt to lisp the evening prayer
In the days gone by.

And the blooming flowers, and droning bees
I can't forget,
The pond we waded, the spreading trees—
I remember yet
The one with the name cut in the side,
J—O—H—N, with boyish pride,
He cut it there, the boy that died,
The household pet.

I cannot go to the place again,
I would not see
The baby faces against the pane
To welcome me.
The mother, alas, across her breast
They folded her tired hands to rest,
And home's like the desolate empty nest
In the hawthorn tree.

But there, at last, I fain would rest,
When the race is run.
Like a tired robin that seeks its nest,
With the setting sun.
For the angel spirits will meet me there,
We will wing our way to the haven fair,
From the empty nest. O grant my prayer
When the day is done.

—Ida Jack Hall, in Louisiana Review.

TWIN boys were born to a certain woman of the Sioux tribe in the midst of a terrific thunderstorm. In accordance with the old custom the children were named from this circumstance, after the deity or personification of thunder. The elder was called "Shakes-the-Earth-as-He-Walks" and the younger, "His-Voice-Is-Heard-Coming." They grew up in close companionship, but at the age of about twelve years the elder brother fell sick and died. The other was for a time inconsolable, and he never ceased to communicate with the spirit of his brother, as though he were still upon the earth. At an early age the youth announced his determination to go forth alone upon the warpath—a remarkable undertaking among the Dakotas, who seldom attempt a solitary expedition until they become experienced warriors. This feat was to be undertaken upon the advice of the elder twin, who had promised success to his younger brother if he would follow strictly his directions. The young man accordingly set out on foot upon his hazardous journey, carrying with him his gun and ammunition and several pairs of moccasins.

On the second day he shot a deer, and, having cut out the tongue and heart for food, offered the entire animal as a sacrifice to the thunder-god, after the manner of his people. He stretched and pinned it to the ground by the four extremities, offered prayers for a safe and victorious return and then slept beside the embers of the fire. At dawn he resumed his journey toward the north.

After many days of wearisome traveling the wanderer discovered one morning in the distance a solitary tepee. It seemed to flicker white through the scintillating heat along the far horizon. He approached it more nearly. It proved to be a tent of skins tanned to a beautiful whiteness and painted with symbolic figures. A man and woman were depicted at full length on either side of the doorway.

Cautiously the youth crept still nearer to the tent, but without detecting any sign of life in its neighborhood, save the presence of a horde of beautiful spotted ponies, which were grazing near by. No smoke issued from the aperture in the top, and not even a dog thrust his nose under the gayly tasseled door. The young Indian accordingly concealed his body behind a tuft of sage brush on a little eminence which commanded the mysterious tepee, and scanned the horizon for the approach of its expected owner, and the tent itself for the revelation of a possible inmate. If it should be occupied by a man and his wife only, the man would return at evening from the hunt, and ere that time the woman would doubtless appear outside the tent. If several men were within, one or more of them might soon show themselves. Absolutely motionless he lay prone in the warm grass and waited.

At last his patience was rewarded. The swinging door was pushed aside and from within there stepped a young and handsome woman. Her dress was of fine deerskins, elaborately embroidered, but of a fashion unlike that of the Sioux women; her jet black hair was arranged in two long plaits that fell over her shoulders, and her features were the prettiest and most delicately formed that the delighted youth had ever beheld. Shading her eyes with her hand she gazed earnestly out along the horizon, as if expecting some one, and then retired once more within the tent.

Satisfied now that the woman was alone and her husband out following the deer or the buffalo, the young man rashly resolved to surprise the fair occupant of the solitary tent before the hunter's return. He stole as noiselessly as possible to the doorway and placed his hand upon the tasseled door, his heart beating violently meantime, partly from fear of the sudden approach of his unknown enemy and partly from his eagerness to see more nearly the charming face that had captivated his fancy.

Suddenly, with a last hurried glance over his shoulder, he flung the door aside and bent his plumed head to the low opening. His eyes fell instantly upon the woman, seated on a buffalo robe and embroidering a moccasin. She lifted her eyes at his unexpected entrance and greeted him with a charming smile, which greatly increased his confusion. "Surely," he thought, "this is an elk or deer in woman shape, or else one of the fairy sisters. Any mortal woman would scream at the sudden appearance of a stranger, while alone and unprotected in her lodge."

"Who are you?" he exclaimed, at last.

"Are you a Dakota?"

The girl smiled again and shook her head.

"Where is your husband?" he asked.

She told him in the sign language that she understood not the Sioux tongue; that she was with her younger brother, who will soon return from his day's hunt. She also informed him that she was the daughter of a powerful chief, whose village was several days' journey to the north, and that on the third morning they would return thither.

After promising to come again, when the brother was at home, the young warrior took his leave, with a lingering look behind him, which sufficiently announced to the girl the impression she had made.

He now resumed his watch from behind the tuft of sagebrush, and as the sun was near setting a rider appeared in sight as a moving speck on the horizon. In a few minutes a handsome young man rode up to the lodge and dismounted from his pony. His sister immediately came out to meet him, released the body of the young doe from his saddle-bow, removed saddle and bridle and watered and picketed the pony. She then followed her brother into the tent, from which a thin trail of smoke soon issued and lost itself in the blue air.

After they had supped the pair reappeared and seated themselves to enjoy the sunset and the cool of evening. They held an animated conversation, accompanied by the most expressive gestures, all of which were closely observed by the unseen watcher, who concluded that the girl had said nothing to her brother concerning her mysterious visitor.

The night passed without incident, and the young Sioux watched the Blackfoot depart in the morning before presenting himself at the lodge of his beloved. She smiled archly as she saw him, and ceased her embroidery long enough to ask in the sign language: "Why did you not come as you promised before my brother left?" The artful youth responded with another question: "Why did you not tell your brother of my visit yesterday?" Upon this both laughed aloud and continued to converse with more freedom. The maiden exhibited her finely worked robes and other possessions, while she coyly took note meanwhile of the brilliant paint, unusual equipments and handsome face and form of the fascinating stranger.

Pointing to his gun, which was always within reach, she questioned him as to its use. Smiling at her ignorance he made signs expressive of its death-dealing force, but she looked aside incredulously. Finally the youth boldly asked the maiden to become his wife and to accompany him home. She appeared to consent, but stipulated that he should first return with them to her father's lodge. To test her lover's faith she proposed also to conceal him in a large par fleche (rawhide trunk), there to await her brother's return. Although the young warrior fully realized that he was placing himself in a perilous and even humiliating position, for love's sake he submitted one evening to be crowded into the narrow space within one of these painted trunks, where he lay helpless and unable to move, breathing through a small opening which was turned toward the outer circumference of the lodge.

The hunter returned at the usual hour and was informed by his sister that a strange young man of another tribe had called at the lodge. She described vividly his fine appearance, splendid dress, and the strange weapon he carried, but omitted to mention his proposal of marriage and his presence in the lodge. The concealed lover felt very uncomfortable as he listened to the conversation, not a word of which he could understand, and in spite of his passion he dreaded some perfidy on the part of the smiling Blackfoot maiden. He clutched his gun to his breast and lay still.

Dar kness came on and all slept—the adventurous Sioux far from soundly, owing to anxiety and his cramped position. At daybreak the young hunter arose, saddled his pony and went out after deer, having agreed with his sister to return very early, and, if possible, to surprise the stranger in their lodge. Accordingly, she released her lover as soon as she could and gave him an abundant breakfast, after which they sat talking for a long while, as they had a great deal to say to each other.

Suddenly the shadow of the Blackfoot darkened the doorway. The intruder did not betray his surprise by the slightest start, and the two young men cordially greeted one another and entered into conversation by means of signs. When the young Sioux presently announced his desire to make the maiden his wife and his intention of returning with them to the tribe on the morrow, there was a silence.

"Friend," finally exclaimed the Blackfoot, "you will expose yourself to great danger by returning with us. My sister has many suitors among the young men of the tribe, and some one among them may be induced by jealousy to kill you."

The other smiled and pointed to his gun, saying, in effect: "I am able to defend myself!"

"What is this singular weapon?" demanded in surprise the Blackfoot.

The owner of the gun replied by asking him to set up a mark, which he would pierce at a distance much greater than that at which an arrow would prove effective. The Blackfoot offered the white pony which he usually rode, but was refused. A willow wand was thrust into the earth and instantly cloven by the bullet, greatly startling by the unaccustomed sight and sound both the youth and girl, the latter of whom now fancied that a supernatural being stood before her. The Sioux, however, by carefully explaining the mechanism of the wonderful gun, and putting a few grains of powder on the fire, dispelled all superstitious fears.

THE BEAUTIFUL ANIMAL LEAPED IN THE AIR.

The Blackfoot was now persuaded that the stranger was a personage whom it would be an honor to bring home as a guest; he therefore consented to the lover's proposition, only insisting that the youth must be concealed in a bundle of skins and conveyed secretly to the chief's house on a travois, lest he should lose his life by the rash action of some jealous brave. Accordingly they set out next morning at daybreak for the Blackfoot village, the adventurous Sioux, hidden in robes upon his rude conveyance, bringing up the rear. At nightfall on the second day they reached the village, and the chief welcomed them hospitably, only warning the stranger to beware of the disappointed suitors of his handsome daughter. In the morning the whole tribe was assembled to hear the announcement that the chief would give his daughter in marriage to a young warrior of another tribe. Here some hot-headed youths were ready to fall upon their successful rival, but were held back by the chief and told of the wonderful weapon possessed by the stranger called the "mysterious iron." The Sioux professed his readiness to meet them all and challenged them to a trial of its magical powers. Contemptuously and incredulously they offered their best ponies for a mark, and this time the offer of one was accepted. The Sioux fired and the beautiful animal leaped into the air and fell lifeless. Some of the people screamed, others fled, and all were persuaded of the wonderful gifts of the stranger, who was believed by many to be an impersonation of the thunder.

The wedding was celebrated by feasting and gifts and the triumphant youth carried home his beautiful bride and her dowry of many fine horses, laden with rich robes and ornaments. Soon after his return to his own people he gave a great feast and upon this occasion distributed these presents among the tribe. Subsequently an equal number of horses, burdened with blankets, guns, knives, powder, beads and other articles obtained from the white men, were sent as a present to the Blackfoot chief.

THE KING'S DWARFS WED.

A Marriage That Took Place With Regal Splendor.

Little Gibson was at the christening and saw the small Anne decked out in great splendor, and, although he was still rather young to think of matrimony, he fell in love with her then and there. The affection was returned, and in due course the king and queen gave their consent to the marriage of the two dwarfs.

Great preparations were made for this wedding, which was celebrated in the chapel of the palace of St. James, and everybody who was anybody at all was bidden to the ceremony. Henrietta Maria, who, in more senses than one, was the reigning beauty of the British court, took great interest in the festivities, and arrayed herself in all her splendor and loveliness to bestow her blessing on the little pair.

The little bride looked charming in a white satin dress with a very long train, while the tiny groom wore a white satin waistcoat with trimmings of satin. His hose and breeches were of white silk, and diamond buckles sparkled in his tiny shoes. The dwarfs were a dainty pair, and created a sensation as they stood before the clergyman exchanging their vows. King Charles, very handsome, very graceful, and looking every inch a king, gave away the bride.—St. Nicholas.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—Count Leo Tolstoi, the Russian poet and novelist, whose serious illness is reported, can handle farm implements as well as the pen, and is, withal, a skillful shoemaker. During the last winter and spring he has worked incessantly among his famine-stricken countrymen.

—Mme. Adelina Patti's diamonds alone have been valued at $375,000. Empress Eugenie gave her a comb set with twenty-three diamonds as a wedding present when she married the marquis de Caux. A gift from Queen Victoria was a superb diamond locket.

—Cardinal Howard is the only cardinal now in England. He is a brother of the duke of Norfolk, and lives in retirement at Arundel, the seat of the duke. He has completely lost his reason. At one time he used to officiate at St. Peter's, Rome. He is a splendid looking man, with a handsome face and fine figure.

—The chances are that the man who wrote an immortal book may have something worthy to say even in a posthumous book. Henry de Rothschild has secured a newly-discovered manuscript from the pen of Le Sage, author of "Gil Blas." It is an opera-comique, entitled "Arlequin Colonel," and is written with remarkable elegance and wit.

—Prof. Skeat, who maintains the orthodox belief that the study of Latin and Greek is serviceable for improving a student's style in English composition, thinks also that there is something to be said on the other side. Whatever the student of Latin and Greek might do toward improving the student's style, the study of languages and English literature would do more.

—The little queen of the Netherlands has been made chief of the Second regiment of Westphalian infantry, known as the "Prince Frederick of the Netherlands, by Emperor William of Germany. —When King Arthur visited the Prince of Monaco recently, the latter ruler not only turned out his full army to receive the guest, but he reinforced the organization by borrowing a few policemen from the city of Nice. The governor-general of Monaco, the Baron de Farencourt, presented himself in his new uniform made for the occasion, which the sovereign visitor is said to have declared to be the most magnificent which he had yet seen in the west.

—James H. Miller, postmaster at Gauley Bridge, W. Va., was appointed by President William Henry Harrison over fifty years ago, and is probably the oldest postmaster in the country. He has retained his office through all the political changes of the last half century, and at the age of eighty-six years is as prompt and efficient as any postmaster in the state. During the late war Mr. Miller's office was several times within the confederate lines, but he was never disturbed or annoyed in any way.

—Maurel has published a book on singing, which, he says, is passing through a crisis, due to the changed condition of modern life. In old days the profession of singer offered few attractions comparatively, and those went into it only who had a real vocation for it, and they prepared themselves by a long and rigorous course of study. Nowadays business is the leading motive. Singing is looked on less as art than as a way to make money, and people push into the profession in every state of crude preparation.

ART TREASURES OF CRACOW.

The Ancient Polish City Rich in Collections and Places of Interest.

The glory of Cracow is its university, which was founded in 1346 by King Casimir the Great. It is known as the Jagellon, and boasted a printing press long before any of the other towns of Europe were so far advanced. It also possesses an astronomical observatory. Here Copernicus was once professor, and a fine statue of him by Thorwaldsen is to be seen in the building. Close to the Florian's gate is to be found the elegant abode of Prince Ladislaus Czartoryski, which contains a very choice museum of works of art, bric-a-brac and MMS., as well as relics of Polish history. It is thrown open to the public twice a week by its owner. That Cracow has not lost its ancient love for art is shown by the academy of fine art that exists in that town, of which the famous Polish painter, Matejko, is director. A number of this painter's finest works, as well as those of his colleague, Siemiradsky, can be seen in the permanent art exhibition, situated on the first floor of the Cloth hall. Indeed, Polish painters and sculptors, as well as architects, have distinguished themselves of late considerably throughout all Europe, and have contributed to recall the ancient glories of the nation. A fine new theater for the production of Polish plays is being built by the native architect, Zawiejski, and will be adorned by over two hundred life-size sculptures from the hand of his talented brother, Mishka Zawiejski, who had made for himself so good a name as sculptor in Florence.

Before leaving Cracow you should drive through the dusty suburbs to a hill a little outside, which is known as the Kosciuszko hill, an artificial mound raised to the height of about thirty meters in the antique shape of a snail heap. This memorial was heaped up in the year 1830 in remembrance of the native hero who tried to restore independence to Poland. Thousands of nobles and patriots helped to raise this mound by bringing earth from all the great battlefields of the Poles, especially from the disastrous field of Macieiovice, where "Freedom shrieked when Kosciuszko fell." Even delicate ladies brought parcels of earth, and foreign potentates from afar joined in this national enterprise. It was four years before it was completed. The ascent is made by means of a spiral ramp about two feet broad with no protection on the outer side, so a steady hand is required. On the summit, crowned by a small plateau, stands a large unhewn granite bowlder, upon which is inscribed the one word "Kosciuszko" in large letters. Around it is planted a low border of flowers, which are always kept carefully tended. The whole monument is a touching evidence of national patriotism. To upraise such mounds seems to have been a favorite form among the Poles of doing honor to their dead, for Cracow can show yet two other such hills upraised by human hands.—Magazine of Art.

The only remedy of its kind so remarkable in its effects that it can be sold on this plan is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. As a blood-cleanser, strength-restorer, and flesh-builder, there's nothing like it known to medical science. In every disease where the fault is in the liver or the blood, as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, and the most stubborn Skin, Scalp, and Scrofulous affections, it is guaranteed in every case to benefit or cure, or you have your money back.

To every sufferer from Catarrh, no matter how bad the case or of how long standing, the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy say this: "If we can't cure it, perfectly and permanently, we'll pay you $500 in cash." Sold by all druggists.

"German Syrup"

Boschee's German Syrup is more successful in the treatment of Consumption than any other remedy prescribed. It has been tried under every variety of climate. In the bleak, bitter North, in damp New England, in the fickle Middle States, in the hot, moist South—everywhere. It has been in demand by every nationality. It has been employed in every stage of Consumption. In brief it has been used by millions and its the only true and reliable Consumption Remedy.

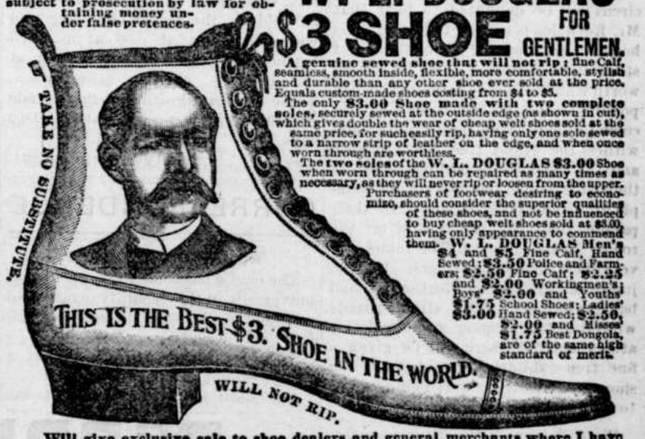
CAUTION.—Beware of dealers substituting shoes without W. L. Douglas name and the price stamped on bottom. Such substitutions are fraudulent and subject to prosecution by law for obtaining money under false pretences.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN.



A genuine sewed shoe that will not rip; fine Calf, seamless, smooth inside, flexible, more comfortable, stylish and durable than any other shoe ever sold at the price. Equals custom-made shoes costing from $4 to $5.

The only $3.00 Shoe made with two complete soles, securely sewed at the outside edge (as shown in cut), which gives double the wear of cheap welt shoes sold at the same price, for such easily rip, having only one sole sewed to a narrow strip of leather on the edge, and when once worn through are worthless.

The two soles of the W. L. DOUGLAS $3.00 Shoe when worn through can be repaired as many times as necessary, as they will never rip or loosen from the upper.

Purchasers of footwear desiring to economize, should consider the superior qualities of these shoes, and not be influenced to buy cheap welt shoes sold at $3.00, having only appearance to commend them. W. L. DOUGLAS Men's $4 and $5 Fine Calf, Hand Sewed; $3.50 Police and Farmers; $2.50 Fine Calf; $2.25 and $2.00 Workingmen's; Boys' $2.00 and Youths' $1.75 School Shoes; Ladies' $3.00 Hand Sewed; $2.50, $2.00 and Misses' $1.75 Best Dongola, are of the same high standard of merit.

Will give exclusive sale to shoe dealers and general merchants where I have no agents. Write for catalogue. If not for sale in your place send direct to Factory, stating kind, size and width wanted. Postage free. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

DELANO DIARY

Circus one week from today.

—A new Hotel Register is being made for Young's Hotel.

—Dell. Young received two new buggies for his livery Monday.

—Rev. J. R. Davies will preach at the Sibel M. E. church on Sunday, Aug. 28, at 10:30 a. m.

—Call at Green's for an enlarged photograph of any photo you may have on buying $15.00 werth of goods.

—Dave Briley has traded his house and lot to Peter Simon, of Hamel, who has taken posession. Dave will move to Hamel soon.

—Ferdinand Banker was arrested on Friday last for petty larceny in taking a gun from Charles Eppel. He was fined $5 and costs.

—Read the new advertisement of J. R. Elliot, 251 Nicollet Avenue, Minneapolis, and if in need of any thing in his line give him a call during the Exposition.

—The Independent School District, of Delano, has elected C. H. Vorse president; L. M. Maxfield, secretary and I Guitzwiller, trearurer, for the ensuing year.

—Daniel W. Lawler will probably speak at Delano on the day and evening of the convention, which time has not yet been arranged for. Don't fail to hear the next Governor of Minnesota. He is as eloquent an expounder of Democratic doctrine as the state affords today.

—Rev. John Stafford, of Minneapolis, preached an eloquent sermon on Monday evening, after which he administered the right of baptism to two, and th Lord's Supper to twenty-three. Several were present from Montrose and from Armstrong. F. H. Fairbanks was granted license to preach.

—On the third page of this paper is to be found "Art Treasures of Cracow," which some of our readers will enjoy reading, and which will bring to mind much that they could add about their once proud country, and about the fallen hero who gained no small part of his millitary honors in this country where many of his countrymen now enjoy peace and plenty.

—Yesterday afternoon E. F. Ziebarth met with a painful and serious accident. He had hitched three horses to a binder near the road in front of his house; the horses started to run, Mr. Z. caught the nigh horse by the bits and tried in vain to stop them. They ran through the front yard overturning a bee-hive, which only served to accelerate their speed, the binder struck a post which gave way and then Mr. Z. was thrown down into the potato patch, the sickle passing over him. His right arm was cut about two-thirds off, just below the elbow both bones being cut through. His right foot had several deep gashes cut on the outside and bottom, he also received several smaller bruises. Drs. Catlin and Shrader were called and dressed his wounds and made him as comfortable as possible, and will endeaver to save his arm.

—W. B. Reynolds' Consolidated Shows, Circus, Museum, Menagerie and Trained Animal Exposition is to exhibit at Delano, Friday, August, 26. It is the most perfectly equipped show traveling. Every one who enjoys a circus will be delighted to hear that Mr. Reynolds is coming this way. His horses are supposed to be the finest stock in the country, and it is well worth while for every farmer who can possibly leave his work for a day to come to town, bring their families and witness the grand free street parade and the free outside performances, as they have double the amount of dapple gray and Arabian horses in their parade than any other show on the road. In the circus will be found the very best bareback riders, leapers, jumpers, acrobats, contortionists and bar performers. The street parade will take place at noon, and imediately after the parade there will be given a fine free exhibition outside the big show tents, which is worth going miles to witness the free sights.

—The early hour for Sunday evening services does not seem to meet the approval of many of our church goers.

—Prof. S. A. Farnsworth, of the Cleveland School, St. Paul, returned home yesterday morning with his family after visiting his father-in-law, Wm. Gross.

Personals.

Nick Frank Sundayed at home this week.

Enoch Miller, of Rockford, transacted business in Delano on Monday.

Sam. Cutter spent Sunday around the summer resorts of Minneapolis.

Mr. Batdorf occupied the M. E. pulpit with Rev. Daves on Sunday evening.

Miss Anna Quinn is home from Buffalo, where she attended training school.

Dr. Catlin returned Wednesday evening from a trip to his old home, St. Peter.

Mrs. M. A. Chance returned from a two week's visit at Howard on Saturday.

Rev. J. R. Davies attended Quarterly Meeting services at Howard Lake last Sunday.

L. M. Rawson, of Litchfield was seen on our streets on Monday, in his customary hurry, of course.

Dr. C. B. Ames, of Rockford, was over on Sunday procuring drugs for some of his patients.

Billy Cramer and family of St. Paul, came up yesterday for a visit With his Uncle Joe Cramer and family.

Miss Stella Jacobs returned from Devils Lake, N. D., last Saturday, where she has been teaching school.

Rev. W. L. Hackett, formerly of this place is now preaching in the Presbyterian churches at Jordon, Belle Plain and Blakely.

Miss Cheeley, who has been attending teachers' training school, in Minneapolis, was in town Monday attending teachers' examination.

Simeon Morris, of Minneapolis, was in town on Monday on business. He expects to return to the neighborhood of Armstrong in the fall.

County Cullings.

If the Montrose News does so well on a hop-, no telling what she will do when she gets right down to a ruuning gait.

Members of the Delano Dramatic Club inform us that they will not appear at Buffalo during the institute, as advertised last week.

The Buffalo Journal is still good on a scent and this time has started up a small "woodchuck" on Superintendent Lindsley for advertising the Delano Dramatic Club at the county expense.

From a correspondent in the Annandale Post, we learn that good land can be bought on easy terms, with fine orchards of fruit, and fair buildings and improvements, for from $10 to $30 per acre, near Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Vol. 1, No. 1 of the Montrose News, arrived yesterday morning. The News is a bright and spicy little sheet, under the management of Ben. F. Scott, editor, and Mae A. Scott, associate, and one of whom at least knows something about running a paper.

Annual Meeting.

The Twelfth Annual Meeting of the Minnesota Woman Suffrage Association will be held at Hastings, September 6, 7, 8, beginning with a session at 3 p. m. on Tuesday, September 6.

All local societies are requested to send their delegates. Where there is no local W. S. A., any person who subscribes to the Constitution and pays a membership fee of one dollar into the state treasury, will receive a membership ticket, which will serve as credentials for any annual meeting or other convention of the Minnesota W. S. A. within one year from date.

Good speakers and singers will be present. Important questions will be discussed, and men and women who love justice and are interested in whatever concerns the welfare of their country are invited to come and take part in the meeting.

Delegates and visitors desiring entertainment are requested to send their names to Mrs. W. B. Reed, Hastings, Minnesota.

46-2t County Superintendent.

CORRESPONDENCE

ROCKFORD RECORDS.

The cradle has come into use almost universally in this vicinity again and will help to glean the golden this fall to a great extent.

There are numerous places where a binder cannot work this season.

The addition to the school house has been commenced and will be pushed rapidly to completion.

One of the best societies for the furtherance of the temperance cause is the I. O. G. T. It is non-sectarian and belongs to no political party. Its objects are toward the moral improvement of all. Rockford has a lodge which started some four months ago and is in a promising condition, and the membership is still increasing.

The signals of weather are now given from the Union Saw Mill, owned by Harry Young, each afternoon at three o'clock in this village. One long blast of the whistle indicates fair weather; two, rain or snow; three, local rains; one short, cooler; two short, warmer; three short, cold wave or frost.

The Kickapoo Indians went to Hanover Monday for two weeks.

D. R. Thompson returned from Sault Ste. Marie Sunday evening.

WAVERLY WISDOM.

Clerk of the Court O'Leary and Attorney J. H. Wendell, of Buffalo, were here on business Wednesday.

Mr. H. Tanner has again assumed editorial management of the Tribune.

The Waverly Club went to Cokato last Sunday and played a game of ball with the club of that place. The tally stood 6 to 3 in favor of Waverly.

A. J Demars keeps all kinds of soft drinks and ice cream in abundance these hot days.

H. C. Morneau is having a splendid patronage and attends to all the details of his popular hotel in first class shape.

The 5 months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Quinn died Sunday morning and was burried Monday at the Catholic cemetery.

John Deguan, aged 93 years, died at the home of his son, in Woodland, Saturday, and was burried Sunday. The funeral was largely attended.

Miss Julia Rassett, of Howard Lake, and a gentleman from New Jersey were married in this village last week. There was a large number of Howard people present to witness the cere mony.

The political campaign is somewhat apathetic in this village yet, and there is not much enthusiasm manifested. Probably after the formation of a Democratic club things may begin to liven up somewhat.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

Frequent showers, hot weather, bad roads and a terrible harvest are with us now. The grain in most places is down very badly and the ground soft so it is very difficult to run binders in many fields. Rust would surely have a good time for gleaning this harvest

The mosquiio crop is the largest we have had for many years.

J. W. Caine's family started for Glendive, Montana, last Monday morning on the early train. Mr. Caine has been out there since early spring.

We have now a full fledged Republican club in Independence with about 40 members. We have never yet seen such a thing as a Democratic club but hear they have one in Delano. Think we will call and see it, provided it is on exhibition to a Hennepin county Democrat.

Corn in this section is looking well, and should frost hold off we will have a good crop, but should we have much more rain it is feared that potatoes will take the rot.

WATERTOWN WAYS.

Prof. W. W. Holcomb, of St. Paul, was doing business in Watertown on Monday.

Commissioner Boylan is spending a few days in Glencoe this week.

Rev. John Stafford held the fourth quarterly meeting at the M. E. church, of Watertown, on Tuesday evening last.

Messrs. John Coolen and Simon Weldele, of Delano, were calling on friends and doing business in Watertown on Wednesday of this week

County Attorney Frank Warner and Attorney Odell, of Cokato, were in Watertown on legal business on Thursday.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Teas, on Wednesday last, a girl.

B. C. St. John spent two or three days in Minneapolis this week on business.

WOMANS' COLUMN.

BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

A NEGATIVE NO.

How a Railroader's Success Was Hindered by Drink.

A fine young fellow was Tom Jeffreys, strong, pleasant and good-looking. He was but eighteen when he first began "railroading," but he could get a brake with the best When his clear deep voice announced the stations, people listened and made no mistake. Old ladies cought the gleam of his pleasant eye, and let him help them on and off with greatful surprise. Mothers with more children than they could manage, tired women bundle-laden and old men recognized an old friend and made use of him. Nor were the railroad officials blind to the young man's helpfulness and popularity, and although Tom did not dream of it, he was one on the list of names that meant promotion.

The young brakeman's easy-going good-nature, however was a drawback in one direction. He disliked to say no. When the train reached Boston he always had two hours time some one of the boys was sure to say: "Come, Tom, lets go the barber's."

Now, this sounded very innocent, but in the barber's back room was a green door which opened on a stairway leading down into a drinking saloon. Here the men used to gather, a few at a time, to take "a little something."

Tom usually said his good-humored no, that ment a reluctant yes, and ended by going. He never felt wholly at ease when taking his beer. He would not have gone for it alone. Over and oyer again he acknowledged to himself that it was the laughter of his chums that took his courage away, and so things went on. A year slipped by, and beer had become almost an everyday drink with him, when one afternoon he was summoned from the "barber's shop to the office.

"Jeffreys," said the superintendent when he entered, "I have been very much pleased with the way in which your duties have been performed on the road in the past, and I find we need another conductor." The gentleman suddenly stopped and then the pleasant smile was gone. "Mr. Jeffreys, your breath tells me that you have been drinking."

"Only a little beer, sir," said poor Tom, flushing crimson.

"I am very sorry," replied the superintendent, "but that will be all to-day; you may go."

The young man left the office downcast, dishearted. What he had been wishing for, what he had so nearly gained, had been lost through his own misconduct. As he thought of it the good-natured lips took on a firmer curve. The next day one of the boys said; 'Comin' over to the barber's?"

"No," replied Tom.

"O come on, what's struck yer?"

"That barber has shaved me all he ever will!" was the answer.

Although Tom's "no" seemed very determined in its sound, there was yet something wanting in it. He felt it, and when, after a few days, the real longing for a glass of liquor began to make itself felt, it seemed as if the "no" would be "yes" in spite of himself.

"No use in lockin' the barn door now," said the chum; "the hoss is stole; the 'super' knows you've taken a 'smile' now and then, and he'll never forget it. Better be young while you can."

Tom still said "no," but the little negative grew weaker and weaker; the next thing it would be yes. When this was almost accomplished, spurred by his danger and remembering his early training in the right, he went into an empty car and, kneeling on the bare floor, prayed for strength to resist.

"And then," he said, "I learned to speak a "no" that all the men on the road couldn't turn into a yes."—Henry C. Pearson, in Christian at Work.

Says Dr. Lockwood: "The soul of all improvement is the improvement of the soul," also "from the policeman to the governor in his chair, there is a concealed hatred of the liquor traffic. The battle against us is largely a sham battle."

"A nation can never rise higher in morals or intelligenee than its homes Whatever corrupts the home corrupts the ruler. America should banish the drink traffic in self defense."

Teachers Institute.

A State Teachers Institute for Wright County will be held at Buffalo commencing on Monday, at 11 o'clock, August 22nd and continuing five days conducted by Prof. W. F. Racheleau and an assistant.

Every effort will be made by the County Superintendent to bring this Institute up to the hign standard of our former Institutes.

Teachers are requested to bring teeir books and we will make this a working Institute.

One evening will be devoted to reports from the several districts of Wright County Teachers association, one to a lecture by State Supt. D. L. Kiehle: One to a sociable for the teachers; and on one evening the Delano Dramatic club will give a play in Dudleys opera House.

All of the teachers of Wright county are expected to be in attendance during the entire week.

The teachers who come and work will be greatly benefited,

F. H. Lindsley.
Co. Superintendent

Millinery Store.

I have closed my business for a three week's vacation while my old stand, now occupided by Mr. Yancy, is being fitted up, when I will open up a new and complete assortment of Millinery Goods, one of the finest ever in Delano. Silks, Ribbons, Hats, Caps, and everything usually found in a first class establishment. Look out for them at my old stand about September 1st. MRS. E. J. SWEDEBACK.

To the Public.

W. H. FRAZEE. LEON FRAZEE.

Having leased the American House at Buffalo, together with the stables in connection with the property, we would most respectfully solicit the patronage of the traveling public whenever in the county seat. We will try to furnish accommodations as good and at as reasonable rates as any in the village. We will continue our machinery business in both Buffalo and Delano as heretofore. Give us a call at either or all our business places.

Yours Respectfully,

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage duly made, executed and delivered by G. O. Trow and his wife Abbie Trow, as mortgagors, to George E. Bull as mortgagee, bearing date the first day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty seven (1887) with a power of sale therein contained, which mortgage was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Wright and State of Minnesota on the twenty-second (22) day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven (1887), at nine (9) o'clock a. m. in book four (4) of mortgages on page one (1).

Whereas said mortgage was given to secure the payment at maturity of the sum of nine hundred ($900) dollars with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, according to the conditions of ten (10) cupon notes bearing even dates with said mortgage. Whereas said mortgagee did on the 30th day of April 1892 pay taxes for the years 1890 and 1891 then due and unpaid as follows, to-wit: For the year 1890 the sum of ten dollars and seventy eight cents, for the year 1891, the sum of thirty-nine dollars and forty-eight cents, which sum is also claimed to be recovered as an additional loan on said lands and whereas there is claimed to be due and there is due and unpaid on said mortgage and on the notes secured thereby at the date of this notice the sum of ten hundred and sixty-two dollars and seventy cents ($1062.70) principle and interest besides the taxes paid as aforesaid, and interest on said taxes amounting to the sum of one dollar and forty cents and whereas no proceedings at law or in equity has been instituted to recover said mortgage debt or taxes as aforesaid, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sail of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage to-wit: Lot number one (1) and block number thirteen (13) situated in the village of Cokato, Wright county, Minnesota, according to the duly recorded plat of record, in the Register of Deeds office in and for the county of Wright and state of Minnesota, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Wright county at the front door of the court house in the village of Buffalo in said county on Thursday, the twenty-ninth (29) day of September, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two (1892) at two o'clock p. m. at public vendue to the highest bidder, for cash, to pay said mortgage debt, principle and interest and taxes paid as aforesaid with costs of these proceedings, together with the sum of thirty-five ($35) dollars attorney's fee stipulated in said mortgage to be paid in case of foreclosure.

Dated August 10, 1892.

GEO. E. BULL, mortgagee,
A. G. SEXTON, Cokato,
Attorney for Mortgagee

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

THE Litchfield News Ledger failed to point out the "smart men,, who say tariff is not a tax.

SHOULD our Canadian neighbors persist in ditching Lake Superior so as to destroy the harbors at Duluth and other ports belonging to Uncle Sam they will, doubtless wake up some fine morning and find themselves annexed to his dominions.

FROM the Alliance Standard of Willmar we clip the following resolutions passed by the Kandiyohi Farmers Alliance, May 14, 1892:

Resolved, That the members of the Alliance will patronize merchants who advertise in the Alliance Standard, our paper, in preference to those who advertise in the subsidized old party press, the mouthpieces of oligarchy.

A CIRCULAR was issued from the office of the Omaha railway on Wednesday morning as follows:

Hon. Thomas Wilson is appointed general counsel of this company. Office at St. Paul, Minn To take effect Sept. 1, prox., in place of Col. James H. Howe, resigned.

MARVIN HUGHITT, President.

Col. Howe leaves the office on account of his failing health, having served the company since '62 or '63.

THE St. Paul Globe has opened a campaign fund and headed the list with a subscription of $100, as a starter. They have already recured several hundred dollars. The money is to be used in sending out speakers and in educating the people. Send your contributions to "Manager Democratic Speakers' Fund" care Globe, St. Paul, Minn.

A MAN from San Francisco addressed some Minneapolis citizens on Sunday evening on "The injustice of closing the World's Fair on the Sabbath." He is reported to have said: this is the people's government, and if God wants to be with it, he must take out his naturalization papers and become a citizen and then he will have but one vote. A man capable of using such an expression would hardly be expected to "Remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy."

As the campaign opens up, voters begin to run about asking for something from which to figure. Several have made enquiry as to how the vote of Minnesota stood after the last election, we give the figures as taken from the Legislative Manual, below, so you can be figuring up how to secure a Democratic victory this year:

VOTE FOR GOVERNOR IN 1890.

W. R. Merriam, Republican.....	88,111
Thomas Wilson, Democrat.....	85,744
S. M. Owen, Alliance.....	58,513
James P. Pinkham, Prohibition...	8,424
Total.....	240,892

FOR Judges of the Supreme Court the Democratic ticket presents the names of three able men. Hon. Daniel Buck, of Mankato, is an able man and well known throughout the state, ran with Eugene Willson for Lieutenant Governor. Judge Mitchel already holds the position for which he has been re-nominated on both Democratic and Republican tickets. Judge Thomas Canty is a young man who holds the position of District Judge in the 4th Judicial District, a man of the common people and a man that will pole a big vote, both Buck and Canty are on the Alliance ticket as well as the Democratic ticket.

STRIKES appear to be altogether too numerous in this country at present. There must be something wrong somewhere and the something should be found out and rectified as soon as possible. People should be free to work for whom they please, and not have to be locked up like animals to keep them from running off. nor guarded from their fellow laborers by armies to keep them from being shot down. A man should be free to hire men where he can hire them to the best advantage and when the employer and employe find they cannot get along together they should quietly quit and not create disturbances. If things keep on as they have lately standing armies will be required in the laboring centers to preserve the peace. In fact the malitia has been serving this purpose in several states the past few weeks.

The Next Congressman.

Speaking of army records. Major Baldwin, democratic candidate for Congress in the 6th Minnesota district, enlisted April 19th, 1861, and served four years in the 2nd Wisconsin, the first infantry sent out by that state for the preservation of the Union. The 2nd, 6th, 7th Wisconsin and the 19th Indiana regiments formed the famous "Iron Brigade." the old guard of the army of the Potomac. First regiment, first brigade. first division, first army corps. First in battle, last to retreat: let us all clasp hands and make the gallant soldier the first Congressman from the great 6th district. Carlton Vidette.

Who Pays the Tariff?

Our Republican newspaper friends seem fond of telling us every week, that the foreigner pays our tariff for us. That the foreigner pays into the treasury of our country the money that pays our Presidents salary, and the salaries of our other government officials. Congressmen and all. That builds our fine custom houses and pays the officials to collect the customs. That foreigners are furnishing all this money for our government. How anybody in this country can look at it in that way we are at a loss to know. If by foreigners they mean the American citizen by adoption. The people who have come to this country from the land of Lafaytte, of Pulaski and Koskiusco, of John Wesley and of many others who could be mentioned, to make their future homes by becoming American citizens, perhaps they do strike those who pay a good share of the tariff. When the emigrant comes over from the old country he must pay tariff on what he brings along. If his brother, or father or son in this country requests him to bring a mainspring for his old country watch that he brought when he came he must pay 45 per cent to get it into this country. If his grandmother requests him to buy for her a woolen shawl of the kind she has always used, and to replace the one she brought with her when she came she must pay, if it is not worth more than 30 cents per pound, a specific duty of 33 cents and 40 per cent an advolorum duty of 159 per cent. and over. If his little nephews desire new pocket knifes made by their cousins in Europe he must pay if they cost not more than 50 cents per dozen, 12 cents and 50 per cent an advalorum duty of over 74 per cent, and if our Republican candidate for Governor should desire some fresh herring the next time Jim Hill and him dine together, he will have to put up according to the McKinley bill, 18 cents tariff for every dollars worth they eat.

Primaries.

Primaries are the starting points. When we wish to build a house we first build the foundation. When we wish to gather a bountiful harvest we first see that we have plenty of good seed in the ground. And, when we wish to elect a Democratic ticket we must see to it that we have a ticket that we are proud of, and that we can honestly ask any man to vote for. If we remain at home, and allow three or four men to congregate at some saloon, or in some office or shop, and choose the delegates to represent our town in the county convention; or, as sometimes happens, two or three interested office seekers to come into our midst and choose delegates who will vote to place them on the ticket and put up men for the other offices who are incapable of holding them, and for whom no one will expect the party to vote and who, in same instances, are simply used for trading stock, to exchange for votes for the others, we must not expect our county to go Democratic. But on the other hand let us go into the fight to win. Let every voter that possibly can, be on hand at the caucus in his town. Let the representative men of his place be sent as delegates to the county convention. Men who will use their best judgment, honestly, to place on the ticket men for every office than can fill them, and will fill them properly, and who are known by reputation, at least, and who are known as honorable, upright men, and not simply as wire pullers and vote getters, no matter how. Let there be no weak spots in the ticket. Let there be no excuse for casting aside a single name for that of an opponent. Have a well balanced ticket, and with the feeling of unrest in the g. o. p. and the feeling that war tariffs should be reduced and not made higher, and economy used instead of extravigance in our government affairs; with a national ticket the choice of the people: with a state ticket a force of itself and Duluth man for Congress, if Wright county Democrats are on the alert and adhere strictly to their principles and make no mistakes but place true Democrats and capable men on their ticket they will deserve success, and, doubtless, obtain it in November. Be out to your caucus and if you are sent as a delegate to Delano, find time to come and take part in selecting this winning ticket. You have as good a right as anyother man to aid in making a ticket to win.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Aug. 19, 1892.

"Blaine has positively refused to make a single speech for Harrison," said Mr. Harrison's man, Tom Carter, to a personal friend of the Maine man. "Well," replied the gentleman spoken to, "you did not suppose he would, did you? He is under no obligations to Harrison, and would be more than human did he really desire to see him elected." "But, speeches are entirely unnecessary; why not speak elsewhere?" "For the simple reason that he feels himself under deep obligations to the republican party of Maine, and not at liberty to refuse when asked to make two or three speeches," was the reply, "and under none to either the national ticket or party." "I came here," said Mr. Carter in his softest and most presuasive tone, "to ask you to use your influence with Mr. Blaine to persuade him to make at least one speech in New York." "You did, eh," was the snappy reply, "then you come on fools errand. Blaine would be a blank fool to make a speech for Harrison, and I should be the same to ask him to do so. You office holders nominated Harrison, now elect him, if you can." The above conversation was repeated by the gentleman upon whom Mr. Carter called, which accounts for its coming into my posession.

Mr. Carter had other objects in view in coming over to Washington this week than trying to bring presure to bear upon Mr. Blaine. For instance, he had to receive an expensive gold watch and chain which the clerks in the Land office, over which he lately presided, had been assessed, some of them very unwillingly, to purchase, and he had to put in a few words, which he did not care to write, where they would do the most good in countering the influence of the recent circular issued by the Civil Service Commission concerning political contributions by Government employes.

The scheme evolved by Carter for raising money in the departments differs from the old assessment plan and, he thinks, it will bring the National committee more money. Every Republican clerk is informed that while the committee has not made anything like an assessment it will be glad to receive "voluntary contributions" and that a list of the contributors in each department will be placed in the hands of those officials who recommend and those who make promotions. In plain words, no contribution no promotion.

Mr. Carter, while in Washington, paid considerable attention to the southern end of the Republican rainbow. His committee has made arrangements to aid financially and otherwise the Kolbeites in Alabama; the Buchanan independent movement in Tennessee, and the so-called people's party movement in all of the Southern states, hoping thereby to split the Democratic vote and get the electoral votes of some of those states for Harrison and Reid. The intent of this rainbow is so plain that the Democratic leaders do not believe that any considerable number of Democratic voters in the south will allow themselves to be used as cat's paws to pull the Republican chestnuts out of the fire of popular disapproval.

Naval officials will not talk about it, but from other and perfectly reliable sources it is learned that the strike at Carnegie's Homestead Mills is delaying the delivery of armour plates for the naval vessels now nuder construction at various places to an extent that is causing much inconvenience and which is bound to result in delaying the completion of the vessels. This will not interfere with or cause any loss to the contractors who have built or are building vessels, as the armor plates are put on by government employes under the direction of naval officers detailed for that purpose.

Representative McGeary, who is a member of the Democratic National committee, and who is known as a very close observer of things political, passed through Washington this week on his way home, and in reply to questions as to the outlook said: "I have talked with the managers in New York and have looked about generally for the purpose of finding out as much about the situation as possible. Such devotion. earnestness and enthusiasm as I found among the Democrats of New York was unexpected and surprising. I could find no resentment, no holding back or want of interest but the Democrats seem to be united and deeply sincere and in earnest in their support of Cleveland and Stevenson. In Massachusetts our people are very hopeful. They are working as if they expect to carry the state, and they say that Cleveland will run right along with Russell."

List of Patents.

Nationality Issues Will Not Make Swedes Vote for Nelson.

To the Editor of the Globe.

With refrence to your editorial in this morning's paper regarding Knute Nelson's strength as a gubernatorial candidate on the nationality issue, I beg leave to ask what the term "Scandinavian" comprises according to the political dictionary of Minnesota. It seems to me to be a term used mostly by Norweigans when posing as candidates for political offices, while at all other times they are just as anxious as their countrymen on the other side of the Atlantic to disavow any relation to, and to sever all connections with, the Swedes.

These are two distinct nations, different languages, literature and history, and their are no reasons why an American citizens of Swedish origen should vote for a Norwegian-American on account of his nationality than that he should vote for a German American on the same grounds. Mr. Nelson's nationality might cut some figure with the vote of his countrymen, but if the Republican managers expect to catch the other and larger part of what they call the Scandinavian vote through Mr. Nelson's nomination, they are liable to be dissapointed.

Yours truby ER. G. FORSBERG.
St. Paul, Aug. 24

WOMANS' COLUMN.

BY MRS. E. A. STACY.

What Are We Going to do About It?

A burly business man of Hartford was talking to his partner in words like these: "I told B. that we must look to our laurels. I cannot help noticing how splintered and stunted the race of young men is while the young women are taking outdore exercises. the gymnasium, the natatorium, the wheel the oar, the tennis ground and even to base ball. Then they dress more reasonably nowadays, at least during the pleasantest part of the year, for they go to the country, wear gymnastic suits and live in the sunshine of pure air. They have good rich blood and any amount of cheery spirits, while our boys, as a class, do not show as good, hopeful symptoms physically as they did when I was a boy not by a big majority.

His wise and thoughtful friend made this reply: "Do you know the reason? I can tell you. The cigarette habit already claims 90 per cent of the boys in school, in our large cities: tobacco, beer, saloons gambling houses and evils deeper if possible and darker, that go with these, are tightening their devilish grip about the boyhood and the young manhood of the country. The question is, what are we going to do about it?" and the two strong men fell to thinking.--White Ribbon.

The Awful Record.

Twenty-two hundred millions of dollars, directly and indirectly spent, lost. Wasted annualy in this country in drink! Call it $2,000,000,000. What does the nation get in return for this enormous sum? Nothing absolutely nothing. It is all a dead loss to the country, as it is to those who spend it. There is no return for it except poverty, pauperism, crime, ignorance, degradation, brutality, jails full of prisoners, insane asylums full of lunatics, workhouses full of paupers, hospitals full of sick and maimed, $500,000 homes with misery, violence, wretchedness and ruin, which but for liquor would be peactul, prosperous, thrifty, happy with children growing up under good influences to be good citizens. pillars of the state, and not under bad influences to swell in after life the ranks of idlers, tramps, beggars, thieves, burglars, incendaries, dynamitory anarchists.—Neal Down in Christian at Work.

THERE is money in almost everything if one can find a way to get it out. A novel industry is that of two farmers near Milltown, Pa., who have gone into the business of extracting the poison from bees. They catch the bees and either immerse them for eight days in a bottle of alcohol, having previously enraged them so as to cause the poison to exude from the poison sacs, or else they kill them and squeeze the virus into a glass tube. The virus has a local repute as a cure for dropsy, chill and fever, and all kinds of insect stings.

UNCLE SAM STRIKES BACK.

President Harrison Wearies of Canadian Delay—He Issues a Proclamation Levying a Toll of Twenty Cents a Ton on All Freight Passing Through the Sault Ste Marie Canal Destined to Dominion Ports.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The proclamation suspending the right of free passage through the St. Mary's canal of any and all cargoes or portions of cargoes consigned to Canadian ports was issued Saturday afternoon to go into effect September 1 next. The events leading to the issuance of the proclamation have been published heretofore.

The following is the text of the proclamation:

Whereas, By an act congress approved July 26, 1892, entitled "An act to enforce reciprocal commercial relations between the United States and Canada, and for other purposes," it is provided "that, with a view of securing reciprocal advantages for the citizens, ports and vessels of the United States on and after this first day of August, 1892, whenever and so often as the president shall be satisfied that the passage through any canal or lock connected with the navigation of the Saint Lawrence river, the great lakes, or the waterways connecting the same of any vessels of the United States, or of cargoes of passengers in transit to any portion of the United States, is prohibited, or is made difficult or burdensome by the imposition of tolls or otherwise, which, in view of the free passage through the St. Mary's Falls canal now permitted to vessels of all nations, he shall deem to be reciprocally unjust and unreasonable; he shall have the power and it shall be his duty to suspend by proclamation to that effect, for such time and to such extent—including absolute prohibition—as he shall deem right, the right of free passage through the St. Mary's Falls canal so far as it relates to the vessels owned by the subjects of the government to discriminating against the citizens, ports or vessels of the United States, or to any cargoes, portions, of cargoes, or passengers in transit to the ports of the government making such discrimination, whether carried in vessels of the United States or of other nations. In such case and during such suspension tolls shall be levied, collected and paid as follows, to-wit: Upon freight of whatever kind or description, not to exceed two dollars per ton; upon passengers, not to exceed five dollars each, as shall be from time to time determined by the president; provided

1. That no tolls shall be charged or collected upon freight or passengers carried to and landed at Ogdensburg or any port west of Ogdensburg, and south of a line drawn from the northern boundary of the state of New York through the St. Lawrence river, the great lakes and their connecting channels to the northern boundary of the state of Minnesota.

2. All tolls so charged shall be collected under such regulations as shall be prescribed by the secretary of the treasury, who may require the master of each vessel to furnish a sworn statement of the amount and kind of cargoes, to the number of passengers carried and the destination of the same, and such proof of the actual delivery of such cargo and passengers at some port or place within the limits above named as he shall deem satisfactory, and until such proof is furnished such freight and passengers may be considered to have been landed at the same port or place outside of those limits, and the amounts of tolls which have accrued had they been so delivered, shall constitute a lien, which may be enforced against the vessel in default wherever and whenever found in the waters of the United States.

Whereas, The government of the dominion of Canada imposes a toll amounting to about twenty cents per ton on all freight passing through the Welland canal in transit to a port of the United States and also a further toll on all vessels of the United States, and on all passengers on transit to a port of the United States, all of which tolls are without rebate; and

Whereas, The government of the dominion of Canada, in accordance with an order in council of April 4, 1892, refunds eighteen cents per ton of the twenty-cent toll at the Welland canal on wheat, Indian corn, peas, barley, rye, oats, flaxseed and buckwheat upon condition that they are originally shipped for and carried to Montreal for export, and that, if transhipped at intermediate points, such transhipment is made within the dominion of Canada, but allows no such nor any other rebate on said products, when shipped to a port of the United States or when carried to Montreal for export if transhipped within the United States; and

Whereas, The government of the dominion of Canade by said system of rebate and otherwise discriminates against the citizens of the United States in the use of said Welland canal, in violation of the provisions of article 27 of the treaty of Washington, concluded May 8, 1871; and

Whereas, Said Welland canal is connected with the navigation of the great lakes, and I am satisfied that the passage through it of cargoes in transit to ports of the United States is made difficult and burdensome by said discriminating system of rebate and otherwise, and is reciprocally unjust and reasonable: now, therefore,

I, Benjamin Harrison, president of the United States of America, by virtue of the power to that end conferred upon me by said act of congress, approved July 26, 1892, do hereby direct that from and after September 1, 1892, until further notice, a toll of twenty cents per ton be levied, collected and paid on all freight of whatever kind or description passing through the St. Mary's Falls canal in transit to any port of the dominion of Canada, whether carried in vessels of the United States or of other nations; and to that extent I do hereby suspend from and after said date the right of free passage through said St. Mary's Falls canal of any and all cargoes or portions of cargoes in transit to Canadian ports.

In testimony whereof, etc.,

By the president:

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

JOHN W. FOSTER, Secretary of State.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 22.—There is intense excitement in official circles over the news received here that President Harrison had imposed the tolls on St. Mary's Falls canal. There were only four miniters in the city. However, the news soon spread through the leading officers of the government, and there is much loud talk indulged in as was a few days ago. It may be that parliament will be summoned to deal with the matter. The commercial men who heard of the matter speak strongly of the action of the dominion government in not removing the rebates on the St. Lawrence canals in the first instance and saving the trouble.

Death Cheats the Gallows.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Aug. 22.—Peter Wright, a condemned murderer, died suddenly in the county jail here Saturday evening of an epileptic fit. Wright fatally stabbed William Clark and escaped to Quincy, Ill., where he was captured, and he was sentenced November 10, 1891, to hang January 8, 1892. The case was appealed to the supreme court, which had not yet taken action.

Taken from Jail and Lynched.

SANTA ANA, Cal., Aug. 22.—Francisco Torres, who murdered William McKelvy, foreman of Mme. Modjeska's ranch, was lynched by a mob. About thirty disguised men went to the jail and broke open the front door with a sledge hammer; took Torres, and hanged him to a telegraph pole in the most public place in the city.

DITCHED A TRAIN.

Strikers Suspected of Derailing an Erie Passenger—Several Encounters Between Soldiers and Switchmen—The Situation Up to Date.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 22.—The second week of the railroad strike has opened. Three features are most prominent: An army of 5,000 soldiers is quartered in the city and county; an attempt, only partly successful so far, is being made to lift the freight blockade, and the danger of a strike of kindred organizations is no less imminent than heretofore.

The strikers made another attempt to wreck a train on the Erie Saturday night. The day express, leaving New York at 8 o'clock with four coaches and a parlor car, was the train they selected. The train left Linden on time and was running at a high rate of speed when the locomotive jumped the track and went plowing into the sand. The coupling-pin between the engine and first car broke and saved the train. The cars ran on for nearly a quarter of a mile before the emergency brakes were applied. The locomotive keeled over on its side and was not badly damaged. The fireman and engineer escaped with slight injuries. The passengers were badly frightened, but were not hurt. A locomotive from this city went after the irain.

The cause of the wreck was found to be a fish plate, which had been wedged between the main track and the switch in such a manner that the wheels of the locomotive were raised off the tracks. Five suspicious characters were seen loitering at the sceue when the train stopped and quickly started away when the trainmen approached. The Erie has offered $1,000 reward for the apprehension of the persons derailing the train.

Numerous encounters occurred at the docks after midnight between the militia and 'longshoremen. The latter are greatly wrought up over the action of the soldiers in making free use of their bayonets. They threaten to burn the docks and elevators if the militia is not withdrawn.

A lot of strikers attacked the picke guard of the Thirteenth regiment in the Central freight yards shortly after 11 o'clock. They were armed with coupling pins. Capt. Curtis ordered his men to charge on the mob, and the sight of the bayonets drove them away. No one was hurt.

The strikers were encouraged by the complete suspension of work in the elevators. About 1,300 grain shovelers quit work out of sympathy for the switchmen. They had no grievance, being satisfied with the wages paid, and are not employed by the railroads. They went out to complicate the tie-up and embarrass the railroads. The strikers deny that any of their number have offered to return to work, but it is known that seven strikers waited on Superintendent Voorhees and asked to be given their old places. He told them to report to the yardmaster at Erie street.

John A. Nevins, a striker, was caught in the act of throwing a switch when a train was approaching over the Lehigh Valley tracks near Dingen street. In a couple of minutes the engine would have gone through the open switch. He was made prisoner by a soldier, who turned him over to the police, and he was taken to headquarters and locked up.

The improvemement in the situation is only slight, but it favors the railroads. Under cover of the protection of soldiers the Central, Lehigh and Erie began to move a little freight. All the perishable freight that could be put in position was started east. The volume was not large, but it was sufficient to give the officials cause for elation and they now assert more positively than ever that the strike is broken and that in a couple of days they will be handling freight with usual dispatch.

On the other hand there appears to be very reasonable grounds for the rumor that the strike will spread to the east and the switchmen from Buffalo to the seaboard will quit work. This is likely to be ordered at any moment, but at the same time it appears unlikely that the firemen will go out. It is quite certain that they will not act hastily at least, and H. Walter Webb is confident that they will not go out at all.

The United States regulars on the frontier are in readiness for immediate movement should they be called upon, and this fact is regarded as an outgrowth of the present railway complications. Unless the labor leaders adopt decisive measures in new directions the switchmen in the Buffalo yards are undoubtedly defeated. They know it themselves, but still cling to a conviction that something will yet happen.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 22.—P. M. Arthur, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, returned here from a trip to Toronto and Buffalo. Mr. Arthur said that his visit had nothing whatever to do with the strike and that the engineers would not participate in the present trouble. "It is necessary," he remarked, "to communicate with the chief executive before planning a strike. As yet I have had no communication from any source relating to such an action. The engineers will not come out through sympathy with the switchmen, nor even with the firemen, unless they have some grieveance of their own. They will stay with their engines. I know of no reason why they should participate in the present trouble."

American Citizens Expect to Get $187,000,000 from an English Estate.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 22.—Thomas Booth, a well-known liquor dealer of this city, has just received advices from England of a speedy settlement between the crown and the heirs to the $187,000,000 of the Chadwick estate held in the court of chancery 125 years. Booth has recently returned from England, where in an old trunk in the attic of the mansion of his deceased mother he found the documents that proved the claims of Cornelius Chadwick, of Philadelphia, himself and others to the estate.

A FATAL BOLT.

Lightning Demolishes a Barn with Terrible Results.

GRANT, Neb., Aug. 22.—Five Keith county farmers sought shelter from a storm in the barn of Scott Gastineau. A lightning bolt demolished part of the barn, killing James McHugh and Levi Gastineau and rendering unconscious the others. They are in a dangerous condition and marked with livid scars on the neck and shoulders where the deadly fluid struck. The dead men were so terribly mangled that interment was necessary at once. Their clothes were fired and the bodies horribly burned.

Estimates of Population in State Institutions Made in 1890.

The state board of corrections and charities is accustomed to making estimates, in advance, of the population of the state institutions as a basis for estimates of appropriations for current expenses. The estimates for the fiscal year ended July 31, 1892, were made two years ago and it is interesting to see how near they were to the actual facts. A comparison is made in the following table, which shows the average number of inmates of state institutions for the year ended July 31, 1892:

INSTITUTION.	Est'd No.	Act'l No.
State public school	122	130
Reform school	300	292
Totals	422	422
School for the deaf	146	150
School for feeble-minded	310	306
Totals	456	456
School for the blind	52	39
Total, children's institutions	930	917
Soldiers' home	160	141
State reformatory	135	131
State prison	375	327
Hospitals for insane	2,300	2,190
Total adult institutions	2,970	2,782
Grand totals	3,900	3,699

Sues for the Loss of a Wife.

Capt. B. B. Inman, proprietor and manager of the Inman tug line at Duluth, was made defendant in a suit for $25,000 damages. A. D. Frost, the plaintiff, alleges Capt. Inman alienated the affections of Mrs. Frost. Mrs. Frost was recently granted a divorce from her husband. In granting the decree the court stated that Mrs. Frost had no ground for action until her husband circulated slanderous statements linking her name with Capt. Inman, and gave her a bill on these grounds.

Polk County's Unoccupied Land.

There are still 8,620 acres of unoccupied land in Polk county, 1,820 of which are still unsurveyed. The entries at the land office here for the past quarter have been 42,256 acres, which are divided as follows: Cash entries, 2,602.81; homesteads, 23,089.85 acres; final proofs, 15,123.43, and final timber cultures, 1,140 acres. The total cash receipts for the quarter were $6,721.79, the pre-emptions amounting to $2,439.22 and the homesteads to $2,298.78.

She Was Disappointed.

Miss Maggie Levens, chief cook at the Howard house in Litchfield, took a dose of strychnine and died in twenty minutes. Miss Levens was about 30 years old, and had been employed at the Howard house for the past two years. She had relatives near Minneapolis. The suicide was said to be another chapter in the old story, disappointed in a man.

Suicide in a Watering Trough.

Mrs. J. C. Koch, of Springwater township, Rock county, committed suicide by drowning herself in a watering trough on her farm. She leaves four children, one a babe a few months old and the oldest 8 years. Despondency, caused by illness, was the cause.

The Fair Fund Complete.

World's Fair Commissioner Hunt states that Minnesota's special fund, which was assessed by the counties themselves, had all practically been received and that the preparing of the state's exhibit would now go on apace.

The News Briefly Stated.

Toby Tompkins' Melon Patch.

[Original.]

ISRAEL TOMPKINS, an old fashioned New England deacon, had been many years married before a child was born to him, and when at last there came a fine healthy boy-baby the good man reverently named him Tobias, which, as my young readers doubtless know, signifies, in Hebrew, "the goodness of the Lord."

Two years afterward the little family was further increased by the advent of a daughter, to whom the happy parents gave the name Anna, in Hebrew, "gracious." No more children were added to the deacon's household, and he and his wife piously resolved to bring up the two they were already blessed with in the "fear and admonition of the Lord," which, in the deacon's inflexible creed, meant constant work and study and a total abstention from the pomps and vanities of the world. The mother, however, was wiser in her generation, and the lives of the little ones were not by any means devoid of innocent pleasures.

One springtime, when the brother and sister were ten and eight years of age, respectively, to Toby was given a small piece of rich garden ground to work and crop for his own benefit, while Anna was made happy by the gift of an orphaned ewe lamb, which she was to raise by hand, and its wool, as well as that of its progeny for three years, was to belong exclusively to her.

Toby, with a shrewd eye to the possibilities of Salem market, planted his six square rods of black soil with the best varieties of water and musk melon seed. He very faithfully cultivated the patch and zealously guarded the growing vines from the ravages of chinch bugs and cutworms, so that by the first of July they completely covered the ground and gave promise of an abundant crop of fruit.

Anna and Toby held many grave arguments as to which of them was likely to profit most by their respective properties; she stoutly contending that, in the three years, she could make a fortune from the sale of wool, and he as strenuously insisting that, within the same time, his melon patch would bring him fabulous wealth. But, whatever their success might be, it was firmly settled between the children that they were to do wonderful things for the good of mankind generally with their money and especially for their parents—little imagining that, even as they went along, they were reaping, in the way of happy, healthful occupation, the richest reward they would ever have.

Aided by his father's advice, Toby spared no pains to force his crop to early maturity, so as to make sales while prices were high, and one evening in the middle of August he gleefully announced that next day he should take to the city half a dozen cantaloupes and as many red-core watermelons, now ripe enough, he said, to sell. "Father, mother, Anna, just come out to see them!" he concluded; and the whole family, including, of course, the pet lamb, adjourned to the garden.

There they feasted their eyes upon the deeply-ribbed, yellow musk and shiny green watermelons which, still reposing among the luxuriant vines, with hundreds of less mature specimens, did indeed look ready for market.

"Well, my son," said the deacon, "you can take the old horse and spring wagon and go to town all alone to-morrow. We shall see what kind of a trader you will make."

The eager boy retired early to bed, so as "to make morning come quickly," and the first beams of the rising sun had hardly kissed the dew-laden vines when he was on the spot, ready to pluck the first fruits of his harvest.

Then, oh, horror! he stared in amazement, rubbed his doubting eyes and looked again and again, until the sad truth forced itself upon his brain. The tender foliage was not in any way disturbed or injured, but every fully ripe melon was gone! Sobbing now with grief and disappointment, poor Toby ran back to the house and reported his loss.

"An enemy hath done this thing," observed the angry deacon, and at family worship that morning he earnestly prayed that "all evil doers might be brought to confusion."

After breakfast, Anna and her lamb wandered off as usual, while Toby and his father went out to the despoiled melon patch with a view of tracing the thief if possible. For some time their search was in vain, but by and by they discovered, just on the soft edge of an onion bed, the imprint of a naked foot. No tracks, however, were to be found on the hardened walks, and, for awhile, the amateur detectives were at fault.

At last, upon extending their beat, they came to a field planted with potatoes; and here, between the rows, prints of the same foot were numerous, and all appeared to lead off toward the "pine woods," within the depths of which dwelt at all times old "Uncle Jake" and "Aunt Liza," an impoverished colored couple, who lived, people hardly knew how.

"Toby," said Deacon Tompkins, impressively, "I suspect those shiftless niggers are the thieves. We'll go over to their cabin, and if they're guilty I'll jail them, sure."

So, off through the solemn pines went father and son, the one intent upon summary vengeance and the other secretly hoping in his young, compassionate heart that the robbers might not be found. The half murmuring hush of the grand old woods did not whisper of mercy to the de

He strode sternly on, feeling a grim satisfaction in the belief that he had been chosen as the instrument of divine justice. The negro hut lay fully two miles within the recesses of the forest, but was reached in due time. Going quietly up to the door, the deacon entered without knocking and found his suspicions more than justified, for, sitting up on a miserable corn-shuck bed was the wasted, fever-stricken form of "Uncle Jake," and across his knees rested one-half of a large watermelon, the inside of which he was eagerly devouring by the aid of a big horn spoon!

"So you're caught at last," thundered the irate deacon, "the way of the transgressor is hard. Where is your wife?"

The poor old creature made no denial, but broke into pitiful tears.

"Lawd a-massy, deekin," said he, "aint I sufferin' 'nuff a'ready? Doan' be hard on ole Jake. Nobody ain't bin near us for mo'n two weeks an' we was dun starved. We reckoned that you wouldn't never miss a few milyuns, an' I hankered arter 'em so bad that 'Liza went out las' night an' fotched 'em. She's gone 'crost to Mister Smiff's now to trade one of 'em off for co'n meal, an' I hope you'll not have her took up. We ain't noways fit for work, an' the white folks has all forgot us. 'Liza's bin sick too, so's she couldn't git out till yisterday."

Not a word did the unforgiving deacon answer to the old man's confession, but, abruptly saying to his son: "Come on, Toby. We'll go across by Smith's creek and maybe catch up the old woman. Then I'll get out a warrant for them both," hastily went out.

The boy, with brimming eyes, slowly followed his father to the door, then, unnoticed, slipped back to the bed, pressed into Jake's hand his whole worldly wealth—a bright quarter, his mother's birthday gift—and softly whispering: "Don't cry, uncle. I guess father won't hurt you," ran off with a lightened heart.

Smith's creek, was, in those days, a quite considerable stream, and, even when only at summer height, contained many deep pools and dangerous rapids.

Along the way, as he walked rapidly toward it, the moody deacon quoted passages of Scripture, all tending to prove how necessary it is that the righteous man shall be "a terror to evil doers," and when Toby tremblingly ventured to say: "Blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain mercy," his father gravely commanded him to be silent.

Thus, each indulging in his own thoughts, they went on until within a hundred yards of the creek, when sharply out upon the sultry air there rang the piercing shriek of a child, almost instantly followed by answering shout from some one else.

"Oh, father," cried Toby, "that sounded like Anna's voice," and the two ran with all speed toward the stream.

On coming to the edge of the high bank, whence they could look down upon the water, they saw a strange sight: Anna was kneeling upon a long, slender tree-stem, which spanned a swift chute, known as "The Black Rapids," screaming and wringing her hands in wild terror, while in the rushing torrent, some yards below, Jessie, the pet lamb, was apparently drowning.

This, however, was but a part of the thrilling spectacle.

Just entering, and already up to her waist in the fierce current, was the aged negress, "Aunt 'Liza," who, as she pushed bravely on, called out to the frightened child: "Doan' be skart honey, I'll sabe the precious lam'"—a promise she could never have fulfilled, for, even as father and son rushed down the bank, she herself was swept off her feet and hurled like a straw along the raging flood.

Twice, before the deacon could reach her, the poor, chivalrous soul was hidden beneath the surface, and when finally, with great difficulty, brought to shore was almost insensible. Meantime Jessie, still piteously bleating, had floated to a quiet pool below and was easily rescued. Not until then did Anna, now radiant with joy, rise to her feet, run lightly along the log and spring into her father's dripping arms.

Then Anna explained how Jessie had attempted to follow her over the tree bridge, but, being frightened by the dizzy height, had fallen in; how her own alarmed cry had been answered by "Aunt Liza," and how the latter, until then unseen, had dropped a big melon she was carrying, and plunged in to the rescue.

The deeply pondering man uttered a half smothered ejaculation: "The Lord hath rebuked me," and, lifting the frail creature to her feet, simply said: "Come home now with us, Aunt 'Liza, and get dry clothing and food."

What Deacon Tompkins' thoughts were as he walked in advance of the little party on the homeward way, none may know, but their tenor may be guessed from the fact that, after the good wife had supplied her strange guest with comfortable garments and a hot meal, he went out to the field, called his man, John, and directed him to harness a quiet horse to the spring wagon, lay on its bottom a thick mattress and pillows and go with him through the pine woods.

When the pair arrived at "Uncle Jake's" cabin, they found the old man sitting in the blazing sunshine at the door, shivering with his daily recurring chill. On seeing the wagon draw up the poor, frightened fellow cried out: "Oh, Massa Tompkins, is you goin' to take this pore niggah to jail?"

"No, no, uncle," gravely replied the deacon. "the Lord hath shown me a better way," and with unwonted tenderness the two men placed the attenuated form on the soft mattress, and taking with them the few articles worth moving from the shanty, drove carefully off.

In less than one month from that time the old "uncle" and "aunt" were domiciled in the capacious farmhouse, were restored to health and were able to do many useful chores; but the change in them was no greater than that in the deacon himself, for he had at last learned in what kind of religion true happiness is to be found, and thenceforth his household was one over which angels might well have rejoiced.

A GREAT EXHIBIT.

Success is Assured for the Minneapolis Industrial Exposition.

The Preparations for the Display Which Opens August 31st are all Complete.—It Will be Better Than Ever.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 23.—The officers of the Minneapolis Industrial Exposition have about completed all of the details of preparation and will open the doors to the public August 31st. The applications for exhibit space have never been so numerous and it is with perfect confidence that they promise the patrons the best exposition ever held in the state; more brilliant than any of its predecessors in point of attractiveness and attendance.

The space allowed for exhibits is almost disposed of, and it looks as if many exhibitors will be disappointed in securing the desired amount of room. This year's exposition will top them all.

The management have spared no pains and expense in gathering what is conceded to be the best display ever within the walls of the building. The whole world has been ransacked for novelties that will not only please but instruct as well. The collection showing a fac simile of the abode of the Cliff Dwellers is alone well worth several times the price of admission. This unknown race is a marvel of the scientific age, and it is only within the past few years that anything definite has been known about them.

New and novel features are to be found on every hand. Not the least among the novelties will be the Brass Band Tournament. Entries are already being made for the event and it promises to be one of the musical features of the season. The regular musical program rendered daily will be furnished by the 13th Regiment Band of New York City under the leadership of Fred N. Innes. There is only one way to properly appreciate the Exposition and that is to visit and personally view the displays.

For vocal music there will be a War Song Concert participated in by one thousand or more singers, producing a musical and military Allegory of the Civil War. Songs of pathos and patriotism will be sung with thrilling effect by the immense chorus, assisted by an orchestra of fifty pieces and Innes' world famous military band. This "Allegory of War in Song" is to be given by permission of Mr. S. G. Pratt, the composer.

Not least among the attractions will be the art gallery. This department has always been made a feature and each year has been seen better exhibits. The art director has spent many months in selecting the collection and none but meritorious work were accepted. The display will be made up of the private galleries in Minneapolis and St. Paul, and surrounding cities, with collections from the East. The management have already received letters from artists in France and Spain, asking for space upon the walls of the gallery. On the lower floor will be the relics of the Cliff Dwellers and Mound Builders, besides a large amount of Indian-made pottery, both ancient and modern. There will also be a native Indian family in the collection.

Special attention is called to the "Zoographicon" or taxidermist exhibit, which consists of an extensive display of the animal and bird life of the Northwest, commencing with the Vermillion range of the far Northwest, the animal life of the whole territory to the Rocky Mountains will be illustrated. There will be a panoramic view of the different localities—the Vermillion country, North-western Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana to see. This exhibit alone will be worth ten times the price of admission to the big show.

The children who will attend the Minneapolis Exposition this year will have more fun than at a circus. Innumerable attractions have been provided for the little ones. This year the Parisian Caroussel, or merry-go-round, will afford unlimited amusement.

Ten live burros and a four-horned sheep will be among the attractions.

There is an elevated electric railway for young and old alike. This road runs the entire circuit of the building, beside passing through a tunnel.

The fish exhibit will surpass that of last year, while the industrial displays will be marked by novelty and uniqueness. In the words of the poet, "If you don't go you will miss it."

Worry.

If we said our prayers one-half as faithfully as we render homage to a certain little heathen god enshrined in every home and heart, we should stand a fairer show for Heaven than we now do. There are hosts of people who offer continual sacrifice to this alien god; the wrath of which neither is, was, nor ever shall be, appeased. These people take no comfort in anything a kind Providence sends in their way, just because of the unappeasable little monster who sits over against every good thing in life, like a bat in the moonlight. Upon the palms of its hideous hands, in characters worn deep like the channel wrought in a human face by uncounted tears, and upon its brow in lurid letters that glow with a baleful light, is engraved its name, and that name, translated, reads "Worry." It compels obeisance from the wisest and exacts devotion of Gentiles and Jews alike.—

AT HOME WITH JUSTICE.

A CERTAIN proofreader is said to get ten dollars an hour for his services and pays a heavy fine for every typographical errror.

NORTH CAROLINA provides a fine of $50 or 30 days' imprisonment for dealers who fail to mark on each package of vegetable or garden seed offered for sale the year in which it was produced.

IN a London police court recently Rev. Samuel Barnes was condemned to pay $2.50 fine and $15.75 costs for cruelty to an old baymare in having turned her out to graze when she was unequal to so great exertion.

A FRENCH actress has just obtained damages from a biscuit manufacturer who advertised her portrait with his wares and which the lady maintained was a perfect libel. The judge agreed with her and the lady's wounded vanity was consoled by a sum of cash.

THE supreme court of Pennsylvania has ruled that a bicycle is a vehicle and has all rights on a highway that a wagon has, and that a teamster must accord a wheelman the same privileges of the road that he is bound under the law to extend to another teamster.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—At some recent weddings the bridesmaids' bouquets have been horseshoes with the nails worked out in contrasting blossoms.

—Jellied Veal: Boil veal very tender, pick it up fine, place in a mold, add the water it was boiled in and season with salt and pepper; set on the ice until it is firm. Garnish with thin slices of hard-boiled eggs.—N. Y. Observer.

—Tapioca Cream: Soak three tablespoonfuls of tapioca in one half-cup of water over night. Bring one quart of milk to a boil, then put in the tapioca. When cool add the beaten yolks of four eggs and one cup of sugar. Pour in a dish and add the beaten whites.—Boston Budget.

—Peach Pickle: One quart of good vinegar to three pounds of sugar. This will be enough for a peck of peaches. Boil and skim. Stick five or six cloves in each peach, and boil a dozen or so at a time till all are tender. Take out with a fork and lay in a jar. When all are done strain the boiling vinegar over them.—Christian Inquirer.

—Cream Tomato: One-half can of tomato, heated and seasoned with salt, sugar, butter, and thickened slightly with flour. Just before turning on to slices of hot buttered toast, add one cupful of cream (the richer the better) into which has been stirred a small pinch of soda. Serve immediately. This makes a nice supper dish.—Good Housekeeping.

—Ragout of Veal: Cut the veal into small pieces and put them in a saucepan with half a tablespoonful of butter, stirring to keep from burning. When hot, nearly cover with water, add half a tablespoonful of flour, two small onions cut into quarters, three stocks of parsley, one of thyme and a bay leaf, all tied together, and salt and pepper to taste.—Housekeeper.

—Potage with Turnips: Pare two turnips and cut them in small slices, and put them in a sauce-pan with a pint of milk and half an onion sliced. When cooked, mash them through a colander and put them in a sauce-pan, and milk to suit the taste, and half a spoonful of butter. Let it heat, then add the yolk of an egg, beaten in three tablespoonfuls of water, let cook until thoroughly done, then add salt to taste just before serving.—Housekeeper.

—A Foundation for Sauces: A good foundation for sauces may be made as follows: Heat in a saucepan one ounce of butter, two carrots, one onion, one sprig of thyme, a bay leaf, six whole peppers, three cloves, two pieces of celery, and one of parsley. Boil fifteen minutes. Add one pint of soup stock, then strain. Melt two ounces of chicken fat, add four ounces of browned flour, stir smooth, then add the strained liquid of the vegetables, two more quarts of soup stock, simmer and reduce to half; strain. A good base for many sauces.—Ladies' Home Journal.

—Veal Loaf: Chop four pounds of raw veal and a pound of ham very fine together, mix with a pint of bread crumbs, a teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of finely-minced onion, two well-beaten eggs, half a teaspoonful of pepper, powdered sage, cloves and allspice. Mix thoroughly and put in a square tin pan and weight down; when molded turn out on baking pan, glaze over with the white of an egg, and bake in a very slow oven two hours and a half, basting frequently with a little hot water and butter; set to cool, and slice thin when cold.—Home Magazine.

—To make a gooseberry sauce, top and tail a sufficient number of green gooseberries. Add about half a pint of water to a quart of berries and let them stew in an earthen pipkin till they are thoroughly tender. Add sugar enough to make them palatable, but still leave them a pleasant acid. Serve the sauce with meats as cranberry or apple sauces are served. Green gooseberries also make a very nice pie, either baked like a rhubarb pie in a crust, or first stewed, baked without an upper crust, and then covered with a meringue, like a lemon or apple meringue pie.

MICRO-ORGANISMS IN CHEESE.

Noxious Properties of a Questionable Article of Diet.

A writer on microbes, who is inclined to view the matter rather facetiously, says:

There are thirty different kinds in cheese,
So if ever you fancy any of these
Have them cooked or let them freeze—
Even then you'll risk disease.

That cheese is indigestible is not to be wondered at. Microscopial and bacteriological studies of cheese shows that it swarms with microbes of various sorts, and, as is now well known, the flavors characteristic of the different varieties of cheese are wholly due to the products of microbic action; the older the cheese the more numerous the microbes, hence the greater probability that its presence in the stomach will set up termentative or putrefactive changes in the food substances which have been eaten. Prof. Vaughan's researches have shown that cheese always contains a larger or smaller amount of tyrotoxicon, and doubtless also the microbes by which this powerfully toxic agent is produced. Cheese must certainly be regarded as a questionable article of diet. It should be mentioned, however, for the benefit of those who will insist upon retaining it in their dietry, that its most noxious properties may be neutralized by cooking. If the sterilization of milk is wholesome and advantageous proceeding, certainly the sterilization of cheese is a dietic duty which ought not to be neglected since milk contains only about 6,300,000,000 microbes per quart, while the proportion of these organisms in cheese is vastly greater.—Good Health.

A Favorite Garniture.

Notwithstanding the lavish and elegant array of laces and silk-cord trimmings intermingled with beads, silver, copper, etc., the cut-jet garnitures are far too tempting to be passed over. Jet is, in fact, still the rage, with no likelihood of its losing its hold for a long time to come. Jet appliques in Venetian, Persian and Greek devices, and in lace-like Spanish arabesques, are used, not only on lace, silk, net and grenadine toilets, but upon fancy surahs, cashmeres, poplins, light cloth gowns and some of the most stylish and expensive summer wraps.—N. Y. Post.

Daughter—No: he took the elevated.

"I thought he would. I knew he was too mean to live the moment I set eyes on him."

"How did you?"

"He wears a full beard."—N. Y. Weekly

TAKE HEART,
if you're a suffering woman. The chronic weaknesses, painful disorders, and delicate derangements that come to woman only have a positive remedy in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. If you'll faithfully use it, every disturbance and irregularity can be permanently cured.

It's a legitimate medicine for woman, carefully adapted to her delicate organization. It builds up and invigorates the entire system, regulates and promotes all the proper functions, and restores health and strength.

"Favorite Prescription" is the only remedy for woman's ills that's guaranteed. If it fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

Which is the best to try, if you have Catarrh—a medicine that claims to have cured others, or a medicine that is backed by money to cure you? The proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy agree to cure your Catarrh, perfectly and permanently, or they'll pay you $500 in cash.

immediately for the damage that dangerous washing compounds do. It's there, and it's going on all the time, but you won't see its effects, probably, for several months. It wouldn't do, you know, to have them too dangerous.

The best way is to take no risk. You needn't worry about damage to your clothes, if you keep to the original washing compound—Pearline; first made and fully proved. What can you gain by using the imitations of it? Prize packages, cheaper prices, or whatever may by urged for them, wouldn't pay you for one ruined garment.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled; if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 346 JAMES PYLE, New York.

IT IS A DUTY you owe yourself and family to get the best value for your money. Economize in your footwear by purchasing W. L. Douglas Shoes, which represent the best value for prices asked, as thousands will testify.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN,

THE BEST SHOE IN THE WORLD FOR THE MONEY.

A genuine sewed shoe, that will not rip, fine calf, seamless, smooth inside, flexible, more comfortable, stylish and durable than any other shoe ever sold at the price. Equals custom made shoes costing from $4 to $5.

$4 and $5 Hand-sewed, fine calf shoes. The most stylish, easy and durable shoes ever sold at these prices. They equal fine imported shoes costing from $5 to $12.

$3.50 Police Shoe, worn by farmers and all others who want a good heavy calf, three soled, extension edge shoe, easy to walk in, and will keep the feet dry and warm.

$2.50 Fine Calf, $2.25 and $2 Workingmen's Shoes will give more wear for the money than any other make. They are made for service. The increasing sales show that workingmen have found this out.

BOYS' $2 and Youths' $1.75 School Shoes are worn by the boys everywhere. The most serviceable shoes sold at these prices.

LADIES' $3 Hand-Sewed, $2.50, $2 and $1.75 Shoes for Misses are made of the best Dongola or fine Calf, as desired. They are very stylish, comfortable and durable. The $3 shoe equals custom made shoes costing from $4 to $5. Ladies who wish to economize in their footwear are finding this out.

CAUTION.—Beware of dealers substituting shoes without W. L. Douglas' name and the price stamped on bottom. Such substitutions are fraudulent and subject to prosecution by law for obtaining money under false pretences.

ASK FOR W. L. DOUGLAS' SHOES.

If not for sale in your place send direct to Factory, stating kind, size and width wanted. Postage free. Will give exclusive sale to shoe dealers and general merchants where I have no agents. Write for Catalogue. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

DELANO DIARY

--State Fair September 5 to 10.

—Mrs. D. W. Freeman made one ot her customary trips about the village on Tuesday.

—John Borsch has removed to his old stand which has been enlarged and is now one of the most commodious in town.

—Saturday evening is the date for the opening Democratic rally in Delano. Turn out everybody, and hear the "Silver Tongued Orator," Chris A. Gallagher.

—Miss Mable Parsons has resigned from her position as teacher in the Delano school. We understand Miss Anna Fish, of Minneapolis will take her room.

—Otto Marr, of Delano, came up on the morning train yesterday. It is said he will establish a branch store in this town.—Dassel cor. in Litchfield Independent.

—From the Maple Lake News we learn that Mr. Strout has packed his goods and shipped them to Minneapolis. Mr. S. was formerly in the drug business in this place.

—Some of the boys are having considerable fun about a party who were out fishing several days ago. Some say they tried to drive Dad Gast's horse backwards, for five miles in order to reach home.

—Subscribe for the BUFFALO GAZETTE for $1 per year. The leading paper of the county, according to the St. Peter Herald, itself one of the brightest lights among the Democratic papers of the state.

—Read John B. Plattner's new add of his New Cash Store. John says every thing is fresh and new. Just from the factory, and invites all his old friends and others desirous of buying good goods cheap to call.

—Rev. J. R, Davies will preach at 10:30 a. m. at the Sibel church. People are invited to bring their dinners along and eat them in the grove and remain to the grove meeting in the afetrnoon. Everybody welcome.

—Supt. O. C. Gregg, of the Farmers' Institute is, we understand, prepared to furnish tents to such farmers as visit the State Fair with their families. Write and secure one in time. His address is 1426, Sixth street Southeast, Minneapolis.

—The court has decided in the case of the Ernest Zierman estate, that the farm was the old gentleman's home stead and that his wife, in Germany, is entitled to hold it free from debt, and as against all creditors and mortgages.

--Threshers are leaving for the west nearly every day now. John Ball, William Steffes, Charles Weis, Jr., Gus. Anderson and Alvard Johnson, in company with John Neison and sons, of St. Michaels left during the week for Browns Valley.

—William Maynard, of Buffalo, has rented Lohmillers building and intends putting in a bakery and lunch room, next week. Mr. M. has been in the business before and will doubtless satisfy a long felt want, and furnish hot buscuits in short notice.

—It would be in good taste for the Cleveland Club to appoint some committees on hall decoration, on reception of delegates and visitors to the Democratic county convention, and otherwise provide for the comfort of those present on that occasion. These things will doubtless be attended to at the next meeting of the club.

—Professor Probst has been turning his storage battery of scientific knowledge and his mechanical skill to the advantage of his employes in great shape this week. Louey is one of the men that would be missed in more fields than one should he chance to sever his citizenship with Delano. C. G. was pouring over the ponderous ledgers at the bank during the absence of their usual manipulator.

—Hon. B. F. Christlieb is busily engaged building his new store at Long Lake. Consequently our "Historical Facts" are wanting this week. They have arrived at a point which might be termined the dark ages, the dark ages of the Rebellion and the Sioux massacre of 1862, and more people are familiar with the facts now being narrated than with those told in previous numbers of the GAZETTE. We have still on hand a few numbers from July 1, 1892, when the "Historical Facts" first appeared. Persons subscribing can have them sent dating their subscription from July 1, thus obtaining the full history at no extra cost.

—Coon hunters are about as plentiful as coons this fall.

— Minneapolis Exposition opens next Wednesday, August 31.

—Read Brandon & Jacobs new advertisement in another column.

--The basket sociable at the M. E. Parsonage, last night was a grand success.

—Ennis Brandon has disposed of his span of fine mares advertised in the GAZETTE, to a party from Waconia.

---Johnny Plattner has a new add in this paper. Read it, and call around and and tell Johnny, just for fun, you know.

--The Eagle favors non-partisan city councils, because she got left out on the other deal. For school officers though, none are fit but straight Republicans.

—A. F. Corey attended the teachers' institute at Buffalo this week. We understand he intends teaching in the Welker schoool house this winter.

---If you trade with our advertisers we believe you will have no reason to complain that they did not use you as well as anybody in their respective lines would.

--The Eagle Celebrates its twenty-first birthday by pitching into the GAZETTE again. She can't exist without "chawing" over her old editoral about every so often and trying to fit it to some one.

—Farmers have about completed harvesting their grain and are stacking and threshing. Some of the grain had to be cut with the cradle and some with the scythe. Although work was hard and long drawn out most everybond has an abundance and to spare.

—Dr. T. J. Catlin, of Delano, has been in the city during the week. The Doctor finds time for duties other than those of the practise of his profession and among others that of running the Buffalo Gazette, the leading paper of Wright county.—St. Peter Herald.

—Messrs. Tierney and Bowen went hunting Wednesday, they got home along in the middle of the afternoon. The Son of Old Erin in order not to come home empty handed brought along a good sized turtle and a bunch of pond lillies. The Nimrods looked tired and as if they would like something to eat.

---On Tuesday, the case of Caroline Boerner vs. Louis Rausch, administrator of the estate of Charles Buckman, deceased, et. al., was heard in M. A. O'Hair's office. F. H. Latham, of Howard Lake referee. Attorneys Alley, Bailey and O'Hair for plaintiff and Wendell & Pidgeon for defendant. The parties agreed upon a statement of facts which they submitted to the referee and from which facts the referee will make his finding. The amount involved is about $3,500 including real estate and personal property.

Frank Eppel has gone to Dakota to assist in reaping and threshing the crop.

Fred Konohl has charge of the round elevator since Valentine Eppel resigned.

Mrs. Lyons and daughter, of Wayzetta came up on Sunday to visit friends here.

H. Berlund, of Buffalo, was over on Wednesday laying in a supply of cradle fingers.

Louis Daniel Rousch, of Howard Lake, was calling on old Delano friends on Tuesday.

Mr. John Sturman and daughter, went to Wilmar, on Tuesday, for a week's visit,

J. E. Brothers, of Minneapolis, was up looking after his Delano interests on Tuesday.

W. C. Plattner, of Herman, has taken a position in his brother J.B's. store at this place.

E. E. Richey, one of Howard Lake's prominent Democrats, was a GAZETTE caller on Monday.

Miss Mary Kately, of Maple Plain, and her mother from Ohio, were visiting friends here yesterday.

Dr. C. B. Ames, of Rockford, visited Delano on Wednesday. He has recovered from his late sickness.

E. E. Shrader went west yesterday morning to interview the people on that important subject, life insurance.

John Lohmiller expects to move into the house formerly occupied by the priest and located on North Second street.

Hon. Chris. A. Galligher, The Silvert Tongued orator, at the city hall tomorrow night, August 27th. Don't fail to hear him.

Vernon S., son of Prof. Brokaw, of Litchfield, passed through town about 2 p. m. yesterday enroute for St. Paul, via the bicicle line.

F. B. Lamson, of Cokato, called in a few minutes on Monday morning on his way to Buffalo, to attend the teachers' institute.

Attorneys F. E. Latham, of Howard Lake; J. T. Alley and J. H. Wendell, of Buffalo and Bailey, of Minneapolis, were Delano visitors on Tuesday.

Mrs. A. D. Smith and children who have been spending the summer with her father John Cunningham returned last Saturday to her home in Omaha.

Among people from a distance in attendance at the M. E. church Sunday evening was Lloyd Painter, of Mound City; Elmer Cruikshank, Franklin; Henry Parslow, Rockford; Miss Mealey, of Howard Lake and Misses Sturman, of Franklin.

County Cullings.

Some of the county politicians of the Republican faith evidently think, it's a long Alley that has no turn, and are inclined to turn him out for Tarbox.

The Buffalo Journal evidently thinks the g. o. p. in need of air brakes, from the way she continues to keep the name of Westinghouse, as a candidate, before her readers.

A call has been issued for the Republican County convention at Buffalo on Wednesday Sept. 14. The Legislative convention to take place the following day.

The Eagle has had enough of the Scandinavian business and dont propose to fill up the county ticket with them. She ought to have been around when they put Knute on, and when they fired McGhee off.

We are in receipt of the first number of the Maple Lake News this week. The News is run by Attorney J. L. Cass and is of the People's party persuasion and its editor appears to be an aggressive individual.

F. B. Lamson, of Cokato, is mentioned as a candidate for county auditor on the Republican ticket. Mr. L. has been interested in educational matters in this county for several years, having taught several terms ot school and edited the Cokato Observer for a term He has also figured among leaders in the Republican ranks and is a young man.

It will soon be time to hold caucuses for electing delegates to the county convention. Our county is no longer certainly Republican. We may elect every man on our ticket if we put up only our best men for the offices. Be sure to attend the caucus and do your best to send as delegates the men who will be honest and careful and put up a ticket we can support heartily from top to bottom.

A Democratic rally will be held at Delano on Saturday evening the 27th inst., when a vigorous address will be given by Christ Gallagher, of Minneapolis, and other noted speakers. Waverly will undoubtedly be represented and the proposal has been made that as large and enthusiastic a party as can be gathered from the neighborhood should attend on the occasion and make the rafters of the building in which the rally is to be held reverberate with applause. We are going to win this election without question and there's no use in being quiet over the coming victory. Let us wake the echoes.—Waverly Tribune.

Come on Waverly, Tribune and all. Mr. Gallagher will furnish you with plenty of chances for applause, and as for winning the election this fall it does look that way.

Teachers Institute.

The State Teachers' Institute met at Buffalo on Monday morning. Prof. Pendergast, Mrs Beede and Supt. Lindsley conducting the exercises wuich were interesting and instructive and well attended. Superintendent Lindsley held an half hour meeting before each regular session, giving instruction in the common studies. Mrs. Beede gave instructions in the Ling system of physical culture and in singing. Prof. Penderghast drilled those present in reading and mathematics.

Millinery Store.

I have closed my business for a three week's vacation while my old stand, now occupided by Mr. Yancy, is being fitted up, when I will open up a new and complete assortment of Millinery Goods, one of the finest ever in Delano. Silks, Ribbons, Hats, Caps, and everything usually found in a first class establishment. Look out for them at my old stand about September 1st. MRS. E. J. SWEDEBACK.

To the Public.

W. H. FRAZEE. LEON FRAZEE.

Having leased the American House at Buffalo, together with the stables in connection with the property, we would most respectfully solicit the patronage of the traveling public whenever in the county seat. We will try to furnish accommodations as good and at as reasonable rates as any in the village. We will continue our machinery business in both Buffalo and Delano as heretofore. Give us a call at either or all our business places.

Yours Respectfully,

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage duly made, executed and delivered by G. O. Trow and his wife Abbie Trow, as mortgagors, to George E. Bull as mortgagee, bearing date the first day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty seven (1887) with a power of sale therein contained, which mortgage was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Wright and State of Minnesota on the twenty-second (22) day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven (1887), at nine (9) o'clock a. m. in book four (4) of mortgages on page one (1).

Whereas said mortgage was given to secure the payment at maturity of the sum of nine hundred ($900) dollars with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, according to the conditions of ten (10) cupon notes bearing even dates with said mortgage. Whereas said mortgagee did on the 30th day of April 1892 pay taxes for the years 1890 and 1891 then due and unpaid as follows, to-wit: For the year 1890 the sum of ten dollars and seventy eight cents, for the year 1891, the sum of thirty-nine dollars and forty-eight cents, which sum is also claimed to be recovered as an additional lean on said lands and whereas there is claimed to be due and there is due and unpaid on said mortgage and on the notes secured thereby at the date of this notice the sum of ten hundred and sixty-two dollars and seventy cents ($1062.70) principle and interest besides the taxes paid as aforesaid, and interest on said taxes amounting to the sum of one dollar and forty cents and whereas no proceedings at law or in equity has been instituted to recover said mortgage debt or taxes as aforesaid, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sail of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage to-wit: Lot number one (1) and block number thirteen (13) situated in the village of Cokato, Wright county, Minnesota, according to the duly recorded plat of record, in the Register of Deeds office in and for the county of Wright and state of Minnesota, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Wright county at the front door of the court house in the village of Buffalo in said county on Thursday, the twenty-ninth (29) day of September, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two (1892) at two o'clock p. m. at public vendue to the highest bidder, for cash, to pay said mortgage debt, principle and interest and taxes paid as aforesaid with costs of these proceeings, together with the sum of thirty-five ($35) dollars attorney's fee stipulated in said mortgage to be paid in case of foreclosure.

Dated August 10, 1892.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

Democratic Legislative Convention.

A Democratic district convention for the 38th legislative district, comprising Wright and Sherburne counties will be held in the village of Delano, on Friday, September 16th, 1892, at 2 p. m. or immediately after the county convention has adjourned for the purpose of placing in nomination four representatives.

The counties are entitled to representation as follows: One delegate at large from each county, and one for every sixty votes or major fraction thereof cast for Wilson for governor at the last general election in November 1890.

Wright county—36
Sherburne county—5.

Dated at Waverly on the 31st day of Agust 1892.

WILLIAM QUINN, Chairman Legislative Committee.

COL. JOHN SOBIESKI, the prohibition candidate for governor of Missouri, is said to be a lineal descendant of King John Sobeski, of Poland. He was a union soldier.—Minneapolis Times.

SOME of our Republican papers are, almost every day, citing the people to vast wealth owned by eastern men. They tell us of $200. $500. and so on bank accounts owned by the mechanics that belong in eastern states, and claim that the laboring men in the east are far better off in this country than they are in England. If this be so, would it not be wise to look to our own interests, just a little? Has not nearly every farmer in this country got a bank account? And does he not have to sell his wheat for whatever he can get to pay interest on $200 or $300 every year?

OUR neighbors in Hennepin county have the opportunity to send to Congress a first-class man who was nominated on Tuesday by the Democratic convention, held in Minneapolis. He is highly spoken of as a lawyer and a gentleman J. W. Lawrence was born in New York state, in 1846. He has always been a Democrat and was chairman of the state central committee at one time. One recommend, and not the least, is that he was the law partner from 1870 to the time of his death of the late lamented Eugine Wilson.

Free Trade in Money.

WASHINGTON. Aug. 10.—Special Agent Hanlon, at Chicago, has reported to the treasury department that an Italian bank in Chicago is importing through the mails large quantities of Italian paper money for sale to Italians to send to friends in Italy, and he asked whether such importations are subject to duty. Assistant Secretary Crounse has replied to him that the money in question is not subject to duty under previous decisions allowing free entry to English internal revenue stamps and Mexican subsidy certificates on the ground that they are not goods, wares or merchandise within the meaning of the tariff laws.—St. Paul Globe.

Importing Manufacturers.

The New York Press quoting from an article from Mr. Kepple, a tin plate protectionist says: "I see the day coming when Welsh factories will be dotting the land almost as closely as our own. It is an inevitable law of business to which all must succumb." Now if these people who work in foreign lands are half so ignorannt and degraded and poverty-stricken as protectionists say they are and, by protective tariffs we drive them all out of their native lands and bring them to our own against their wills, and they only add to the already striking men in this country, the regular army will have to be enlarged, and this will of course turnish more offices for politician's friends to fill. Factories used to be considered benefits to the communities in which they were located, at least financial benefits, but now as they appear to the average western man after reading newspaper accounts he had sooner take his chances among the cow-boys of the plains or the wiley Sioux, than to live where Pinkerton's and malitia bullets, and laboring men's clubs and such things are so terribly mixed up. If an over production in one thing produces discord, why will it not in another, and when all the tin factories are planted where our potatoes and corn and other crops are now, where are we going to get our eatables from? And where are we going to use our tin? Or where will we find a market for it unless every soldier is supplied with tin accountements, who is obliged to guard the works? Take off the protective tariff and allow the factories to come here only when it is to their natural advantage to do so, and not buy, bribe or compel them to come by our high protective tariff and then after they have been made to come find that their being too many of them they can do no better here than where they are now. Think over this matter for yourselves and see how you figure it out!

Yes, Tariff is a Tax.

The Eagle in last week's issue tries her hand at the tariff question. She goes at it rather awkwardly to be sure, but then it is one of the issues, in fact the main issue, and something must be done to save the Republican party, and, when many of their best thinking men are thoroughly convinced that there can be no use in keeping up the old war tariffs and even making them higher, and their ranks are being decimated until several of the Northwestern, states and among them our own, have come to be acknowledged, even by their leaders, to be debatable grounds, the old bird with an eye to business, thinking to assist in stemming the tide, dares, timidly, to enter the contest by heading an article "Is Tariff a Tax?" That is a pretty question for her to be asking now! Hasn't she read the GAZETTE? And didn't she say a few weeks ago that she "must submit to the inevitable?" And to come out now with a question like that! Didn't C. K. Davis tell the world it was a tax. Hasn't McKinely been running all over the country and isn't he booked for speeches in Minnesota to try to make people believe that they do not pay the tariff but that the foreigners pay it! Not denying that tariff is a tax, but insisting we do not pay it. The Eagle editor, or editors had not read the great speech of Gen. Sheridan, of the U. S., who opened the campaign in Minneapolis last Friday evening. If he had he would not surely have been so foolish as to give his article a caption like that. "Is Tariff a Tax?" Here is an extract from Gen. Sheridan's speech, taken from the Minneapolis Evening Tribune of Saturday, so the Republicans cannot dispute its being the genuine speech.

"The General then took up the old cry of the Democrats that the tariff is a tax, and asked:

"What of it? Is there any man, woman or child in America who has an idea that a government of 65,000,000 can be run upon a basis of Democratic wind, instead of some kind of a taxation. All governments must be supported, and they must be supported by a taxation of one kind or another. Last year we raised $392,000,000. Of this amount we raised nearly $220,000,000 through the custom houses."

The General evidently either had not read the last Eagle or did not take anymore stock in it, as an educator, than do some people nearer home, or he would not have gone and given the thing away after that fashion, "Is Tariff a Tax?" What a way to put it to an intelligent community. To people who read, and who think. Of course it is a tax, and when they have sought for so long to make people believe it was not a tax we think they will now, that they have been found out, have a much harder time to make people believe they do not pay it themselves. Its no use fooling any longer on this matter you had as well do as you said "submit to the inevitable" and submit gracefully. As for the Eagle editor's first pair of little red topped boots costing so much more forty years ago than they would now, we would like to know how he expects the people to think that the tariff had anything to do with that. Has he not read the tariff bill of McKinley? Does he not know that hides are on the free list? And that there is no tariff on labor? It looks as if the gentleman might have been the traditional little chap who tried to raise himself up by pulling on his boot straps and had not entirely abondoned the idea yet.

Yes, Eagle, tariff is a tax, and old Wright county will, doubtless in November put herself on record as knowing it to be so, and knowing the protective part of it to be wrong in principle and as doing a grevious wr ong to the agriculturist.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Aug. 26, 1892.

Secretary Charles Foster brought the most variegated assortment of political rainbows with him when he returned from Ohio that has yet been exposed to the gaze of the public. According to him the national election is already settled and all the money that will be spent between this and the 8th of next November will simply be thrown away. His modesty in making claims is something quite as wonderful as his manipulation of the figures which show, or are supposed to show the amount of cash surplus in the United States Treasury; he is positive that every (using the word to represent all except the southern States) State will be carried by Harrison and Reid and at least six ot the Southern States. It is uot clear why he does not claim all of the electoral votes.

There are reasons for the belief that the administration is doing all it can to have the date for the meeting of the international monetary conference set so late in the fall as to make it certain that the result of the conference cannot be known before the presidential election, in order that republican stump speakers and editors may have an opportunity to influence votes by pretending to forecast that result. Mr. Harrison and his puppets who are managing this campaign will have a much more exhaulted opinion of the intelligence of the American voters on the morning of the 9th, of next November, than they appear to have at the present time.

According to an official opinion of the Attorney General, which suspicion points to having been dictated from Loon Lake, made public this week, the good people of Vicksburg, Mississippi, must continue to have their city post office presided over by the notorious negro adventurer whose nomination the republican Senate declined to confirm. The attorney General holds, or at least pretends to, that a failure to confirm the nomination of a postmaster who is in posession of a postoffice before the assembling of the session of Congress which fails to act on the nomination leaves him the leagle postmaster until his successor is nominated. If that be good law the postoffice department from the foundation of the government has been in similiar cases acting illegally.

Senator Morgan of Alabama, is in town. He is a strong advocate of retaliation cn Canada, and thinks that Mr. Harrison's proclamation should have prohibited the shipment of Canadian goods through the United States.

The Revenue Marine Hospital bureau is taking active measures to prevent the introduction of cholera into our ports by any of the steamship lines running from Hamburg or Havre where the disease is reported to be rapidly spreading. All steamships arriving from those and other foreign ports are to be rigidly inspected and if any traces of the dreaded disease are found they will be quarantined and thoroughly disinfected before being allowed to land their passengers.

The republicans here are doing lots of talking about breaking the "solid south" this year, but when a democrat made the rounds offering to wager any part of $5,000 at odds of two to one that Harrison and Reid would not get a single southern State's electorial votes no takers could be found. It is the belief of many shrewd observers that prominent republicans are doing so much talking about their expecting to carry Southern States with the hope of causing the democratic managers to lessen their efforts towards carrying the Northwestern States.

Hennepin Politics.

INDEPENDENCE, Aug. 30.

MR. EDITOR:— The Democratic county convention of Hennepin county which took place on Thursday of last week, was one of harmony and good feeling throughout. There was a good ticket put in the field and one that we expect will win in next November. Among those in the convention were two or three prominent colored men, the decendents of the modern Egyptians. One of them being called upon for a speech responded in words of warmpth, feeling and eloquence, for the success of the Democratic party.

He declared that many of his race had renounced their allegiance and fealty to the old Republican party and would swing into line with the Democrats in November next. And also others are coming over to Jefferson and Jackson Democracy, light has no fellowship with darkness. They have become tired of worshiping Aaron and the Golden Calf. Many of the best men of our country are advocating reform measures, and they must come about ere long if we expect to be a prosperous and happy nation. Hon. B. F. Christlieb, of Long Lake, has been re-nominated by the Democrats of Hennepin county again, to represent the 34th legislative district.

We hope on the 8th of November next, Mr. Christlieb will receive a rousing majority of votes, for he is a man well worthy of the calling and we would ask that you give him your hearty support. No one ever went to Mr. Christlieb who did not find him open handed.

INDEPENDENCE.

Settlers coming to Independence in 1858: Samuel Moore, Timothy O'Leary, C. R. Carleton.

The school district at Armstrong was first organized in 1858, and within its log house erected there, educational, political and township affairs were discussed during the early days of the township, and likewise religious services were held there. On all these topics Daniel S. Styner, Irwin Shrewsbury, Orrin B. Crooker, Wm. Cox, the Hoisington brothers, John R. and Ennis McGary, Ebenzer Brandon, John Williams, Norman Stark, Jacob Rader, and others took an active interest. In 1859 Irvin Shrewsbury was elected a member of the legislature on the Republican ticket.

Settlers of 1860: James Bradford and George Bradford, brothers, with their families, of which the several parties of that name about Maple Plain were members, and during the same year Abel Coffin and family of which Robert and Frank S. Coffin, Mrs. Merriman and Mrs. Robert Barto were members. Wm. Pagenkopf and family came in 1861.

During the spring of 1864, the death of Edson Crooker, son of O. B. Crooker, occured. His death was much lamented not only by his relatives, but by his circle of acquaintances, especially by his youthful associates. He was a young man not only of a friendly disposition, but of much promise.

Gustave Johnson and family came in 1862, S. W. Yokely and E. Lighter and families came in 1864.

Charles W. Ingerson and family, Fletcher Ingerson, John Wasson, father of John E. Wasson, and other members of the family, among whom were William and Calvin Wasson, Robert M. Mills. H. C. and Wm Budd came in 1865.

MEDINA.

First religious services in Medina were held at the house of Philip Klein, in 1856, by Rev. Keller, Catholic, of St. Paul, following which for several years Catholic religious services were held occasionally at the house of John Beck (now Peter Becker's) at which Rev. Magness Mayr and other Clergymen from St. Paul and St. Michaels officiated.

Settlers of 1858: Jean Breyer, Frank Ahrens, Casper Friess. Of 1859 Michael Wilzius, of 1860: Joseph Butz, John P. Meurer and parents and rest of family; Benjaman Maxon, Arthur Bently and family, Peter Schurmeyer and family and Joseph Lerch. Of 1861: Chas. Barkow, Louis Winterhalter. Of 1863: Christian Weier and family. Of 1865: Alden P. Bill and family.

About 1859-60 Lenz post office was established on the Minneapolis, Rockford and Greenwood mail route with Lenard Lenzen as post master, the post office being named for him. Its location was on the site of the present village of Hamel, and the name of the post office during recent years, has been changed to Hamel.

CORRESPONDENCE

WAVERLY WISDOM.

Mr. Wm. Quinn made a business trip to St. Paul Monday.

A Cleveland and Lawler club was organized here last Friday evening. John Kelly was chosen president, Wallace King, vice-persident; C. H. Cullen, secretary and John Giblin, Jr., treasurer. The club starts out with 60 members and it is expected that at the neat meeting, which will be Saturday night, there will be over 100 members in the club.

The parochial school re-opens for the fall term Monday. The public school will re-open about the middle of the month.

Mr. Erickson, who last winter assisted our merchant tailor, was in town Monday. Mr. Erickson is farming at Maple Plain.

Attorney O'Hair, of Delano, and Culkin of Buffalo, were here again Monday engaged in the Lydon-Nee law suit.

Mr. Peter Meisenburg is enjoying a vacation for a week among his Litchfield relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. John O'Leary, of Buffalo, spent Sunday in our village.

Attorney J. M. Casey has recently added $100 worth of books to his law library.

The Lydon-Nee law suit came up again for trial Monday, both sides were presented in an able manner by the attorneys engaged, and there was qvite a speculation as to which side would win. After the arguments the judge took three days to give his decision. It is learned at this writing that Mr. Nee won the suit.

The dance Tuesday night was a decided success.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Quinn leave Saturday for Washington D. C. They will be in the capital city about a week.

The congregating of young men at the depot every evening at train time and before it is becoming monotonous and should be looked after by the proper authorities as it is a difficult matter for anyone to go there on busines after dark without being insulted.

Mr. John Casey has rented his farm in Woodland for the coming year to Wm. O'Connell. Mr. Casey has rented a house in town and will remain here for the winter.

The next meeting of the Democratic club will be held Saturday evening. Let there be a large turn out.

Mr. T. F. Kelly was in Minneapolis Monday buying his fall and winter supply of stoves.

The Republicans of Marysville, will caucus in this village Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Burke, of Watertown, were entertained by friends here Sunday.

Prof. Frank Kolar is becoming an expert on his musical compound and plays several pieces in an off hand manner. He expects to bring his machine to the county fair and exhibit the skill and enterprise of a Waverly citizen.

It is expected that at the meeting of the Democratic club Saturday evening it will be decided to attend the county convention at Delano in a body.

It is said:—

That there are several marriages to take place this month.

That John Kelly would make a good legislator, and that he will be backed for the nomination by the solid delegations of Marysville and Woodland.

That Waverly will get the next Democratic convention.

That Chairman Quinn is all over smiles and predicts the election of the National and State Democratic ticket.

That the Democrats of the county were never so solidly united as they are this fall and feel confident that the entire county ticket can be elected.

That Dr. Catlin would make a good legislator and can have the nomination if he wants it.

That if the Populists are really in earnest and wish to purify our government they can best accomplish their purpose by voting for the Democratic nominees.

THE fact is known to everyone who keeps a dry goods shop that bottom prices bring a man most quickly to the top.

THE double-back-action postal card will soon be in the people's hands. It provides facilities for a reply and may be remailed.

SUCCI, the faster, is insane, and now in an asylum near Paris. His delusion has taken the form of a belief that he is Cæsar and Napoleon in one.

A MAN in New York committed suicide because his baby was a girl. He had set his heart on a boy. He did a foolish thing. That daughter may live to be the president of the United States.

MR. BONNER is not content to allow Nancy Hanks to have the world's record for speed without another trial of Sunol. He expects to have Sunol make a trial at breaking the record during the fall.

MISS LOTTIE YOUNG, of North Hanover, Mass., rests her claim to fame upon the fact that she drove twenty-three nails in three minutes, and at the finish had two hands safe and sound to her credit.

EMPEROR WILLIAM still maintains his determination to come to our world's fair. That's right, let him and all the other kings come and see how well the people of America have been able to get along without them.

MRS. CORA E. THOMAS, of Hanover, Pa., is thirty years of age, thirty-five inches in height, thirty-six inches around the waist, and weighs but thirty-nine pounds. In all her actions and habits she is still a child.

THE writer of a letter from San Sabe, state of Sonora, Mexico, says that in the recent hurricane there fell in that region a shower of fishes three inches long and a number of small pelicans, but no rain, while at Mazatlan the ground was covered with dead winged ants.

IT is a colored girl in Richmond this time who was burned to death by stepping on a parlor match. Any man who will invent a nonodorous match which will not explode can retire from business on an independent fortune a few years after he puts his product on the market.

RUSSIA still has many odd and curious marriage customs. One is for the bride and bridegroom to race madly down the aisle as soon as the bridal procession enters the church, because of the belief that whoever places a foot first on the cloth in front of the altar will be master in the household.

GEN. A. W. GREELY, the head of the United States signal corps (though not of the weather bureau, as many people still suppose), ridicules the idea of signaling the people of Mars. He regards it an unreasonable assumption to think that planet inhabited by a race at all like human beings in intelligence and civilization.

SOME one has figured out that if twelve persons were to agree to dine together every day, but never sit exactly in the same order around the table, it would take them 13,000,000 years at the rate of one dinner a day, and they would have to eat more than 470,000,000 dinners before they could get through all the possible arrangements in which they could place themselves.

THE Benedictine order in America has a new Arch-abbott, in the person of Rev. Leander Schuerr, elected recently, upon the resignation and retirement of Rev. Andrew Hintenach. The new dignitary will rule the abbey of St. Vincent, in Pennsylvania. Although little is heard of the Benedictines, they rank after the Jesuits in point of numbers, counting 400 fathers in the American province. They are almost all Germans, and German is their official language.

THE secretary of state has requested the navy department to send a naval vessel to Liberia some time during October. The request has no significance beyond the observance of the usual custom of this government of sending an American ship to Liberia twice a year for the purpose of establishing a precedent for other nations and as a mark of recognition by the United States of the Liberia government. The request will be complied with and some vessel near that country will be ordered to fulfill this courtesy.

THE flash-light for signals on Mount Washington is a success. Signals have been read distinctly at Portland, a distance by air line of 85 miles, and the messages were proved by telegraphic communication. The needle-like beams were not flashed directly to Portland, but into the air above that city to avoid low-lying clouds. The Portland operator estimates that the light which he read easily was 80 miles above him, and that the length of the flash from Mount Washington to the point where he read it was 110 miles. The success of the experiment is expected to revolutionize the system of signaling.

E. D. BOURNE, of Palm Springs, Cal., says: "So far as I know—and I have posted myself thoroughly upon the subject for twenty years, on the desert and in Arizona and Texas—there is no known cure for rattlesnake poison, in spite of the fact that many people have said that they were cured by whisky. You may depend on it that when a man says he was cured of a rattlesnake bite he is at least laboring under a misapprehension of the facts. He was probably bitten by a small snake similar to the rattlesnake in appearance, whose poison is not so venomous."

A PIECE of masonry larger than any in the world except the great pyramid of Egypt will soon be constructed in the Croton valley, New York. It will be a dam for producing an artificial lake, which is to supply New York with water. The lake formed by this dam will contain 30,000,000,000 gallons of water. The dam will be 185 feet thick at the bottom, diminishing to a width of 20 feet at the top, and will be 238 feet high. It will be built of stone laid in hydraulic cement mortar of the best quality. The masonry will be practically one immense rock which nothing but an earthquake can disturb.

OLD COMRADES TO MEET.

Preparations for the G. A. R. Encampment at the National Capital.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—The committee on reunions for the twenty-sixth national encampment of the G. A. R. has decided to group all the reunions together on the mall known as the white lot south of the white house. Around the ellipse will be stationed headquarter tents for each corps, for the navy, ex-prisoners of war and other organizations. In the rear of these tents will be others for each brigade in the corps. There will be large tents for the reunions of corps. The ground will be dedicated under the name of Grand Army place on Monday, September 19.

The proposed gathering in this city of the surviving "war governors" was a happy thought, and it now appears that this part of the grand army encampment will be a feature that will be memorable. There are more war time governors than the public imagines. A list consisting of the following old governors has been prepared, and each one of them will be telegraphed and urged to attend this encampment.

William M. Stone, of Iowa; Samuel J. Kirkwood, of Iowa; Austin Blair, of Michigan; Andrew G. Curtin, of Pennsylvania; Richard J. Oglesby, of Illinois; Joseph T. Lewis, of Wisconsin; Thomas C. Fletcher, of Missouri; William Sprague, of Rhode Island; Samuel J. Crawford, of Kansas; Leland Stanford, of California; N. S. Berry, of New Hampshire; Frederick T. Low, of Colorado, and Arthur J. Boreman, of West Virginia.

An effort will be made to give these gentlemen a position in the parade in carriages, but if that is not possible, they will be assigned to prominent quarters on the reunion grounds, where they will hold a reception and meet the thousands of old soldiers and other citizens, who are anxious to do honor to the governors who did so much toward assisting the federal government to suppress the rebellion.

An order has been issued at the war department inviting officers of the army of this city to be present in uniform Monday, September 19, in the president's park reservation to assist in the dedication of the reunion place of the ex-soldiers and sailors of the war of the rebellion which will take place during the coming encampment.

The president of the United states, the vice president, the supreme court, cabinet officers, committees representing the senate and house of representatives, the major general commanding the army, the rear admiral of the navy, will be present, with the commander in chief of the grand army.

There will be a grand parade prior to the ceremonies. The regular soldiers and sailors stationed in the vicinity of Washington, the district militia and the department of the Potomac and Sons of Veterans will appear in line. The following assignments for reunions have been made by the committee on reunions for the army corps composing the Army of the Tennessee: Thirteenth army corps, Thursday, 2:30 p. m., in Mead tent: Fifteenth army corps, Thursday, 2:30 p. m., in Sherman tent; Sixteenth army corps, Tuesday, 7:30 p. m., in Thomas tent; Seventeenth army corps, Wednesday, 2:30 p. m., in Sherman tent, and for the reunion of the Army of the Tennessee in the Grant tent on Thursday at 8 p. m. This tent will have a capacity of 4,000 persons, and if the day is fair the sides will be raised so that as many can attend the meeting as can come within the hearing of the speakers.

The battalion prize of $500 was awarded to the First Indiana, Col. M. F. Heiskell, commander, who was given the $50 sword for the best commander.

The colonel's cup, offered for the best regiment in line during the grand parade, was awarded to the Second Kansas regiment, Col. S. O. McDowell in command.

The prize of $400 offered for the full division traveling the longest distance to the encampment was awarded to Abbott division, No. 12, of Fall River, Mass.

The $50 jewel offered for the oldest sir knight who participated in the parade review and competitive drill was awarded to Sir Knight T. J. McGinnis, of Indiana division, No. 2, of Indianapolis, a hale and hearty old gentleman of 55.

BIG FIRE IN GEORGIA.

Several Business Houses and the Office of the Chronicle Burned.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Aug. 29.—A destructive fire broke out here at 2:30 o'clock Saturday morning. The Alexander Drug and Seed Company, Fleming & Bowles' furniture warehouse, E. D. Smythe's crockery store, Harry Hall's photograph gallery, J. R. Lamar's law office, the store of Thomas & Barton, wholesale music and sewing machines, the residence of Leroy Miller, and the Chronicle office were totally destroyed. Augusta Dorr's clothing house was slightly damaged. The loss is estimated at $400,000.

The Socialist Labor Party Puts Up a National Ticket.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The socialist labor party held its national convention at the New York labor lyceum Sunday. Delegates from New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Connecticut were present. David Taylor, of Boston, presided, and Henry Glynn, of New York, was elected president. It was unanimously resolved to nominate a presidential ticket, and the following candidates were put up: President, Samuel Wing, of Boston; vice president, Charles H. Matchett, of Brooklyn. Mr. Wing is a tailor and Mr. Matchett a carpenter.

ALARM IN NEW YORK.

A Cholera Suspect Under Treatment at Bellevue Hospital—A Recent Arrival from Hamburg Attacked with Symptoms of the Scourge—Immigration the Source of the Greatest Danger.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Anton Potzel, an Austalian who arrived here from Hamburg, Germany, two weeks ago, was taken to Bellevue hospital Sunday afternoon suffering from an ailment, some of the symptoms of which resemble those of Asiatic cholera. The fact that he had come from a cholera-stricken city caused some alarm. The hospital physicians were unable to determine whether he had genuine cholera or not—they thought he was suffering from a severe attack of cholera morbus—but to be on the safe side they isolated Potzel in the tent on the river front which was used for typhus patients. He will be kept there until the nature of his affliction is accurately known.

Two thousand two hundred immigrants who reached New York Saturday were landed on Ellis island Sunday. There were 485 from the French liner La Touraine, 554 from the Gellert from Hamburg, 635 from the Augusta Victoria and 506 from the Russian. The Ellis island physician said the immigrants were a remarkably clean and healthy lot. The opinion was expressed by one of the old standing doctors that cholera would reach New York soon. He said the immigrants coming to this country now were of a character to bring the scourge, as they represented the very poorest of the European peasantry. The doctor was sure the cholera would not get into the city.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 29.—The proposition of the Illinois state board of health to suspend immigration temporarily from all cholera-infected countries in order to protect the life, health and the commercial and industrial welfare of the country has met with general favor. Twenty-three boards have wired the Illinois state board indorsing the proposition. It has pointed out that Asiatic cholera is an exotic and must be imported in order to afflict this country. From its first introduction in 1832 history shows that its importation has never been effected save through the persons and personal effects of immigrants. It is the consensus of belief among sanitarians and health officials that to suspend immigration now would be to insure immunity from a cholera epidemic.

HAMBURG, Aug. 29.—The official returns show that on Friday there were reported in this city 416 new cases of cholera and 150 deaths. Up to noon Saturday 128 new cases and 55 deaths were reported, but the returns are not complete. Prayers were offered in all the churches Sunday for a cessation of the scourge. Whole households have been sent to the cholera hospital. Relief committees have been formed and appeals for subscriptions issued throughout the city.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 29.—Twenty-eight cases of cholera have occurred in a charitable asylum here, the outbreak being due to bad food. Cholera continues to spread in several towns in central Russia and Lublin, though the mortality is not alarming. The official returns show that throughout Russia Thursday there were reported 5,757 new cases of cholera and 2,869 deaths. In St. Petersburg Saturday seventy-five new cases and thirty-seven deaths were reported.

PARIS, Aug. 29.—A number of new cases of cholerine have been reported in this city. Three deaths from the disease occurred Sunday. Three persons died of cholerine in Le Mans Sunday.

A PLAY HOUSE BURNED.

Flames Almost Totally Destroy the Metropolitan Opera House in New York.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The auditorium of the Metropolitan opera house, which has rung with the notes of Patti and Lyman and Campanini, where great balls and banquets and receptions have been held, was destroyed by fire Saturday morning. The fire broke out after 9 o'clock. It had its origin on the fourth floor, directly over the stage, where the frame said to be the largest in the world, upon which the scenery is painted, is fixed. Just how the fire started is not known positively. The opera house occupies the plot of ground 200 by 250 feet, bounded by Broadway, Fortieth street, Seventh avenue and Thirty-eighth street. The stage is on the Seventh avenue side. It was noon before the fire was considered under complete control. The flames swept through the great auditorium, and in a few minutes little was left of it except the iron work. The fire caught the richly adorned circle of boxes, and they were at once a flaming furnace. The fire from the floor came up to meet the circle of boxes, and the continued flames then swept onward to the roof and through it. The roof was rapidly consumed, the great beams falling inward. The iron work of the seats in the auditorium soon gave way and the whole mass tumbled into the cellar. The flames raged for an hour or so in the building, and when they had somewhat abated it was found they had done a vast amount of damage. The whole interior was gutted. On the Seventh avenue side the wall is standing unsupported five stories high, and appears solid. The inner wall on the Thirty-ninth street side fell. The loss is variously estimated at from $500,000 to $1,000,000.

SWEPT OVERBOARD.

Vessels Collide in San Francisco Bay—Three Men Drowned.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 29.—Three men were drowned in the bay Sunday afternoon as the result of a collision between an incoming ship and an outbound schooner. The drowned: Charles Trainor, captain; unknown, white sailor; unknown, negro cook. The ship Alameda was being towed in after a passage of 233 days from Philadelphia. The wind was light, and the coasting schooner Maid of Orleans drifted into the course of the larger vessel. The schooner was badly damaged.

Must Leave Labor Unions.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Aug. 29.—There is considerable excitement among railroad employes here over the order of President McLeod, issued by him to the effect that all employes of the Lehigh Valley & Central railroad of New Jersey must sever connections with all labor unions. There is considerable talk of striking.

Four Persons Drowned at Ostend.

OSTEND, Aug. 29. — The British steamer Godwit collided with and sunk the fishing boat Jeune Henri off this port. Four persons were drowned in consequence of the accident.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

HOME AGAIN.

A Boy Supposed to Have Been Murdered Turns Up Unexpectedly.

Marvin Northrup, a boy 14 years of age, who mysteriously disappeared about a year ago from Winona, turned up in La Crosse, Wis. It had been supposed that he had been murdered by his father, whose strange actions had aroused suspicion, but repeated endeavors had failed to bring any light upon the question. The boy is perfectly well but is looking tough. He has been working for some months in Savannah, Ill., and is now at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. A. W. Carpenter, in La Crosse, where he will probably stay. When asked why he ran away from home he said it was because his father abused him.

A Novel Suit.

A rather novel suit has just terminated in the court at Winona. Three years ago John Sikorski arrived there from the old country and obtained work. Shortly afterward he sent $50 back home to pay the fare to Winona of his sweetheart, who promised to marry him upon arriving. Shortly after her arrival the girl became engaged to and married a man named Meyer, and Sikorski sued to recover his $50. The court found in his favor, assessing costs and interest upon the defendant. The whole amount is $76.

Hold Over Two Years.

A decision which is certain to cut considerable of a figure in the senatorial election next fall has been rendered by Attorney General Clapp. That official holds that there will be no election this fall for the reason that, under legislative enactment, all members of the senate hold over, making their terms four instead of two years. The senate consists of twenty-six republicans, three of whom are classed as independent republicans, thirteen alliance and fifteen democratic members.

Prison-Made Twine.

Warden Wolfer, of the penitentiary, during his recent visit in Crookston to dispose of the binding twine made by the inmates of the prison, met with very good success. The farmers in the vicinity of Crookston will use over 80,000 pounds of the twine this season. Those who have seen it claim that it is as good, if not superior to that they can obtain from the local dealers, and it is cheaper.

Fire in St. Paul.

The ruins of the Wagner block in St. Paul, which was destroyed by a landslide and fire, were still smoldering when a fire in the other Wagner block on the south side of the street broke out, and before it was extinguished a loss of $100,000 was incurred. An investigation by the police showed that the blaze was incendiary.

The News Briefly Stated.

Harris A. George, a brakeman on the Soo line, was killed at Heafford Junction, Wis. He fell from the engine pilot, both legs being amputated. He leaves a wife and child in Minneapolis.

Two shanties of squatters in "Swede Hollow," St. Paul, were demolished by a cave-in. Patrick Whalen, aged 2 years, was killed and two little girls were badly injured.

The Lutheran synod will establish a college at Fosston if the village will raise $10,000 toward the enterprise. The college will have 150 pupils.

Orrin Farrar, sexton of the Methodist church at Lewiston, was set upon on coming out of church and so severely beaten by Purdie and Archie Albert that he was unable to leave his bed.

The H. J. O'Neil Grain Company, of Winona, has purchased the twelve elevators along the line of the Winona & Southwestern road owned by Strong & Miller, the grain dealers of Minneapolis.

Andrew Anderson, employed at the Minnesota house in Alexandria as hostler, met with a terrible death. He was found in the barn under the feet of a span of horses.

E. Kout will open a new brickyard at Faribault.

The Crookston Water Works, Power & Light Company have begun the erection of a new plant a short distance from their old one.

Elias Steenerson lost six head of horses, twenty tons of hay and all of his farm machinery by fire at his farm, near Vineland.

At Manannah, near Litchfield, Mr. Lamb has a flowing well of splendid water 120 feet deep, the pipe being 4 feet above the ground.

Two serious runaways occurred at Faribault. One was a horse belonging to J. W. Richardson, which threw the occupants out of the buggy and injured Richardson's wife seriously. The other was that of W. E. Jones, who was also severely hurt.

The Mesala Central Land and Exploration Company of Duluth has declared a dividend of 36 per cent.

The Bessemer Iron Development and Mining Company has been incorporated at Duluth, with a capital of $100,000.

Peter Nachtsheim, of St. Paul, who was lost in Chicago in May, 1891, was found in the Cook county insane asylum.

Harry Hines, a baggage-wagon driver at Duluth, was thrown from his seat by the wagon striking an obstruction and fatally injured.

John Theodore, an old resident and a retired merchant of Wabasha, committed suicide by hanging himself from a rafter in the hay loft.

Prof. Thomas Casey has been chosen principal of the Red Lake Falls public schools.

Walter Mann, one of St. Paul's best known citizens, died at his residence. He had been prominently identified with banking interests in St. Paul, but was connected with the New York Life Insurance Company.

Princeton is in considerable excitement over a wife-beating. William Sauge, a German, got into an altercation with his wife, which resulted in his nearly beating her to death. She is confined to bed, but the attending physician says she may possibly recover.

The handsome residence of John F. Eisenmenger at St. Paul was entirely destroyed by fire. The loss was over $50,000; insurance on house and furniture, $37,500.

The state has decided to furnish its national guard with 1,200 overcoats and the contract for their manufacture has been awarded to the Kuhl-Cumming Company of St. Paul.

Patrick Mulligan, who stabbed William O'Donnell in a fight at Northfield the other day, was arrested and after an examination was bound over in the sum of $1,000. It is thought O'Donnell will recover.

A Curious Stone.

One of the most curious stones in the world is found in Finland, where it occurs in many places. It is a natural barometer, and actually foretells probable changes in the weather. It is called semakuir, and turns black shortly before an approaching rain, while in fine weather it is mottled with spots of white. For a long time this curious phenomenon was a mystery, but an analysis of the stone show it to be a fossil mixed with clay and containing a portion of rock salt and niter. This fact being known, the explanation was easy. The salt, absorbing the moisture, turned black when the conditions were favorable for rain, while the dryness of the atmosphere brought out the salt from the interior of the stone in white spots on the surface.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Medicine for the Hair.

To brush and brush and still to brush is the best medicine for the hair, remembering always that it is the hair and not the scalp which is to receive this treatment. Upon the brush used depends a great deal. In the first place it must be immaculately clean, and one's brushes should be washed as religiously as is one's face. The comb should be coarse, so that it will disentangle the hair if it is snarled, but if the hair is well brushed the comb really is of very little use. A fine comb is never advised. The brush should have long, soft bristles that go through the hair, taking with them every particle of dust and leaving behind them a glow that is beautiful.—Ladies' Home Journal.

JUST FULL of improvements—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. To begin with, they're the smallest, and the easiest to take. They're tiny, sugar-coated anti-bilious granules, scarcely larger than mustard seeds. Every child is ready for them.

Then, after they're taken, instead of disturbing and shocking the system, they act in a mild, easy, and natural way. There's no chance for any reaction afterward. Their help lasts. Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, Sick or Bilious Headaches and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels are promptly relieved and permanently cured.

They're put up in glass vials, which keeps them always fresh and reliable, unlike the ordinary pills in wooden or pasteboard boxes.

And they're the cheapest pills you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get.

AN INNOCENT PRISONER.

How the Widow Peeler Lodged the Banks' Boarder.

"THREE young ladies," exclaimed Mr. Wimple, dropping his book of fishing-flies in dismay. "And all coming here? Dear me, what are you going to do with them?"

"That's just what we were considering," said Miss Araminta Banks, with engaging sweetness. "If you wouldn't mind going down to the widow Peeler's just for a night or two, Mr. Wimple, and let the young ladies have your room—only as a temporary matter, of course—it would be such an accommodation."

Mr. Origen Wimple was probably the most bashful young man at Spruce mountain. He was just nineteen, with a pasty complexion, very light-blue eyes and a scanty growth of lemon-colored down beginning to ornament his chin and upper lip. He liked seclusion and courted the solitude of wood and glen, believing himself to be a poet, although he never yet had been able to string two consecutive rhymes together, and he had come to board at Mr. Banks' farmhouse, on Spruce mountain, because there was no one else there and no possibility of anyone else being admitted, as he himself accepted the only spare chamber, under the eaves of the roof, whose windows looked out on the balsamic growth of the mountain side, and beneath which a little river roared and gurgled and beat itself into a spray of white foam against the edges of the rocks.

So that, toward the mid-prime of the golden July, when three of Miss Araminta's schoolmates wrote her a musk-scented pink note that they would arrive by mountain stage that very evening, to spend a week, there was a natural commotion at the farmhouse. For the Banks family, be it remembered, did not live on a city avenue, where one can send out and buy a folding-bedstead or a convenient cot at a moment's notice.

"What shall we do?" said Mrs. Banks. "Why couldn't they have let us know in time, so that we could have asked them to postpone their visit a few weeks?"

"Ma, that would be very inhospitable," said Miss Araminta, with the air of superiority natural to one who has been educated in boarding-school. "I'll tell you what we'll do. We'll ask Mr. Wimple to sleep a few nights down at the widow Peeler's. She has got a spare bedroom, and I'm sure he'll make no objection. He's so good-natured!"

"It seems like an imposition," said Mrs. Banks.

"Oh, he won't mind," said Araminta.

The young lady was right. Mr. Wimple was only too glad to escape, at all and any hazards, from the awful invasion of three girls from the city. He did not mind Miss Araminta, for he was used to her ways, and knew that she was safely engaged to the young man who kept the general store at Spruce Mountain Corners, five miles below. And Mrs. Banks was a fat, motherly woman, who made catnip tea for his colds and got up special little dishes for his delectation, whenever he showed any signs of a failing appetite. But three young women from the outer world—three young women who would perhaps make eyes at him, ask him gushing questions, quote poetry, and demand his opinion concerning Kensington stitch and art needle-work—this vague possibility made Mr. Origen Wimple's blood run cold.

"Is the widow Peeler a young woman?" Mr. Wimple falteringly asked.

"Oh, bless your heart, no!" said Miss Araminta, fathoming his motives. "She's five-and-sixty, and a little hard of hearing into the bargain. But I'm sure she'll make you very comfortable, and it will be such a favor to us."

And so, with the fall of dewy eve, Mr. Wimple packed a very small handbag, and, armed with many instructions as to the finding of his way from Mr. and Mrs. Banks, set forth to the residence of the widow Peeler, which residence was said to be on a cross-road half a mile from every possible point of the compass. It rained a little, and the soft wreaths of fragrant mist were rising off the mountain-side; but Mr. Wimple, being in one of his poetic moods, heeded not these insignificant drawbacks and plodded bravely on.

The three Misses Merivale arrived, as they had given notice, by the evening stage, and they were sorely disappointed when they learned that the boarder had taken wings; for, in truth and in fact, one reason of the Misses Merivale's desire to visit their dear friend and schoolmate, Araminta Banks, was that they had heard that a city young gentleman was domiciled there for the season.

"Dear me!" said Maud Merivale. "What a pity to disturb your boarder!"

"I declare," simpered Ermengarde, the second sister, "I feel quite conscience-stricken!"

"Couldn't you have put us in any corner, so as not to turn him out?" pleaded Daisy, the youngest, a dimpled hoyden of twenty-odd summers.

"At all events," proposed Maud, "we certainly ought to go down, en masse and apologize to him. What do you say, girls?"

"Oh, I don't think he'd like it," said Miss Araminta. "He's so dreadfully bashful!"

"Nonsense!" gayly cried Ermengarde. "He won't mind us."

And Araminta Banks, finding herself in a decided minority, had nothing for it but to obey the voice of popular female opinion.

"I hope he'll go out fishing," she said to herself, with some natural vindictiveness. "It's the boldest piece of husband-hunting I ever saw! Those Merivale girls really do show their cards a little too plainly."

And what, all this time, had been the adventures of Mr. Origen Wimple?

He had succeeded at last in finding the packed-roof farmhouse at which, "alone and withouten any other companie," as old Chaucer sings, the widow Peeler dwelt.

Mrs. Peeler was sitting by the light of one solitary candle, with her calf-skin-booted feet carefully balanced on the stove hearth, reading the "horrible accidents" and "remarkable occurrences" in the weekly paper, and was deeply interested, just when Mr. Wimple's knock sounded, in an account of a bold and daring bank burglary, which had been recently perpetrated in the nearest city.

"The villain who committed this diabolical crime is supposed to be in hiding in or near Spruce mountain," she read to herself with infinite relish and an occasional mis-pronunciation of the big words, "but will soon be swooped down upon by the majesty of an offended law."

"Eh! What! Didn't I hear some one a-knockin' at the door?"

And, providing herself with a poker, she ventured to unbolt the door with some caution. There stood a pale young man with a satchel. A most unexpected vision; for the traveling peddler, who had been intrusted with a note to her from Mrs. Banks, had forgotten all about it and gone placidly by, with the half sheet of paper at the bottom of his pockets.

The widow Peeler grew pale, remembering the sanguineous paragraphs she had so lately been perusing. The bag was small, but there was nothing to hinder its containing dynamite; the gun case and fishing poles, for all she knew, might be deadly instruments of destruction.

"Who be you?" demanded the widow.

"I am the Banks boarder," explained Mr. Wimple, in as insinuating a manner as possible. "Will you kindly give me refuge for—"

"Refuge!" screamed the widow. "The 'bank burglar!' Well, if ever I see such hardened impudence in all my life!"

And with an energy and strength which afterward seemed, as she told Mrs. Deacon Glassey, positively superhuman, she seized him by the collar, dragged him into the little back room, where the seed corn was being piled up, and succeeded in locking and bolting the door upon him before he had gathered presence of mind enough to remonstrate or resist.

"The window is nailed up," said Mrs. Peeler, piling all the heavy furniture against the door, "and I'll go to Sarah Jennings and send her husband off for the constables at once."

But Mr. Jennings was in bed with rheumatism, and Sarah easily persuaded the widow that her captive would be safe enough all night in the little corn room.

This was the condition of things when the three Misses Merivale and Araminta Banks came over the next morning, on pretense of bringing some black currant jelly for Mrs. Peeler's cold, and gathering wild grapes in the woods. The widow, being chronically deaf, paid no attention to the greeting and introductions of Armainita, but waved her bonnet in the air, crying out breathlessly:

"Gals, I've got him!"

"Got whom?" cried Araminta and the three Misses Merivale in chorus.

"The bank burglar! Shut up in the little corn room!" screamed Mrs. Peeler. "And Milo Beers has gone for the constables, and there is a reward of five hundred dollars offered, and if you'll be very careful you can just climb on the wood-pile and peep through the outside slats of the window, to see him!"

Cautiously and with many little shrieks of apprehension, Miss Daisy Merivale and Araminta Banks ascended the dizzy height of the well-stocked wood-pile and peeped through the murky panes of the little window.

"Goodness gracious me!" cried Araminta, nearly falling backward into the kindling-wood with the sudden start she gave. "It's Mr. Wimple! Sitting in a corner, with his hands clasped over his head, exactly like the Prisoner of Chillon!"

"Mr. Wimple!" screeched Miss Merivale. "Open the door, somebody, and let him out!"

And, after a certain amount of screaming into Mrs. Peeler's ear-trumpet and a series of elaborate explanations, Mr. Origen Wimple was set free; Milo Beers and the constables were disappointed, and the widow never got the reward.

"I have been treated atrociously!" said the boarder. "I shall never forgive these rustic savages! It's outrageous! It's perfectly brutal!"

"Glad you feel so kindly about it," said the widow, who did not hear a word he said. "For how, in all creation, when you said you was a bank-burglar, was I to know that you meant the Banks' boarder? Folks ought to speak more distinctly!"

But Mr. Origen Wimple, instead of returning to the Banks farmhouse, as the three Misses Merivale had fondly expected, packed up his things and went directly back to the city.

"I cannot afford to expose myself to insults like this!" he said, with dignity.

And, to say the truth, things had happened rather unfortunately!—Amy Randolph, in N. Y. Ledger.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—The widow of Fernandez Gonzalez, the Spanish novelist, died lately. Although her husband made four hundred thousand dollars by his pen he left her poor.

—Rev. Mgr. Goddard, ex-Empress Eugenie's chaplain, has been compeled, in consequence of ill-health, to resign the pastorate of St. Mary's church at Chiselhurst. He was tutor to the late Prince Imperial of France, and for some time the pope's domestic prelate.

—Tennyson is an entirely self-made man. He is one of the twelve children of a poor country clergyman, of Somersby; and, although he is a lineal descendant of the Plantagenets, he has never received assistance from any of his wealthy and aristrocratic relatives.

—Hon. Hugh McCulloch enjoys the distinction of being the only man who has twice held the office of secretary of the treasury. His first appointment was in March, 1865, by President Lincoln; the second in 1885 by President Arthur. Mr. McCulloch is in his eighty-fourth year.

—Count Varoustoff Daskoff is at the head of the czarowitz' relief committee, and claims that one of the chief difficulties with which his staff has to labor in relieving the necessities of the suffering population is the prejudice springing from their ignorance and superstition.

—Miss Laura N. Ford, a Philadelphia authoress, has purchased ten acres of land on one of the highest summits of the Green mountains. The location is now a wilderness, and Miss Ford is to personate the pioneer. The forest is to be cleared and a number of summer cottages will be built on the site, to furnish a summer retreat for herself and friends.

—Prof. Skeal, who maintains the orthodox belief that the study of Latin and Greek is serviceable for improving a student's style in English composition, thinks also there is something to be said on the other side. Whatever the study of Latin and Greek might do toward improving the student's style, the study of languages and English literature would do more.

—Jean Ingelow is the daughter of a banker of Lincolnshire and was one of a family of eleven children. She wrote her first poems on the window-shutters, closing them away out of sight when completed. Her brother was the first to secure the publication of her poems, and four editions of a thousand copies each were sold the first year. Twenty-six editions of the same volume have since been published.

—Frau Flygare-Carlen, the deceased authoress, has left the whole of her property to charitable institutions. The university of Upsala is to receive 10,000 kronen; the same sum is to be devoted to poor students; poor fishermen from her home are to receive the interest of 10,000 kronen every year, and 29,000 kronen are to go to found scholarships in the Latin school at Skars.

—Prof. Theodore W. Dwight, who died recently while in the act of signing his will, left an estate valued at $1,000,000. For nearly twenty years Prof. Dwight's income from his teaching and writings ranged from $25,000 to $40,000 per year. It afterward dropped to $15,000 per year, and at the time of his death his salary as emeritus professor in Columbia college was $7,500. All this was in addition to his legal practice, from which he is said to have derived a large income, his fees in single cases, as referee or counsel, at times amounting to as much as $100,000.

—"I ain't crying," said little Elsie, cheerfully, from the dining-room where she was having a late and solitary breakfast. "I'm glad to hear it," replied her mother, from the adjoining room. "Why aren't you crying, my dear?" "'Cause," said Elsie, as she placidly watched the contents of her overturned oatmeal bowl flowing over the table and trickling down to the flobr—"'cause there's no use crying over spilled milk."

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Finely-powdered Peruvian bark is recommended to keep bangs in curl in moist weather. It is applied with a powder puff. Unfortunately this suggestion is valuable only to persons with blonde or light-brown hair. On black hair the powder shows a fine dust and can not be used.—N. Y. Times.

—Creole Ice-Cream: Take two quarts of rich cream, one pound of sugar and four eggs; put in a sauce-pan and set on the stove until well heated; take off and stir until cool; flavor with vanilla; freeze, and mix in two pounds, in equal parts, of preserved peaches, plums, cherries, pineapples and strawberries; freeze until hard.—Harper's Bazar.

—Puff Paste: One pound of flour sifted three times, the yolks of two eggs, a bowl of ice-water and one pound of best butter. These ingredients will make a large quantity, but as it keeps fresh in the refrigerator, and every scrap of it can be utilized, there can be no waste, and the material for an entree or a quick dessert is always on hand.—Harper's Bazar.

—Berry Sherbet: Crush one pound of berries, add them to one quart of water, one lemon sliced, and one teaspoonful of orange flavor, if you have it. Let these ingredients stand in an earthern bowl for three hours; then strain, squeezing all the juice out of the fruit. Dissolve one pound of powdered sugar in it, strain again, and put on the ice until ready to serve.—Boston Budget.

—Custard Pie Without Milk: Beat together thoroughly five eggs, five tablespoonfuls of sugar and a little salt. Pour into this one pint of water, stirring briskly while adding the water. Flavor with spices most pleasing to the taste, and complete the pie as you would for any ordinary custard. This quantity is sufficient for two pies. They are very nice, and custard made in this manner may be eaten after pickles or any sour fruit by people with weak stomachs, without producing any disagreeable effect.—Detroit Free Press.

—Puree of Cauliflower: Trim the green leaves off two small cauliflowers and lay the flowers in water for one hour; then put them in slightly salted boiling water and cook until tender; when done drain them. Cut one onion into thin slices and two ounces lean bacon into dice; place them in a stew-pan and let fry gently ten minutes, add some seasoning and the cauliflowers chopped fine; mix well together and let simmer five minutes, then add a pint and a half of stock broth, the same quantity of milk, a little grated nutmeg and a little roux, let simmer gently for half an hour, then pass it through a fine sieve, boil it up again; take off any scum that rises and serve boiling hot with croutons of fried bread handed.—Housekeeper.

—Tomatoes a la Cintra: Use large tomatoes, cut them through the middle; with a teaspoon take out the seeds, then place the tomatoes in a stew-pan and fill them with the following mixture: Scrape half a pound of veal cutlet, then pound in a mortar with a small onion, and a little chopped parsley; when beaten quite smooth add some seasoning, four cold boiled potatoes, a little grated nutmeg, a little finely rubbed thyme, and one egg. This quantity is sufficient for six large tomatoes. Mix well together, then fill the tomatoes, sprinkle some seasoning over them, add half a pint of stock broth, and enough Harvey sauce to flavor; place on a slow fire and let simmer forty minutes. When the tomatoes are done, have ready two rounds of buttered toast, place them on it, and serve very hot.—Housekeeper.

FASHION BREVITIES.

Some of the Things that Are in Vogue with Stylish Ladies.

Buttons of leather with lace medallions are used on cloth coats.

The Alsacian bow is a feature of some of the season's millinery.

Narrow leather makes very attractive trimming for cloth dresses.

Little, peaked, sugar-loaf crowns are seen on many of the newest hats.

There are more feathers than flowers on imported French hats and bonnets.

Narrow velvet and little pussy-cat bows are seen on many of the summer costumes of light material.

Sleeves are very long, extending slightly over the hands. With these sleeves one might easily wear two-button gloves.

One of the dainty fads in foot-wear is a black velvet slipper wrought with jet. For dressy wear, slippers of blue, green or gold-colored are used, and these are embroidered in jet, green, black or other dark colors, and may have gold-bead embroidery.

A novel and pretty tea-gown is made of brocade and plain silk. The trained skirt and the sides and back of the waist are of brocade. This is cut away on the sloulder, leaving space for the point of plain material, which extends up to the collar and shoulder seams, is gathered in at the waist line by a belt of velvet and falls in full folds to the hem of the skirt. This plain front is outlined with cascades of handsome lace; the sleeves are of lace with velvet bands around the arms above the elbows.—N. Y. Ledger.

When Washing Windows.

Whenever it is necessary to wash windows, use plenty of clean cloths, change the water often, and rub the panes until perfectly clear and dry. Then the glass will be clean, no matter what particular method is followed. To go more into detail, here is a good rule: Half fill a pail with tepid water, and add to it four tablespoonfuls of household ammonia. Wash the glass with old linen, or a piece of cheesecloth. Rinse the cloth often, and squeeze so dry that the water will not run from it. Rub the glass quite hard. Now wipe dry with a clean piece of cheesecloth and polish with a chamois skin or a piece of newspaper which has been crushed in the hands until soft. Change the water often, and always have the drying cloth perfectly day and clean. Some home housekeepers use only chamois skins for washing and wiping the windows, but I have found the above method more satisfactory. — Ladies' Home Journal.

Velvet Garnitures.

Notwithstanding the popularity of velvet fabrics and trimmings, even for the summer season, we see them in a great many instances replaced by sleeves and bodice decorations of faille, bengaline, dotted and plain surah, etc. Costumes with velvet sleeves, skirt frills and vests are, however, kept in reserve for cool evenings on the beach and in the mountains, where they look elegant and comfortable. These are made of light or dark velvet, sometimes matching the delecate gray or other soft tinted gowns in tone, yet often being of a much deeper shade or black

ST. LOUIS.

Everybody Planning to Visit the Western Metropolis.

A Carnival of Unusual Brilliancy—Six Miles of Illuminated Streets—Seventy-Five Thousand Lights—Other Special Attractions.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 25.—The city this evening is a blaze of light. Along over six miles of the business streets 75,000 electric and gas lights are shining through globes of many tints, producing an effect which baffles description, and which exceeds in brilliancy and magnificence anything ever seen in modern days or immortalized by the pens of oriental poets. The city is crowded with guests, and the universal expression of opinion is that great as is the reputation of St. Louis as a carnival city, the metropolis of the west and southwest has annihilated all records this year. In addition to the countless arches and clusters of many-colored globes, there are ten splendid set pieces, in which the latest triumphs of electricity are displayed. The most prominent of these is on Twelfth street, between Washington avenue and Olive. It is a great electrical panorama which opens up with a silent, but overpoweringly eloquent, description of the discovery of America, goes on to show how the country settled up, and concludes with a magnificent burst of light with the words:

ST. LOUIS.

displayed in bold relief at a height of 150 feet above the heads of tens of thousands of enthusiastic spectators.

At the corner of Broadway and Olive streets, within two squares of the site of the new two million dollar hotel, an enormous globe is suspended in mid air, about as high as the fifth floor of the lofty buildings which adorn the corner. The globe revolves on its axis, and is studded with thousands of incandescent electric light globes which give the exact outlines of the two continents. When lighted up the effect is magnificent, especially when seen at a distance of eight or ten squares.

Over the Grant statue, on Twelfth street, the Stars and Stripes and the Spanish flag are suspended, and here again electricity does the rest. The other set pieces and designs are equally magnificent and daring.

The special illumination nights of the season are: September 1, 3, 5, 15, 22 and 29; October 1, 4, 6, 13 and 20.

The illuminations are but a part of the grand entertainment provided by St. Louis. The great exposition, the only successful annual exposition in the world, opens September 7 and continues with four concerts daily by Gilmore's band of 100 pieces, the greatest aggregation of musical talent ever seen or heard in the west.

The Veiled Prophet will arrive October 1, and will be accorded a military reception. His great annual parade will take place Tuesday, October 4, followed by a grand ball at the Merchants' Exchange hall.

All the railroads are making exceptionally low rates to St. Louis during the festivities, a programme of which will be mailed to anyone addressing the Festivities Bureau, St. Louis.

PURITAN SMALL BOYS.

Rigid Discipline Practiced in the Early New England Churches.

In a book in which Jonathan Trumbull recorded the minor cases he tried as justice of the peace is this entry: "His Majesties Tithing man entered complaint against Jona, and Susan Smith, that on the Lord's Day, during Divine Service, they did smile." They were found guilty, and each was fined five shillings and costs. But it was the "small boy" whose behavior in the meeting-house provoked the Puritan elders to groan in chorus, "Foolishness is bound in the heart of a child."

The boy behaved badly because he was seated with other boys, instead of with his father and mother in a family pew. They were herded together on the pulpit and gallery stairs, and tithingmen and constables were appointed to watch over them, "and see that they behave themselves comelie, and use such raps and blows as meet."

In one parish it was ordered in town meeting "that there be some sticks set up in various places in the meeting-house, and fit persons by them and to use them."

In Miss Earle's book, "The Sabbath in Puritan New England," a story is told of Doctor Dakin hearing a noise while he was praying in a church in Quincy. The minister opened his eyes to discover the cause, and saw a red-haired boy clutching the railing on the front edge of the gallery, while a venerable deacon clutched the boy. At last the balustrade gave way, and boy and deacon fell with a crash. The deacon then led the boy out of the meeting-house, and swishing sounds, accompanied by wails, were soon heard from the region of the horse-sheds.

Parson Chauncy, of Durham, when a boy in his congregation misbehaved in meeting and was "punched up" by the tithingman, would stop in his sermon, and calling the offender by name would ask him to call at the parsonage the next day. At these Monday interviews such tender and beautiful lessons were taught the bad boys that they looked upon Mr. Chauncy as a model of Christian patience and gentleness.

A Yankee trait early showed itself, for in 1729 the town of Medford passed an order to prosecute "all who cut the seats in the meeting-house." Those Puritan boys would whittle, and in spite of the tithingman's watchfulness the seats were hacked and cut.—Youth's Companion.

SHE HAD FORGOTTEN.

Her Right Had Held Something That Was Missing.

After she had made her purchases and had informed the clerk as to the address to which they should be sent, she picked up her purse with her left hand and placed her parasol across her left arm, gazing the while over the counter and floor as if in search of something else.

"Excuse me, miss," ventured the clerk; "but have you mislaid anything?"

"I am sure I don't know," she replied; "but when I entered the store I am positive that I carried something in my right hand."

"Did you not have your parasol or purse in your right hand?"

"No; for I recollect very distinctly that I carried my purse in my left hand and the parasol on my left arm, as you see them now."

"It is very strange," remarked the clerk with a troubled expression on his face, as he searched under the different pieces of fabric strewn over the counter.

"I can not imagine what it was," she remarked, musingly, as she placed a small gloved hand to her chin and gazed into space. "I am positive it was something, and I feel lost without it."

"I am unable to find any thing here," came the muffled voice of the clerk from under the counter, whither he had dropped a few seconds before with the faint hope of being able to find the missing he knew not what.

"Oh, I know now what it was," she gleefully exclaimed, as a pretty flush overspread her face, "It was this."

As the clerk's head bobbed up from behind the counter, like a Jack-in-the-box, she, with a graceful sweep of her shapely right arm, clutched a handful of her skirt in the back, and smilingly took her departure.—Harvey Brown, Jr., in Life.

DELANO DIARY

—Delano is getting to be a first-class live stock market.

—A Democratic caucus will be held on Wednesday, Sept. 14, at 7:30 P. M. In the City Hall.

—Eph Jacobs now gets his drinks out of a nice well, 83 feet deep, put in this week by Tom Rader and Moses Williams of Dassel.

—Andrew Hanseman and Frank Mann have a steamboat about ready to launch on the river. Who says the Crow is not navigable?

—A train over the Soo road went through a bridge at Barrett. Seven killed and others wounded, among the latter Mr. Larson, of Watertown.

—The Delano cornet band have decided to practice Tuesday and Friday nights each week. They have a public picnic next Sabbath, at Lake Rebeca.

—Johnson's Cidar Vinegar for pickling purposes is the best in the market. Warranted absolutely pure. Three years old. For sale by C. H. GREEN & Co.

—We are in receipt of Vol. I, No. 5, of the Saturday Telegram, of Minneapolis, a "red hot" reform organ. The field is large and the grain is ripe, brother.

—The Franklin and Delano Republican club is to have a meeting at the city hall on Tuesday evening. A speaker for the occasion, the Eagle says, has been secured.

—Editor Buckley, of the Eagle, informs us that his brother is afraid this country will get free trade and so is on his way returning to his mother country, Old England.

—J. T. Hanna wishes us to inform the public that he has purchased the Danforth House, and is repairing and refurnishing it and will open up about the 10th inst. for business.

—The Clearwater News came to our table last week. This makes the third News to start up in our county within a month. Old Wright is getting rather newsy. She now has ten ten papers and three are N-e-w-s.

—The culvert at Hen's place on the Watertown road is reported to be in an unsafe condition, and to need repairs. There are several other places on that road that could be much more pleasant for people to travel over.

—F. F. Chancellor, one of Franklin's sturdy farmers went to Watertown on Tuesday evening and listened to the great and only I. Donnelly. He says Donnelly is not hurting Knute Nelson much, and still he did not like his speech very well.

—We are not surprised at our neighbor up street feeling so badly about "Special Legislation" since her string broke. But then she is trying pretty hard to mend it, holding the light etc., etc., for the loose end to join on. You will have to coax harder than that old bird.

—Threshing is in full blast this week. Several are having the grain hauled directly to the machine and save stacking. This works very well where a machine is to be had when you are ready, but when it is necesary to wait is unsatisfactory and often unprofitable.

—In the absence, on a visit of the pastor of the Sibel church, Rev. Davies preached morning and afternoon at that place. Mr. Scott, of Montrose, gave a talk on his visit to the Holy land, in the afternoon, which was quite interesting and instructive. A large and appreciative audience was present, many coming from Montrose, Delano and other places.

—Rev. W. J. Foo Shun, a native of China, will deliver a lecture on the customs and manners of the Chinese, illustrated by stereopticon. The M. E. Ladies Aid Society are to whack up on the proceeds, and the town has been pretty well canvassed, and a large crowd is expected. We have not been advised as to whether the illustrator will eat rice with chopsticks or not. Better come and see.

—The Cleveland club held a meeting at the city hall on Saturday evening and together with others, listened to an able and eloquent lecture by the silver tongued orator, Chris A. Gallagher, of Minneapolis. The audience, on account of the busy time among farmers, was not so large as will be meetings to take place in future, but the speaker sustained his reputation, and delt out many telling blows, at the tariff, the Force bill and other evils being inflicted, or that the Republicans are trying to inflict upon our country.

—Some of the M. E. folks and their friends picniced at Lake Sarah, on Wednesday.

—The St. Peter's school will begin on Monday Sept. 5. Sister Euphrasius will retain her position as principal.

—Read the notice of the Democratic caunty and legislative convention to be held in Delano, on Friday, the 16th inst.

—The Norwood Times says of I. Donnelly who spoke there last week, "He is an orator, first class, but his speech was, so far as logic is concerned, an empty waste of words."

—Prof. R. C. Dewey, principal of the Delano school, interviewed several of his pupils this week in regard to whether they were qualified to remain in the higher departments or not.

—The public school will begin on Monday next, Sept. 5. Let every pupil be on hand promptly at 9 o'clock and not allow his record for punctuality to be broken during the term.

—The Cleveland club of Delano will hold a meeting at M. A. O'Hair's office on Saturday evening at 8 p. m. All are invited to be present and especially the Soliciting committee with as many names as they can get.

—Our Teachers' Examining Board claim to be going to raise the grade of teachers as fast as possible, and propose having a competitive examination in March for next year's teachers. This is a move in the right direction.

—A few weeks since the Health Officer waited upon the village council while in session and informed them that notices had been properly served upon most of the citizens whose alleys and premises required cleaning up, and requested that honorable body to authorize some one to remove the filth and rubbish that had not been removed by the owners. They voted that the Street Commissioner be authorized to do so. But as yet noting has been done toward removing the accumulation of every kind of rubbish imaginable, in some places. Now that the cholera has reached our shores it would be wise for us to delay no longer in so important a matter. The street commissioner blamed a committee man.

—The corps of teachers for Delano's public school, to date, stands as follows:

PRINCIPAL—Prof. R. C. Dewey, Minneapolis.

GRAMMAR—Miss Anna R. Quinn, Delano.

INTERMEDIATE—Miss Mary McAlpine, Maple Lake.

PRIMARY—Miss Irene Cheeley, Minnetonka Mills.

Prof. Dewey is a recent graduate of the State University, comes highly recommended, and will, if allowed an assistant to help him in his department, undoubtedly do much toward raising the grade of our school, and put it where it should be, at the head of Wright county educational institutions.

Personals.

Misses Tillie and Mary Roers, of St. Paul, are visiting with their aunt, Mrs. Becker.

Miss Katie Barth, of Watertown, spent several days this week at her uncle, George Schaffer's.

Rev. Reible and family, of Montrose, returned on Wednesday from a pleasant visit in LaMars, Iowa.

A. G. Sexton, Cokato's follower of Blackstone and a good Democrat, was in town shaking hands with old friends, yesterday.

That chunk of good natured adipose tissue from Wright county's Dublin, known as Jack Quinn, dined at Young's Hotel today.

Mrs. S. E. Farnham and child, of Charleston, W. Va., are visiting with Frank Man's family on their way to Willmar.

J. H. McGary, Frank Coffin and John Rader were among the Independence farmers in town on Tuesday.

Among those present from a distance at the spanking Saturday evening, were Chairman Quinn and John and T. F. Kelly, of Waverly.

Editor Buckley and family have been entertaining his brother, W. S. Buckley, of Lisbon North Dakota, who are on their way to England to make their future home.

Mrs. H. M. Coffin and daughter Edna who have been visiting with Mrs. C's brother Dr. Catlin, returned yesterday to their home, at St. Peter.

County Cullings.

In making up slates for the different political parties the Eagle seems to leave out the name of W. M. Kaspohl, of Franklin, for sheriff on the Republican ticket. We understand she is afraid he could not beat Nugent.

It is rather amusing to Wright county politicians to read in the Eagle of I. Gutzwiller Jr., holding out the lamp for A. Y. Eaton to return to the republican ranks. Who would have ever thought of such a thing? But then new converts are apt to be very zealous in directing others.

County commissioners should be good men. We have a new one to choose this year from the 3d district, comprising Franklin, Woodland and Rockford. So far as we have heard, Chas. Bugbee and Adam Horsch are apt to be pitted against each other.

The Democratic county convention is called to be held at the city hall, in Delano, Friday Sept. 16. Pick out the best men in your voting precincts to represent you at that time and place and do your best to nominate a good ticket. With a clean, straight Democratic ticket, the chances are excellent this year.

Hennepin's Superintendent of Schools.

The bone of contention in the Hennepin county Democratic convention last Thursday, as in the Republican convention on the preceeding Tuesday, was the office of the Superintendent of schools. Prof. James A. Lewis, who was finally re-nominated by a unanimous vote, had for his chief competitor no less a personage than Mrs. A. S. Beede, of Greenwood. Prof. J. T. Pribble, of Osseo, was also a candidate, and brought with him to the convention letters from Prof. Lewis, himself, saying that he would not try for a re-nomination, and expressing the wish that the honor be given to someone else. There was also a powerful Republican lobby there, headed by Ex-Supt. H. B. McConnell, who, it will be remembered, was so badly beaten in the election two years ago by Prof. Lewis. This Lobby all day long opposed Prof. Lewis' re-nomination with all their might and main. This so enraged the Lewis men that they wished to get a rope and hang McConnell or throw him out of the window and brake his neck. But the genial McConnell approached the delegates with such Chesterfielding politeness that no one had the heart to lay upon him violent hands. The best of feelings prevailed between the candidates present and the innumerable workers in the Democratic ranks. In the Republican convention Bayard T. Shaver went about all day showing the names of 31 delegates, who, he said, had given their word of honor to vote for him, and he counted confidently on securing the nomination by a majority of one, and had high hopes of getting more. When the ballots were counted, however, Mr. Shaver only had 14 votes. We got the promise of 19 Democrats to vote for Prof. Lewis, and on the first ballot the vote stood: Lewis 19; Beede 10; Carr 2. At this juncture the names of all of Prof. Lewis' competitors were withdrawn, and he was re-nominated by a unanimous vote. After these conventions it is believed that Bayard T. Shaver will have more confidence in Democrats than in Republicans. Seeking the Republican nomination after serving the Democratic party two years ago was indeed an unwise step. Prof. James A. Lewis, his friend and benefactor, who has not at any time had the slightest wish to be re-elected to the office himself, advised the young man to enter some good school for a year, which would not cost him more than a scramble for the office of Superintendent; but he turned a deaf ear to all who ventured to offer him good advice, and went in with the Republicans, who, after using him as a tool to aid the nomination of other candidates, kicked him out of office in disgrace. He did the Democratic party good service two years ago, and it is believed that if he has the moral courage to take off his coat and go right into this fight with us, a great future is before him. If he will do this, his election to the Superintendency two years hence is a foregone conclusion, for the Democrats owe him no grudge. He must make his choice, and speidely, too, for the Democratic party will never assent to his drawing the fat salary of Assistant Superintendent for the remaining four months of Prof. Lewis' present term if he throws his influence against them, or if he remains long undecided.

Prof. Lewis re-nomination, in spite of the heroic efforts put forth in behalf of his distinguished competitor from Greenwood, inspite of the powerful Republican lobby, and contrary to his own written wish that the honor be given to another shows that he is a strong man with a very strong hold on his party. We will not willingly give him up. If he does not decline the nomination, as if it is feared he will, as he has offers of professionnl chairs at a much greater salary than the Superintendent receives, he will be re-elected in November, beyond the shadow of a doubt. Since the convention there has been much speculation in Democratic circle as to who should be his assistant during his second term. Mrs. A. S. Beede seemed to be the choice of at least nine out of every ten, who have thus far manifested an interest in the matter. If the professor declines the nomination Mrs. Beede will be appointed to take his place, and she will be elected in November as sure as sunrise. The writer was favorable to the retention of Mr. Shaver in the office as assistant, in the event of Prof. Lewis' re-election, not knowing that Mrs. Beede carred to have anything whatever to do with it, and so stated in a letter to the Times, the day after his (Shaver') rejection by the Republican convention and the day before the Democratic convention. But the general sentiment of the party, and especially that portion that was most instrumental in re-nominating Prof. Lewis is against the retention of Shaver in the office, even for a single day, except in the event of his publicly renouncing all allegiance to the Republican party. Mr. Shaver's conduct thus far has increased the displeasure of both parties. He is between hell and the hot box. There is only one way for him to escape from a political cremation from which he could never be resurected, and it is to join the Democratic party.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage duly made, executed and delivered by G. O. Trow and his wife Abbie Trow, as mortgagors, to George E. Bull as mortgagee, bearing date the first day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty seven (1887) with a power of sale therein contained, which mortgage was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Wright and State of Minnesota on the twenty-second (22) day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven (1887), at nine (9) o'clock a. m. in book four (4) of mortgages on page one (1).

Whereas said mortgage was given to secure the payment at maturity of the sum of nine hundred ($900) dollars with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, according to the conditions of ten (10) cupon notes bearing even dates with said mortgage, Whereas said mortgagee did on the 23th day of April 1892 pay taxes for the years 1890 and 1891 then due and unpaid as follows, to-wit: For the year 1890 the sum of ten dollars and seventy eight cents, for the year 1891, the sum of thirty-nine dollars and forty-eight cents, which sum is also claimed to be recovered as an additional loan on said lands and whereas there is claimed to be due and there is due and unpaid on said mortgage and on the notes secured thereby at the date of this notice the sum of ten hundred and sixty-two dollars and seventy cents ($1062.70) principle and interest besides the taxes paid as aforesasd, and interest on said taxes amounting to the sum of one dollar and forty cents and whereas no proceedings at law or in equity has been instituted to recover said mortgage debt or taxes as aforesaid, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sail of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage to-wit: Lot number one (1) and block number thirteen (13) situated in the village of Cokato, Wright county, Minnesota, according to the duly recorded plat of record, in the Register of Deeds office in and for the county of Wright and state of Minnesota, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Wright county at the front door of the court house in the village of Buffalo in said county on Thursday, the twenty-ninth (29) day of September, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two (1892) at two o'clock p. m. at public vendue to the highest bidder, for cash, to pay said mortgage debt, principle and interest and taxes paid as aforesaid with costs of these proceedings, together with the sum of thirty-five ($35) dollars attorney's fee stipulated in said mortgage to be paid in case of foreclosure.

Dated August 10, 1892.

GEO. E. BULL, mortgagee,
A. G. SEXTON, Cokato,

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

A Democratic district convention for the 38th legislative district, comprising Wright and Sherburne counties will be held in the village of Delano, on Friday, September 16th, 1892, at 2 p. m. or immediately after the county convention has adjourned for the purpose of placing in nomination four representatives.

The counties are entitled to representation as follows: One delegate at large from each county, and one for every sixty votes or major fraction thereof cast for Wilson for governor at the last general election in November 1890.

Wright county—36.
Sherburne county—5.

Dated at Waverly on the 31st day of Agust 1892.

WILLIAM QUINN, Chairman Legislative Committee.

Republican Rally.

On Tuesday evening a Republican rally was held in the city hall. The band played a couple of pieces when Mr. Ingerson introduced to the fair sized audience the first speaker Mr. Sheehan, a young son of old Erin, who in a lengthy speech, mostly on tariff, entertained his hearers quite well. He took occasion to say that "the United States looks down on all other nations in their ignorance and pauperism;" but, neglected to say that, contrary to their wishes many of them are made to come to this country to join strikers, through the influence of the protective system. He claims laws for the protection of labor have been passed; those against Chinese emigration and criminals. Republicans have two or three issues in the campaign. Democrats but one. On the money question he claimed that the Republicans favor an "honest dollar." That's just what suits the Democrats around here. "Old soldiers" he said, "get four out of every six dollars of government receipts," and still he seemed to think they should have all the offices, unless they were Democrats. He then took up the tariff question, and unlike the young men who were around in the last campaign and claimed they "knew nothing about it," sailed in, and, after citing a few illustrations, and telling that the Democrats always fought for free trade, and apparently convincing a portion of the audience that all Democratic newspapers and orators were liars, and saying that "Grover ought to know that he was lying as well as the orators of two years ago, the speaker, much to the amusement of some, conclusively showed, by "Democratic authority" that New York state had paid $6,000,000 more to her laborers and increased her manufactories $31,000,000; and neglected to say that New York went Democratic the last election. "Somebody says tariff is a tax." If we don't raise revenue this way how will we; by direct tax?" "It is a good way to pay when we don't find it out." People about here are beginning to find it out. This pulling the wool over their eyes seems to be about played out.

Mr. Reese, the next speaker, was a jolly good fellow, said he was a Blaine man, and had as many friends where he was known, among the Democrats as among Republicans. He had talked with Mr. Powers, one of Delano's oldest and venerablest citizens, and concluded to read the Fifth Amendment as a part of his argument on the Lodge election bill, or Force bill. Mr. R. is quite a forcible speaker, and believes in force, even if necessary at the polls, and although claiming to be a very ardent Blaine man evidently differed from that great statesmen as well as from our Senator Washburne on the Force bill, in order to be a Harrison man. He spoke of "hoodwinking the western farmers," and told the "pup story" but this time when the pup gotits eyes open it was a "Blaine pup," thats awful hard on the candidate, such occurrances as these should not be narrated on the platform, they might hurt Ben's chances. As negroes are scarce here he ventured to tell the darkey turkey story, illustrating the colored man's fondness for fowls. He claimed the solid south gave the Democrats the "free trade" plank in their platform. But, neglected to say that southern votes, many of them of the race they wished to guard with bayonets under the "Force bill" and on whom he tells his turkey story, gave the g. o. p. their candidate for president, in opposition to himself, who claimed to have drowned a drum corps, with his shouting for Blaine, and many of the leading Republicans from Maine to California, and especally in Hoosierdom" the home of the present incumbent. He likened the McKinley bill to an elephant, and claimed the Democrats had not changed it although they had a majority in congress. Although he admitted they had tried to put wool on the free list, and instead of manfully telling the audience, in this educational campaign it would be necessary for the senate to concur in the action of the lower House and the president to sign the bill before the Democrats could change it, he simply sought to pull wool over their eyes by saying that Minnesota was a leading "wool state" and "thanking God for a Republican senate." If Minnesota is a leader on wool it must not be on the backs of her sheep. Nor in woolens on her people's backs, but in the eyes of some of her blinded voters who vote against their own and their neighbors interest on the great question advocated by Democracy, "The tariff for revenue only, for a government economically administered," an issue which the Republican speakers try to dodge by talking on other issues, as money! Money! Honest money! Recoprocity, etc., etc.

The speaker next turned the attention of the audience to "a class of men the leaders of whom are worse, if possible, than Democrats." Meaning the People's party, made up principally of men who have become thoroughly disgusted with paying protective duties to "infant industries" older than themselves, and "war tariff" a quarter of a century after the war is over. He whaled it to those deserters from the sinking wreck in great fashion as if he thought at least every one of them within the sound of his voice would be "Forced" to return to the ranks of the party that is no more the party of yore, and with whose views even James G. Blaine no more agrees, especially on the Force bill which he wisely advises should be left out of this campaign. He claimed there was no question but the Republicans would have from 25 to 40 thousand majority but advised Republicans to work to make it big as possible. But did not say that the leaders had considered it necessary to send McKinley himself into the state to try to save it to Harrison.

Next came the chairman of the Republican county committee, who, from his talk, is fully imbued with the spirit of protection, and claimed that Washington, Jackson and Jefferson were protectionists; and that Daniel Webster, (who, by the way, like Knute Nelson, made some strong speeches against protection) said "Tariff is not a tax"! And, also, said that he held a meeting, recently, at Clearwater where "800 Republicans were present"? On consulting the 1890 election returns we find that the Republican candidate for governor received 92 votes, in that place, which leads us to suspect that the Republican chairman either added a Baconian cryptogam or two; or, following his illustrious prototype, at Washington, "counted" 800. He stated that he had met a boy of 21 and an aged man who were going to vote for the Republican nominees this year. If he would not be too sanguine of the success of his party we think he could find quite a number who will vote the Democratic ticket this fall.

Eagle's "Hatch Bill."

The old bird that weekly takes her flight from her palacial aerie up street don't seem satisfied with our views on politics. Almost every week she finds fault and her old beak does not stop at politics but hacks away at every thing she can find. After commenting on the Republican rally of Tuesday evening, it undertakes to help out Mr. Powers, Mr. Reese and the fifteenth amendment concerning the so called "Force bill" which James G. Blaine thinks best to say nothing about and which seems to not go well in this part of the country, even with Senator Washburne; and whether for the purpose of still further mystifying its readers, or because it don't know politics any better it gave it a new name the "Hatch election bill"!! What is she coming to any way. We intimated sometime since that she might be getting ready to set, but to go and Hatch like that when people are not expecting it just simply beats the Dutch.

Peck Three Months Ago.

The following letter from New York Labor Commissioner Peck, to his former partner, W. H. Greenhow, of the Hornersville Tribune, written only a little more than three months ago, will now be read with interest:

ALBANY, May 10, 1892.—I was glad to see you take up the Times' assertion that my reports proved that workingmen had received increased wages, and reply to it as you did. I notice, however, that the same paper of yesterday again refers to my report of 1891. It claims that I show there were 1,941 instances of advanced wages for 1891 and 2,085 cases in which the hours of labor were shortened, while it records only 441 cases of reduction. Whether the Times has purposely attempted to deceive its readers I don't pretend to say, but the matter quoted is taken from this bureau report for 1890 and 1891 the year before the McKinley bill went into effect and not the year after, as it would have the public believe.

However, it makes no special difference, for the reason, as you clearly set forth, that, in every instance of either the increase of wages or shortening of hours, it was the direct result of the demands of organized labor, and from no other conceivable cause. When my report for 1891 does come out, the Times and all the protection papers of the whole country will have to stand from under. I am tabulating the data and statistics of the industrial census I have taken for the year before and the year after the McKinley bill went into effect, and enough has been demonstrated to warrant me in claiming that it will furnish the most complete refutation of the theories of the protectionists in regard to wages that has ever been published.

I shall also continue the results of all labor disturbances occuring in the state during the last year and show that out of thousands of successful strikes for increase of wages not one was or is attribute to protection. And I shall show from the manufacturers themselves that in no single instance where there was an increase of wages was it voluntary on their part. Except in individual cases, every increase was the result of the demand on the part of the employes enforced through their organization.—Globe.

CORRESPONDENCE

ST. MICHAELS

The farmers are not all through yet with cutting their grain.

The thresher men are all out and their reports are better than expected.

Nights are turning cold and frost is expected before long.

Grand preparations are being made to put the new church and property in proper shape for the coming dedication of the same which will take place on the 28th inst. Bishop M. C. Galrick, from Duluth, is expected. The St. Joseph aid society extends a cordial invitation to all the neighboring societies to attend in corpora.

A United States' flag pole will be erected in the near future, everybody showing their patriotism by contributing liberally toward the same.

WATERTOWN WAYS.

Too late for last week.

Oscar Bicedorn took a trip to the cities this week.

W. A. Ruble, a graduate of the Mankato Normal school, has been engaged to teach the upper department of our school this winter.

W. F. Kohler went to Faibault on Tuesday to attend the Congressional convention as a delegate from this county.

Hon. Ignatius Donnelly, candidate for Governor on the Peoples ticket, gave a rousing speech in the City Hall last Tuesday evening. The hall was taxed to its utmost capacity with the farmers within ten miles around who came in to hear this well known speaker.

Mrs. R. E. Sherwin is spending the week in Minneapolis.

Rev. Sherwin received a check for two hundred dollars the other day from the church extension fund which is to go towards the completion of the M. E. church at Mound City.

Hon. D. W. Lawler, Democratic candidate for Governor will speak in Watertown in the near future.

WAVERLY WISDOM.

John B. Quinn, Jr., spent a few days last week in Dassel on business.

The editor of the Montrose News was in the village last Tuesday. He is an aristocratic looking gentleman and appears to be well grounded in the Prohibition doctrine. During the brief conversation that we had with him he impressed us very favorably, and undoubtedly he is the right man to give the people of Montrose a lively local paper and should receive their hearty support.

Miss Rassett, of Howard Lake, visited with her friend Miss Annie Jandro last week.

Miss Annie Powell, of Woodland, left last Saturday for Minneapolis to attend the Washington school.

John Whalen, of Woodland, sold his Chatham farm to Albert Kelsey for $925.

Mr. Haven, of Sherburne county, and Mr. Bartlett, of Minneapolis, were here last week and perfected arrangements towards starting a bank in this village. A suitable bank building is to be put up at once and when completed will be occupied for the purpose above named.

Miss Gustie Cech, fell off a fence last Friday and broke her arm. Dr. O'Hair set the limb and the patient is doing as well as could be expected.

Sister Germain was transferred from the convent here to St. Paul, and a sister whose name we did not learn sent her to take her place.

Miss Callie Beal, of Middleville, leaves next week for Excelsior to attend school there during the coming year.

Attorney J. H. Wendell, of Buffalo, was shaking hands with old acquaintances in the village Monday.

Editor Tanner was a county seat caller Monday.

The Republicans held a caucus at Chas. Kingsteds store last Saturday evening and the following delegates were elected to attend the convention at Buffalo on the 14th: J. M. Peterson, Charles Kingstedt, J. M. Beldon, Jonathan Miller, John Robarge.

The Democratic Club held a lively and interesting meeting Saturday evening.

John Kennedy, of Woodland, is being urged by his numerous friends in that town to run for County Commissioner from that district. Woodland is one of the strongest Democratic towns in this county and it is but fair and just that she should be recognized at this time. Mr. Kennedy is a loyal and staunch Democrat and would represent the district in an honorable and business like way.

The parochial school opened Monday with 42 scholars in the primary department, 39 in the intermediate, and 16 in the higher department.

Miss McGinn, of St. Paul, visited with her friend Miss Nellie Giblin last week.

Miss Tillie Bodine, aged 17 years, died at the home of her parents in Marysville last Sunday night after an illness of two months. Deceased was a bright and kind young lady beloved by her many friends and was the idol of the family. The remains were intered in the Swedish Lutheran cemetery on Tuesday and was followed by a large number of friends.

The nuptials of Dr. O'Hair and Miss Ola Kemp will be solomnized this month.

Messrs. John Dunn, Louis Schultz and Thomas Noonan were in attendance at the State Fair Wednesday.

Louis Bramer threshed on his farm the beginning of the week and wheat averaged 18 bushels per acre.

The Cleveland and Lawler club meets Saturday evening and every succeeding Saturday evening until after election.

It is with pleasure we note the interest that is being displayed in regard to better county roads. The subject is one of immense importance, and the fact that the leading journals of the country are drawing public attention to it is to be regarded as a wholesome augury; an indication that the time is not far distant when public sentiment will compel those in authority to take the matter in hand and improve our rural highways. If farmers could be persuaded to think upon the subject they could hardly fail to be convinced that when the first cost of improving the roads would seem heavy, ultimately they would be repaid for their outlay. But in order to bring about this reformation, there will have to be concert of action. It will avail nothing for one or two farmers in a neighborhood to improve the roads. All should join in the god work, and by a united effort place the country in a condition that will, in some respects at least, give us good roads.

List of Patents

Granted to Minnesota inventors this week. Reported by C. A. Snow & Co., Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, Opp. U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C:

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Sept. 2, 1892.

A marked feature of the present campaign is the great differance between the way prominent Republicans who come to Washington talk for publicatson and the way they talk among themselves. In published interviews they all with one accord talk as though the campaign was already settled in their favor and the election a mere formality that must be gone through with just to keep up appearances; but let two or three of them meet privately, where they think themselves safe from the sharp ears of wicked and prying newspayer men, and to hear them reminds one of the line of the familiar song, "Oh what a differance in the morning."

Two office-holders—U. S. Treasurer Nebeker and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Crounse, who is also the Republican candidete for governor of Nebraska—returned from visits to their respective states this week, and before they had shaken the dust of travel from their clothes they both gave out rose-colored interviews of Republican prospects in Indiana and Nebraska, in which those states were stated to be entirely out of the doubtful list. By a mere accident I learned the real opinions of those two men. Nebeker sent word to Mr. Harrisen that unless something was immediately done to satisfy the disaffected republicans in the Fort Wayne district of Indiana all hope of carrying the state might as well be abandoned. So much for the confidence, Mr. Crounse feels so uncertain about the result in his state that he is loth to resign his present office, and wants to fix it so that when he does resign his pay will run to the first of October, and the place be kept vacant until he gets defeated. He has appealed to the national committee for financial assistance in the campaign, with the statement that it is money or certain defeat.

It may be that Secretary Tracy can explain satisfactorially the charges which the New York Herald daily reiterates, that the change in the armor of the new war vessels was made at the request of the firms that make the armor, and that it will put several hundred thousands of dollars in the pockets of the aforsaid firms, but the ugly fact remains, that up to the present time he has not done so, and to attempt to pooh, pooh, charges made by so responsible a journal as the Herald will hardly go down with an intelligent public. The charge of favoriteism, not to call it by a worse name, has been specifically made and nothing short of an answer just as specific will satisfy the unprejudiced public. If Secretary Tracy prove the Herald to be wrong, it is a duty he owes to the administration, as well as to his own good name, to do so at once.

Secretary Tracy is coming in for considerable criticism because of the unprotected position of American interests in South America, which was sharply brought to mind by the forcible seizure of political refugees on a passenger steamship carrying the American flag, the other day, by Venezuelans, and the consequent hurried ordering of the gun-boat Concord from the Atlantic coast to Venezuelan waters. When the social influences of the officers of the navy were many month ago scheming to have the best ships in our navy spend the summer on the Atlantic coast, to give the "dear ducks" who "dance so delightfully, you know," an opportunity to put in a little time at all the fashionable seaside resorts. Secretary Tracy was begged by those interested to keep one or two vessels in South American waters to look after American interests which are constantly jeopardized by the unsettled condition of several of the countries over there, but he could not stand the social "pull;" hence the present unsatisfactory condition of affairs.

QUEEN VICTORIA seems to appreciate editors. She has made barons of two more of the fraternity.

JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER was a shoemaker in his youth, and one, as results show, who was too smart to follow the advice of an antiquated adage.

RUSSELL SAGE wears the same old white hat which did duty when the New York troops marched along Broadway on their return from the war.

DR. KENNEY has returned to parliament somewhat deaf because of a sod thrown at him during his election fight in County Galway, but with his mouth in first-class working order.

OSCAR WILDE is coming to America in the fall. We take occasion at this time to remind Mr. Wilde that in this country a man's real greatness is never measured by the length of his hair.

THE horse Ethan Allen, that trotted a mile in 2:15 with a running mate twenty-five or thirty years ago, was the wonder of the world in his day. Records have changed since Ethan Allen's time.

DURING the year 1892 thus far the ascent of Mont Blanc, once considered among the rarest of achievements, has been successfully accomplished by five Germans, four Americans, three Frenchmen and two Englishmen.

MARION HARLAND (Mrs. Terhune) manages a large poultry yard at her home at Sunny Branch, N. J., personally looking after the setting hens and young broods. Not even the most poetic lay interests her more closely.

THOSE howling dervishes in New York supposed they were coming to America as missionaries, and that the country was half Mohammedanized already. They find they were brought over as dime museum freaks, and they are howling in earnest.

AN English violinist has concluded a series of experiments designed to test the influence of musical sounds on the wild beasts in the zoological garden of London. He reports that both the bears and the lions gave evidences of pleasure when he played for them.

EDWARD EVERETT HALE, Boston's amiable and estimable philosopher, having reached the age of 70, recommends ten hours of sleep and the taking of nourishment six times a day. He also holds that literary people should not write more than three hours a day.

SENATOR MORRILL is one of the youngest looking 80-year-old men in public life, and when he is at home in the marble-ribbed Green mountains of Vermont he looks spry enough to drive a team to the corner grocery for fodder or to help the blacksmith when he is shoeing his oxen.

JUDGE GREGRICK, of the superior court of New York, put to an applicant for naturalization, an Austrian, the query: "Which would you fight for in a war between Austria and the United States?" "Austria," said the would-be citizen. "Go back there!" replied the judge, as he tore up the man's declaration.

PROF. W. J. MCGEE tells his fellow members of the American Association for the Advancement of Science that he believes the entire duration of life on earth has been fifteen million years. This looks like an exaggeration of a nought or two, but the professor admits that his figures may be one hundred or even one thousand times too large.

ONE of the world's fair interesting exhibits will be its Columbiana. There will be shown seventy-nine portraits of Columbus, the most being original. Nine places claim to have been his birthplace. These and the alleged houses will be represented in the photographs. Pictures of everybody associated with Columbus will also be shown, as well as every relic that can be got.

PROF. GOLDWIN SMITH, who has just written his ideas about the best way to make "A Trip to England" says London now has 5,000,000 inhabitants and is growing rapidly. "It grows through the passion that seems to be seizing mankind everywhere, on this (American) continent as well as in Europe, for emigration from the country into the town, not only as the center of wealth and employment, but as the center of excitement, and, as the people fondly imagine, of enjoyment."

IT is said on good authority that the years of greatest growth in boys is the seventeenth; in girls, the fourteenth. While girls reach full height in their fifteenth year, they acquire full weight at the age of 20. Boys are stronger than girls from birth to the eleventh year; then girls become superior physically to the seventeenth year, when the tables are again turned and remain so. From November to April children grow very little and gain no weight; from April to July they gain in height, but lose in weight, and from July to November they increase greatly in weight, but not in height.

THERE died in New York city recently a man who had a singular existence. He was Baron Roger de Seilliere. His father was a Parisian of great wealth and he lavished his love on his son, who was possessed of marvelous beauty, refinement and ability. But the scourge of scarlet fever deprived him of the sense of hearing and of speech. He grew in beauty and learning, but neither could divert his sensitive nature from his affliction. He became a wanderer over the face of the earth, and, having an income of 10,000 francs a year, he traveled almost constantly, never remaining long in one place.

MEMBERS of a family are more likely to resemble each other in their criminal propensities than in any other way. Genius and virtue may not often be transmitted, but the disposition for vice and crime frequently is. A case in point is furnished by a police court in New York. Walter Daly, on the complaint of his mother that she had frequently caught him stealing, was sent to an institution for juvenile criminals. He was only eight years old. Investigation showed that his father and three brothers were in prison for stealing or burglary, and that his two sisters had been thieves from childhood.

HARRISON'S LETTER.

The President Announces the Acceptance of the Nomination.

A Lengthy Document in Which the Issues of the Campaign Are Set Forth from the Standpoint of the Administration.

WILL RUN AGAIN.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6. — President Harrison's letter accepting the republican nomination for the presidency was made public Monday night. It is a lengthy document, comprising about 3,000 words, and touches upon all topics of interest to the general public. A synopsis is here given:

After acknowledging the receipt of the notification of his nomination, the president announces his acceptance, and his gratitude for the approval expressed by the convention of the acts of his administration. He says that if the policies of the administration have not been distinctively and progressively American and republican policies, the fault has not been in the purpose, but in the execution.

He discusses his own administration as an exponent of party policy and boldly contrasts the positions of the two parties. The legislation of the Fifty-first congress is ably upheld, and it is the course of the Harrison administration in carrying out that legislation for which indorsement is asked.

He refers to the establishment of the national bank system and the extinction of the state bank system, by the levying of a tax upon the issue of the latter, and says that the democratic party is pledged to a repeal of the state bank tax, and warns the people of the danger of such action, which, he says will result in flooding the country with a currency neither safe nor acceptable.

Referring to the ocean carrying trade the president says that the hostility of the democratic party is shown by its refusal to "expend an appropriation made during the last administration for ocean mail contracts with American lines.

"Another related measure furnishing increased ocean traffic for our ships and of great and permanent benefit to the farmers and manufacturers as well, is the reciprocity declared by section 3 of the tariff act of 1890 and now in practical operation with five of the nations of Central and South America, San Domingo, the Spanish and British West India islands, and with Germany and Austria under special trade arrangements with each.

"Great credit is due to Mr. Blaine for the vigor with which he pressed this view upon the country. We have only begun to realize the benefit of these trade arrangements. The work of creating new agencies and of adapting our goods to new markets has necessarily taken time; but the results already attained are such, I am sure, as to establish in popular favor the policy of reciprocal trade, based upon the free importation of such articles as do not injuriously compete with the products of our own farms, mines or factories, in exchange for the free or favored introduction of our products into other countries.

"The democratic platform promises a repeal of the tariff law containing this provision and especially denounces as a sham reciprocity that section of the law under which these trade arrangements have been made. If no other issue were involved in the campaign, this alone would give it momentous importance. Are the farmers of the great grain-growing states willing to surrender these new, large and increasing markets for their surplus? Are we to have nothing in exchange for the free importation of sugar and coffee and at the same time to destroy the sugar planters of the south and the beet-sugar industry of the northwest and of the Pacific coast; or are we to have the taxed sugar and coffee, which a 'tariff for revenue only' necessarily involves, with the added loss of the new markets which have been opened?

"The declaration of the platform in favor of the American doctrine of protection' meets my most hearty approval. The convention did not adopt a schedule but a principle that is to control all the tariff schedules. There may be differences of opinion among protectionists as to the rate upon particular articles necessary to effect an equalization between wages abroad and at home. In some not remote national campaigns the issue has been—or, more correctly, has been made to appear to be—between a high and a low protective tariff, both parties expressing some solicitous regard for the wages of our working people and for the prosperity of our domestic industries. But under a more courageous leadership the democratic party has now practically declared that, if given power, it will enact a tariff law without any regard to its effect upon wages or upon the capital invested in our great industries."

The president at great length discusses the influences of the existing tariff law upon the interests of capital and labor, and says: "No intelligent advocate of a protective tariff claims that it is able of itself to maintain a uniform rate of wages without regard to fluctuations in the supply of and demand for the products of labor, but it is confidently claimed that protective duties strongly tend to hold up wages and are the only barrier against a reduction to the European scale.

The fact that there is not much difference between the platforms of the two parties in regard to silver accounts for the brief space which the president gives the subject. It is enough, however, to emphasize his unalterable opposition to free coinage under present conditions, because this would benefit other countries at the expense of the United States. He is hopeful of practical results from the international conference which his administration has arranged.

On the so called "force bill" the president takes his stand for honest elections, but he does not suggest extreme legislation. Instead, he repeats what he said in his annual message about the desirability of a non-partisan commission, which would be able to see that substantial justice is done in all federal elections. In his discussion of the subject he cites the recent Alabama election where there was no republican ticket in the field, as a striking illustration of what he terms a system which furnishes no security for personal or political rights. He says he will again urge upon congress that provisions be made for the appointment of a non-partisan commission to consider the subject of appointments and elections in their relation to the choice of federal officers.

"When public affairs have been given a direction and business has adjusted itself to those lines any sudden change involves a stoppage and new business adjustments. If the change of direction is so radical as to bring the commercial turn-table into use the business changes involved are not readjustments, but reconstructions. The democratic party offers a programme of demolition. The protective policy, to which all business, even that of the importer, is now adjusted; the reciprocity policy, the new merchant marine, are all to be demolished—not gradually, not taken down, but blown up. To this programme of destruction it has added one constructive feature, the reestablishment of state banks of issue.

"The policy of the republican party is, on the other hand, distinctively a policy of safe progression and development—of new factories, new markets and new ships. It will subject business to no perilous changes, but offers attractive opportunities for expansion upon familiar lines. Very respectfully yours,

"BENJAMIN HARRISON."

A New York State Farmer Commits Murder and Then Hangs Himself.

MARATHON, N. Y., Sept. 6.—George Willis, a farmer living on Howland hill, in Lisle, shot his wife fatally and his hired man, named Oliver, seriously Saturday. The three were on a load of hay when a dispute between husband and wife arose. Willis fired one shot at his wife, which glanced and struck Oliver. He then shot her in the temple, killing her instantly. Willis then went into the woods and hanged himself. The murdered woman was the daughter of J. B. Howland, ex-supervisor of the town of Leslie. Jealousy led to the shooting.

Bodies of the Wreck Victims.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Sept. 6.—The tug Andrew J. Smith arrived here from Deer Park Sunday morning, having on board Philip Minch and C. F. Palmer, with the bodies of Mr. Minch, Mrs. Engleby and one fireman. Contrary to the report received here from the steamer City of Green Bay, no other bodies have been found. The body of First Mate Engleby, which the steamer Nimick picked up in the lake, was found lashed to a ladder with a life-preserver on. He apparently had died from exhaustion and not from drowning.

MYER IS WHIPPED.

Jack McAuliffe, in the Fifteenth Round of a Most Terrific Fight at New Orleans, Knocks Him Out, and Wins the Light Weight Championship.

OLYMPIC CLUB, NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 5.—Jack McAuliffe knocked Billy Myer out Monday night in the fifteenth round. McAuliffe seemed none the worse for his battle when he got through, barring a series of body blows and welts on his white skin. Myer was cut in the face and pretty badly wounded. It was fight from the word go. There were 6,500 spectators. The result of the fight also leaves Jack McAuliffe the light-weight champion of the world and the winner of a purse of $10,000 offered by the Olympic club, besides a side bet of $5,000.

Myer and McAuliffe weighed in at a quarter to 9, the former at 137½ pounds, McAuliffe at 137¾. Capt. Barrett arranged the scales upon which the gloves were weighed, and finding them according to law, full five ounces, nodded his consent to the press representatives that the gloves would do. "Prof." Duffy announced that Jim Colville, of Boston, acted as timekeeper for McAuliffe, while George R. Clark, of Chicago, did like service for Myer. Rube M. Frank acted as official timekeeper.

Jack McAuliffe was the first to enter the ring, which he did at 9:15. Myer came a moment later. Both men received great ovations. Knowledge of the fact that a pugilistic grudge of long standing was about to be settled awakened tremendous applause. The men were called to the center of the ring by Referee Duffy, who, together with Capt. Barrett, instructed the men as to how they should abide by the Queensberry rules and the Olympic club rules as to breaking away. Joe Choynski and Prof. Robertson were McAuliffe's seconds, while Jim Nelson held the bottle. Ed Myer, Alf Kennedy and John Eckert seconded Myer, while Alf Kennedy held the bottle. At 9:20 everything was in readiness for the battle to begin, and both men sat in their corners eyeing each other closely. The men were ordered to shake hands at 9:25, and the gong for the first round was sounded.

At 9:35 the fight began. It resulted in a clean-cut victory for McAuliffe. There can be no quibbling on that point. He scored first knock-down and first blood, and had his man groggy a half dozen times before he administered the final blow in the fifteenth round, which dropped Myer to his knees and rolled him against the crimson ropes.

It was a heavy right hand swing that did the trick, and McAuliffe was borne triumphantly on his seconds' shoulders to his corner. The Williamsburger was made the recipient of hearty applause. The Williamsburger's seconds opened champagne in his corner, while Myer was offered a glass of the wine by his conqueror, which was accepted, and a hearty handshake wound up the greatest battle recorded in the lightweight class since the days of Billy Edwards, Barney Aaron and Sam Collyer.

McAuliffe, in 1884, won boxing tournament at Madison Square garden; February 19, 1885, won 124-pound championship in New York; March 28, 1885, won a light-weight tourney at New York Athletic club; April 15, 1885, won tourney; February 27, 1886, became professional, whipped Jack Hopper in seventeen rounds; October 20, 1886, beat Billy Frazier for $1,000 in twenty-one rounds, 1 hour and 23 minutes, for the light-weight championship, with skin gloves; January 14, 1887, beat Harry Gilmore for $1,100, in twenty-eight rounds, 1 hour and 51 minutes; March, 1887, drew with Jem Carney, of England, at Revere Beach, Mass., in seventy-four rounds, 4 hours and 58 minutes; September 25, 1888, drew with Pat Kerrigan in ten rounds at Boston; October 10, 1888, beat Billy Dacey at Dover in eleven rounds, 42 minutes and 20 seconds, for $1,000; December 16, 1888, beat Jake Hyams in nine rounds for the gate receipts; February 13, 1889, drew with Billy Meyer at North Judson, Ind., in sixty-four rounds for the light-weight championship; April, 1889, drew in fifteen rounds with Mike Daly, of Bangor, at Boston; March 21, 1890, whipped Jimmy Carroll in forty-seven rounds at California Athletic club; beat Austin Gibbons in six rounds; beat Billy Frazier in three rounds.

VICTIMS OF THE PEST.

Three More Cholera Patients Die on the Quarantined Ships and Fresh Cases Appear.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—The Normannia had three new cases of cholera Monday, one of which was fatal. The victim was Otto Engel, aged 20, one of the crew. The Rugia had three new cases, of which one died, Johanna Bass, aged 54. On the Moravia there were no new developments. Among the Normannia's passengers on Hoffman island one new case was transferred to the hospital or Swinburne island. There one child died Monday, aged 5 months. At the present time there are eight sick persons on Swinburne island, the doctor says.

Boarders are leaving the hotels along the shore near quarantine in large numbers, owing to the presence of the pest ships. They fear that the cholera may spread to Staten Island and the island will be quarantined. There is apparently no conflict between the state and federal authorities in the matter of detaining vessels. Dr. Jenkins declares that he will hold ships from infected ports for not only twenty days, as directed in the president's proclamation, but thirty or forty days if necessary. The board of health has issued an official bulletin declaring that no cases of cholera have occurred in this city and that the city is now more exempt from contagious diseases than at any time in several years. The death rate last week was 20.38 in 1,000 being the lowest death rate in this city in any week since November, 1891.

Wealthy Jews of Kalamazoo to Try an Experiment with Refugees.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Sept. 5. — The Jewish congregation of this city have determined to purchase a farm in the vicinity of Kalamazoo for the purpose of colonizing three or four refugee families. This philanthropic plan is largely in the nature of an experiment, but should it prove successful the Jews of this city will have access to the immense fund donated some time ago by Baron Hirsch for this purpose. The idea is to get together a few families and thoroughly Americanize them, gradually increasing the colony.

Despondent from Love.

LA PORTE, Ind., Sept. 6.—The body of Lizzie Uhler was found drowned in the Pine lake channel near this city Sunday morning. She was a well known young lady, about 2 years of age, and an orpan, bearing an excellent character. It was noted at her home of late that she was very despondent, and it is now thought that she committed suicide because of a love affair. For a long time she had been keeping company with a young man here, and it is alleged that the opposition of his parents to the engagement caused its breaking off.

Dr. Williamson Resigns.

Following upon the resignation of Dr. Bartlett, superintendent of the St. Peter hospital for the insane, comes the announcement of the retirement of Dr. A. P. Williamson, superintendent of the third hospital for the insane at Fergus Falls. In his letter of resignation he assigns no reason for leaving the Fergus Falls institution, but it is understood among his most intimate friends that he contemplates starting a private hospital for the insane at Merriam Park. The resignation of Dr. Williamson will not take effect until November 23.

Death of an Indian Chief.

Gabriel Renville, chief of the Sisseton Indians, died at the home of S. J. Brown in Brown's valley. He was born near Big Stone lake seventy years ago, was the son of Victor Renville, grandson of Joseph Renville, who, about 1840, dealt in the trading business for Gen. Sibley and Com. Kittson, and, at the time of the Sioux massacre in 1862, had a farm of 3,000 acres near the present city of Graceville, on the Minnesota river. In the outbreak he took the part of the whites.

Bound to Have Him.

A strong determination is evident to hunt to the ground Tom Lewis, who killed John McCaffrey, a saloonkeeper at La Prairie. At a citizens' meeting Pat Varley was appointed special officer, with authority to select nine men whom he can trust. These were divided into squads of three men each, and any squad that captures Lewis, dead or alive, is to receive $500 reward. The others are to receive $5 a day for each man.

Jumped One Hundred Feet.

H. Halloran and Daniel Sweeney, strangers, were walking across the high wagon bridge at Winona when one bantered the other to jump off. The challenged man immediately leaped over the hand rail to the water, a distance of 100 feet, followed by his companion a second later. They were rescued by some people who witnessed the act and were fined for disorderly conduct.

Valuation of Hennepin County.

County Auditor George E. Ledgerwood has sent to the state auditor an abstract of the assessed valuation of personal and real property in Hennepin county. The real estate foots up $132,857,893, the personal property, $21,284,091, and the exempt property, $25,780,765. Outside of exempt property the total foots up $154,091,984.

Almost Killed by His Son.

Carl Kekusch, a Nicollet county farmer, was assaulted by his son, aged 20 years, and so badly beaten with a club that he could not live. It was the result of a family feud. The would-be murderer was still at large.

Jennie S. Youlton, of Chicago, was granted a divorce by Judge Stears in Duluth from H. R. Youlton. The findings say Youlton was guilty of adultery with Rhoda Newell, a woman with whom he still lives.

A DARING ADVENTURER.

Capt. William A. Andrews, already famous for his daring adventures in small boats on the stormy Atlantic, has again set sail on a novel and interesting voyage.

He crossed the ocean twice before, first in the "Nautilus," when he was accompanied by his brother, who has since died, and again in the "Mermaid," both of these trips being made to Land's End, England. A few years ago he again attempted the passage in a boat called the "Dark Secret," but, after battling with contrary winds, high seas and terrific storms, he reluctantly consented to give up his efforts after a struggle of sixty-two days, and returned to America on a bark which kindly consented to take him and his sea beaten boat back to New York.

The captain is a very interesting character. He is a man of fixed purposes, very hard to turn from the object which he has in view. He has made the subject of small boat sailing such a study that he is prepared to meet every argument against the risks which spring to the minds of his critics, yet the New York Herald put the case in a nutshell when it said: "The fact that Capt. Andrews can cross the ocean in a cockle shell merely proves that small boats are safe when a Capt. Andrews sails them. Amateurs should remember this when the wind begins to sing."

The captain himself says that "half the people who are drowned lose their lives because they do not realize that a boat cannot sink. An iron vessel might, or a ship loaded with a heavy cargo, but a row boat, sail boat or ordinary wooden vessel may capsize, but will, nevertheless, float. The passengers on the great ocean steamers run some risk when they go to sea, but all around the deck they see wooden boats hung up on which they are taught to depend for their lives if the big steamer goes down. These boats are often crushed against the great vessel or are capsized in lowering. I am alone in a wooden boat entirely under my own control, and, in my opinion, far safer than others." An ingenious theory but hardly a fair one.

Capt. Andrews is by trade a piano maker. He built the "Sapolio" at Atlantic City in the presence of hundreds of people, and exhibited it on the Long Pier for several weeks. It is a canvas folding boat lined with half inch cedar and decked over with the same. In order to fold it there must be three long canvas hinges from stem to stern, and the daring Captain writes by an incoming ship (when he is hundreds of miles from shore) that he finds the "'Sapolio' in a sea-way is a scrubber but very leaky." No better proof of his coolness and pluck could be given.

The start was made at 4:30 Wednesday, July 20th, the destination being Palos, Spain. Capt. Andrews has instructions to scour the seas until he discovers that port and the starting point of Columbus. It is believed that, sailing in a fourteen foot boat without so much as a hot cup of coffee to vary his diet of biscuits and canned goods, he will, single-handed, eclipse the record of that Spanish-Italian adventurer who almost failed to cross the great ocean with three ships, 150 men, after securing the Queen's jewels to pawn and having the blessing of the Church thrown in. This Columbus is sailing in a boat which had never been in water until the hour when he started on his 4,000 mile trip. He has been spoken in mid-ocean several times, scorning all assistance and confident of ultimate success. His effort should interest all Americans as a test of pluck, endurance and good seamanship. That it is not a foolhardy affair is proved by his former success and by the notable trip in which he battled for sixty-two days without reaching the other side. Thousands of people saw the start, his presence at different points on the ocean has been noted by large numbers of vessels, and his landing on the other side will no doubt be made a matter of public demonstration and rejoicing. As he sailed from the pier he said, "In sixty days I will be in Spain," and up to the last reports he had made better time than he anticipated. Every day during the voyage a bottle will be thrown overboard noting the location and other information about the trip.

If Capt. Andrews succeeds in reaching Spain and joining in the October celebrations which will be held in honor of the discovery of America, he will then return in one of the great steamers and arrange to exhibit his boat and the log which he writes up day by day, at the World's Fair in Chicago, where he will be one of the features of the magnificent display which the manufacturers of Sapolio are now perfecting. The assurance, we might almost say the impudence, of these aggressive manufacturers in securing a Columbus of their own is probably without precedent in advertising.

The Mail From Pekin to Lassa.

A dispatch must always be carried the whole distance by one man. The best horses are procured for him to ride upon, and he never stops except to change horses, to the saddle of which he is tied. He is accompanied by two soldiers, who are changed at every station, on the arrival at which a fresh horse is always found ready, and fresh guards in attendance. The courier is untied from the horse, given a raw egg to eat, mounted and tied to a fresh horse, and proceeds on his journey. I was informed that this exceedingly hard work proves fatal to many couriers.—Through China.

AN AVERAGE GIRL.

Give me one of the average girls,
With fuss and feathers and crinkly curls,
With airs and graces and wiining wiles,
And foolish giggles and honest smiles.

Her frocks are ruffled and fluted and frilled,
And the only pocket she has is filled
With every indigestible cake
The clever confectioner knows how to bake.

Fond of posing before the glass,
Sad to say, is the average lass;
But who can blame, when a face so fair
Smiles back at her from the mirror there.

With all her vanities, still is she
As kind of heart as a girl can be,
Helping mother from dawn to dark,
And singing the while like a tuneful lark.

While washing dishes or dusting chairs,
And humming some fragment of opera airs,
She often pauses and seems to gaze
Into the future of womanhood's days.

Ah! the average woman was once a girl,
With foolish fancies and head awhirl;
Yes, the loving mother we call our own
Was one of these if the truth be known.

THE "CUSHION STORY."

What Jen Found in Her Strange Legacy.

"Going again to old Madame Skinflint's, and in this sun!"

Teddy's voice, usually a good-natured drawl, had an accent now keener and sharper than Jen was accustomed to. She was pinning on her hat in front of the kitchen mirror, while Teddy, his long legs dangling down, sat on the edge of the table, regarding his step-cousin with an expression in which surprise and annoyance were mingled. Jen's face reflected the look. She had long been used to regarding Teddy in the light of an abject slave to all her caprices, and this faint siga of disapprobation startled her.

"Well Teddy Barry!" Jen said, turning full around.

"That's the name," said the undisconcerted Ted. "I was only wondering, my child, why you wasted so much time over that old French woman. You broil yourself every day going down there to make up her room, and wash her, and cook for her, and read to her. Oh! I know, Jen, you're always back when the milk comes in to do your duty here; but what hurts me is that you seem to feel it equally your mission in life to waste your sweet strength on her."

Ted's harangue was over. He clasped his strong bronzed hands back of his head, and looked to Jen for an answer. She was a slim slip of a girl, not quite eighteen, but there was a look in her fearless gray eyes and something in the curve of her very sweet but proud young lips which made one feel instinctively that she not only had the "courage of her convictions," but she had weighed those convictions before accepting them. She was the niece of Teddy's step-uncle, old John Barry, and since her aunt's death a year ago had kept house for him. Ted, brought up with her from childhood, had just returned after a two years' absence west, to find ill health, worry of mind, and advancing age had so enfeebled his uncle that the old homestead was now in the hands of a man only waiting for his date to foreclose.

"Ted," said Jen, very gravely, "do you think if you were a poor lonely old woman, you would like to be entirely deserted? You know Mme. Dupre came here first trying to find some of her old friends. Her daughter was to have been married during the war, and the officer was shot down in battle the day set for the wedding. She was looking for his people. She couldn't find them. She is so sick and poor!"

Teddy's face was decidedly gentler in expression by this time. "Jen," he said, smiling in his slow way. "You're all right. It's only that I know how hard you work at home; and when I see you going down to spend your leisure over the French lady—well, it goes against me."

"I'll be back to tea for sure," said Jen, "because—"

As Jen hesitated, Teddy supplemented with a wicked but triumphant laugh: "Oh, Jen! Because! Does the old miser ever give you anything to eat?"

"Teddy!" Jen's eyes were grave with reproach. "Do you know she has just a very little money in an old silk glove? I take a few cents at a time, and spend it for her on the barest necessaries. There have been times my heart has ached to think I could not do more for her."

By this time the step-cousins were in the porch of the old farmhouse. It was at the back, facing the garden which they both had known and loved from childhood. Jen's bed of valley lilies, her sweet-pea vines, the long strip of box border, belonging to her earliest recollection; and where the bean poles stood near an old plum tree was the place made years ago for a special planting of radishes, which Jen, a six-year-old girl, had declared would thrive best there! Teddy and she had been so proud of that special garden given them long ago! The real farm lands stretched below—rich, fertile, beautiful to see, save for that one fact that they lay under the dreadful weight of Dall's mortgage.

"Poor old garden!" sighed Jen. "Well, Teddy, we'll have to do the best we can, I suppose, when we leave it."

Ted watched the girl's slim upright young figure down the road a few moments in silence. His western venture had proved unsuccessful, but through no fault of his. At twenty he had, sorely against his will, given up his chosen career in life—civil engineering—to settle matters on the old farm, after which he went back to the west, resuming work under hampered conditions. All his savings had been sunk in trying to extricate his uncle from his bondage. He had returned to find Hiram Dall ready and anxious to foreclose at once.

Meanwhile Jenny had reached the bridge which spanned a small brook near old Mme. Dupre's lodgings. She felt as though a step from childhood to woman's kingdom had been taken since she had learned the actual emergency which had confronted her home life, and like many another girl similarly placed the question: "What can I do?" was uppermost in her mind. There were her nimble fingers ready with the needle; there was her farming life—dairy work was a specialty with her. She was young, strong, unhampered by "nerves" or foolish fancies.

"I ought to do something," Jen thought, almost audibly, and lifted her eyes, with a deep, earnest look in them, to suddenly meet the small sharp orbs of Lawyer Dall. He, too, was crossing the little bridge.

"Well, Jenny," he half sneered, "what do you want—all the earth, and the bridge, too? Now I guess I know your errand; you're bound for madame's."

"Yes, Mr. Dall," Jen said, with an effort at composure. "I must hurry on; she is very ill."

"Oh, I know!" said the lawyer. And as Jen was hurrying on he added: "Mind you tell your uncle not to forget the 20th—it's my latest date."

Jen did not so much as turn her head to show the old man she had heard his last words, and a few moments later she was mounting the old staircase leading to Mme. Dupre's room.

Poor as the old lady really was, bare as were her surroundings, there was something about her which had always appealed to something in little Jen's nature of which she had not before been conscious. It was the refinement of the sufferer, her delicate courtesy, which showed itself in the way she accepted a kindness or tried to extend a hospitality, the latter being at present only the bright smile and outstretched hand with which Jen was welcomed.

"You are like sunshine to me, cherie," the old lady said, as Jen, according to custom, divested herself of hat and gloves and sat down by the invalid's bedside. She saw at once a change in the clear dark face. Dr. Byrnes had told her only that morning the poor lady's hours were numbered, yet Jenny, strong in youth and health, felt a keen shock from what she saw as proof of his words. Only for a moment, however. The wan face of the invalid had such a peaceful, holy calm about it—it was so content.

"There are many things I have wanted to say to-day, dear little girl," Mme. Dupre half whispered. "I have thought so much of what brought me here—to find some trace of Col. Royerson's brother. As you know, I only heard of his death. And now, Jenny, I am going to leave you what I would have given him, the one wedding present prepared for my darling Angelique. Alas, it was too late! She was ten miles away from our plantation. I had but one person to trust with it, an old negro who was faithful to us through all. I gave it to him to carry to my darling with my blessing. Well, her betrothed had been killed that day and a week later she yielded to the dreadful fever raging in New Orleans at the time. Caspar brought back the cushion—only a little cushion, child, but it shall be yours. It has been my one memento of that time."

"Dear madame," said Jennie, very gently, "do not think of what will sadden you."

"But it does not," exclaimed the old lady, softly. "Oh, no; it is my happiness. Go, my dear, to the chest of drawers; open the small one: there you will find it. We had strange ways in those hard war times," the old lady continued, as Jen, firmly convinced madame was wandering, quietly did her bidding. "It is only an old pincushion, but it could tell its story."

Jen opened the small drawer, and saw, pinned in a yellowish piece of linen, the cushion. Fashioned of faded blue and white brocade, edged with old lace, there was something about it which appeared to Jen strangely. The old "war days" were only history to eighteen-year-old Jen, and this cushion, made of what had once been a splendid fabric, might have represented revolutionary times as well as those of the early sixties. Then it had been meant for the wedding gift of Angelique, who was, from madame's stories, an ideal creature to the young girl. Jen carried the old cushion with reverent fingers to madame's bed.

"Yours, dearest," murmured the old lady. "All I have to leave you—and for that I have made my will."

Only Jen and Teddy Barry, and the people with whom Mme. Dupre had lodged, followed the old lady to her grave on the 19th. An hour later Hiram Dall was at the farmhouse, with, if possible, a more disagreeable expression than usual on his face.

"I wish you joy, Jenny," he said, with a sneer. "You are the old madame's sole heir! He! he! She sent for me to draw up the will! All for a pincushion!"

He tossed it across the table contemptuously. Jenny could scarcely control herself. She felt as though her old friend's legacy was desecrated.

"Got a running string in it, too," continued the old man, "like a bag."

Jenny was looking at the cushion with wet eyes. She had really loved the old Creole lady. Now, as Dall spoke, she looked under the lace at one side of Angelique's "one wedding gift" and saw, sure enough, the thin silken ribbon run in and tied at the end. Her loosening of the knot so long ago fastened was almost mechanical, and then—how no one present ever could exactly say, but as the brocade drew back out from the sawdust rolled upon Jenny's lap a heap of shining jewels, rubies and opals, and bank notes in what seemed to the girl an Aladdin like profusion! After all, it was easily explained. Situated as she had been, Mme. Dupre's one means of sending money and the jewels to her only child had been in this fashion. No one would suspect old Caspar of carrying such a treasure in a pincushion of faded brocade, and since Angelique's death the sentiment in the French woman's nature—perhaps a touch of superstition—had led her to keeping it intact. Who can say?

This is a true story, a chapter out of the life of one of my friends, who now, happy mistress of the bonniest farm in Connecticut, tells her children the "cushion story," and in a corner cabinet in her parlor the blue and white brocade and old lace have their especial niche. Jenny indulged in no mean triumph over old Dall when with madame's queer legacy she bought back the farm, but she and Teddy had their own hour of rejoicing, and whenever he does any specially fine piece of work in his profession Jen likes to say: "That's a bit of our cushion."—Harper's Young People.

Respectably Joined.

I once had a curate who got greatly obfuscated by the number of the bans he was called upon to publish one Sunday morning. So, when at last he got through his task, he wound up by saying: "If any of you know any just cause or impediment why all these persons may not respectably be joined together in holy matrimony, you are to declare it." Of course he meant respectively, but his mistake caused an audible titter from certain of the younger members of the congregation.—Cornhill Magazine.

—"I think," said Mrs. Top, after the concert, "that Fraulein Whacker plays with too little expression. By the way, what do you think of her technique?" "Why, to tell you the truth," replied Mrs. Scribbler, "I did not notice that she wore one."

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—Many Hungarians still make pilgrimages to the hermitage of Kossuth at Turin. The aged patriot passes most of his time in literary work, and expects to produce a voluminous history before he dies.

—Folios are now seldom found outside of atlases or editions de luxe, and the quarto is almost as uncommon. The octave generally measures 10 by 7 inches, the 12mo 8 by 6, the 16mo 6 by 3 and the 18mo 5 by 3 inches. These are the old measurements, however, and are no longer arbitrary among publishers.

—Henry Ward Beecher's widow says the great Brooklyn preacher wrote but one poem and refused to let Robert Bonner print it in the Ledger in spite of an offer of $5,000 for it. It was written in Beecher's college days at Amherst, the good lady says, and contained about as much poetry as there is in "Jack and Jill.

—Miss Giovanni Vittori has published a book entitled "Margaret of Savoy," in which she has gathered together some interesting notes on the life of that blameless queen, and quotes many poems addressed to her by Carducci and other poets, as well as descriptions of various fetes, tours and historic events at which the queen was present.

—Sidney Hinman, the life saver of Coney Island, has been informed by the authorities of Des Moines, Ia., that he is about to receive two medals for bravery in rescuing fifty-one people from their homes in the recent floods along the Des Moines and Raccoon rivers. One medal is to come from the city of Des Moines and the other from the state of Iowa.

—John A. Brashear, of Allegheny City, Pa., the astronomer and manufacturer of telescopes, was once a laborer in one of the Pittsburgh iron mills. His talents came to the attention of Mr. Henry Phipps, the millionaire, who persuaded him to give up puddling and devote himself to astronomy. He was for years a lecturer in this science in the Western Pennsylvania university.

—Punctuation points are comparatively modern. Only the period is more than five hundred years old. The colon is reputed to date from 1485, the comma about 1520, the semicolon about 1570, and others have been gradually added. It is obvious, then, that writing, printing and other orthographic arts might dispense in our day with many of their marks of punctuation and lose nothing of the sense.

—The greatest praise of the late Lady Waterford's artistic gifts has been given by Mr. Watts. In an interview the celebrated painter said: "Our time has only produced some twenty real artists, and Lady Waterford was one of the greatest among them. In coloring she is a Tintoretto, and in the grace and ease with which she threw her figures on the canvas she equals the greatest masters. I am as a child compared to her, though I have painted all my life."

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Raspberry Vinegar: Put two quarts of raspberries in a stone jar and pour a quart of good cider vinegar over them, let them stand for two days, drain off and pour over a half gallon of fresh raspberries, let stand as before, strain and add a pound of sugar to every pint of juice, boil ten minutes; bottle and seal ready for use.—Home Magazine.

—French Salad Dressing: Take one teacupful of vinegar, one teaspoonful of salad oil or the same quantity of fresh butter; a pinch of mustard, one of salt and a tablespoonful of sugar. Let these simmer over the fire while you beat two eggs thoroughly. Then stir the eggs into the other ingredients, taking care that they do not boil. It should present a smooth, velvety appearance.—Christian Inquirer.

—Veal Rissoles: Chop fine cold veal, season with salt and pepper; to one pint of chopped meat allow one cupful of bread crumbs, two spoonfuls of chopped parsley, if eggs are plenty use three, leaving out the whites of two of them, beat the yolks and the white of one and stir into the mixture, make into balls, dip into the whites of the two eggs, then into the dry bread crumbs which have been rolled fine, fry in a kettle of hot suet.—N. Y. Observer.

—Rice and Apple Souffle: Boil two tablespoonfuls of rice in a half pint of milk; when soft add the yolks of two eggs, and sugar to sweeten; make a wall with it around the sides of the dish. Stew some pared and cored apples until soft, fill up the apertures in the apples with red current jelly, pile them in the center of the dish, and cover the whole with the whites of two eggs beaten to a stiff froth, and made very sweet with white sugar. Brown in the oven, and serve with cream.—Good Housekeeping.

—Pineapple Ice: Select two ripe pineapples, and to them allow a quart of clarified sugar and a lemon. Pare and grate the pineapples, and press the pulp, of which there should be not less than a quart, through a sieve. A small quantity of the pineapple should be reserved to be finely sliced and added to the ice when half frozen. Stir the pineapple pulp into the clarified sugar and lemon juice, and freeze. When frozen, add the whites of two eggs which have been previously beaten to a firm snow and mixed with four tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar; mix them thoroughly into the ice with a spatula, and set it away to harden.—Good Housekeeping.

COMBINATION COSTUMES.

Pretty Things Made up of Plain And Striped Materials.

Among the latest revived ideas is a combination costume made of plain and striped material, either all silk or wool, or made up together. An example of this idea is shown in a reception dress of satin striped moire and plain satin. The moire is made in a bell skirt with a train and a very closely-fitted waist, a long outside garment, a compromise between a basque and a redingote, and has plain, square fronts, which extend two-thirds of the distance from waistline to hem. The backs are shorter, covering only about one-half of the length of the skirt. A fitted bodice of the satin is laced in front from waist-line to a point about midway of the bust. From here, sections of the material in rever fashion fall over the shoulders, turning back from a point midway between the sleeves and the collar; the sleeves are very full from shoulders to elbows, below this fitting the arm closely. This redingote bodice has the edges trimmed with a very fluffy trimming made of loops of silk, somewhat after the fashion of the old-time moss-trimming.

A similar model is shown in striped and plain suiting. This has a short skirt and is intended for a very stylish traveling-dress.

A novelty is a bodice with draped sections from the sleeves across the front and back. These sections are gathered into a puff over the bust, form fluffy epaulets at the shoulders, and are made as flat as possible at the back; but this style is neither pretty nor becoming. It gives a suggestion of round shoulders, and is not at all symmetrical.

No costume is in good taste which has any special prominence over the shoulder-blades. Such an arrangement always destroys the graceful lines of a good figure, and makes a bad or indifferent one simply hideous. The utmost flatness should be preserved from the tops of the shoulders down the back to the waist-line. Any attempt at this sort of trimming must be disposed with the greatest care, or the effect of the most beautiful costume is easily marred.—N. Y. Ledger.

Fads in Jewelry.

The fashion of the moment in jewels is to mount the pins and stars and floral sprays on a black or red satin ribbon arranged across the front of the bodice from right to left. Tiaras are less worn than formerly by ladies of high degree. The coronet is despoiled of its diamond stars, which appear in more modest arrangement in a comb, or pins studded here and there through the hair. "Creole" or hoop earrings are taking the place of cluster or solitaire earrings, where earrings are worn at all. Worth's latest novelty is a necklet to wear out of doors, which is made of pearls, the best imitation, strung on silver cord, with a knot between each pearl, and finished, oddly enough, with jet tassels.—N. Y. Sun.

Ways of Cooking the Banana.

The people of this country do not yet know how to use the banana. In the tropical climates, where the banana furnishes the principal article of diet the inhabitants have found numerous methods of utilizing this delicious fruit, which render it at once nutritious and palatable. They boil it, they bake it, as we do sweet potatoes, they peel it, cut it in slices and fry it in a batter, they mash it into a paste and dry it in the sun, as we do apples and peaches. They make it into puddings, pies, comfits and preserves, and even smother it in sugar until it is a candied fruit. In every one of these ways it is both pleasant to the taste and wholesome as an article of food.—Toledo Blade.

Late Mantles.

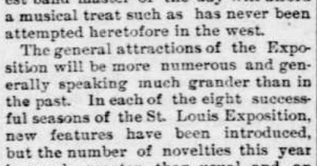
Capes of crepon lined with silk are considered suitable for the deepest mourning. There are also mantles of English crape lined with thin silk, made quite short, reaching merely to the waist-line, and trimmed with a plaited collarette of crape. Sometimes embroidered crape is used for the trimming. A jacket of the material of the dress or of silk covered smoothly with English crape is worn in the first mourning with dresses of Henrietta cloth or of crepon.—Harper's Bazar.

ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION.

All Arrangements Complete for the Grand Opening on Wednesday.

Gilmore's Band to Open the Exposition and Give Four Concerts Daily—Continued Success of the Street Illuminations—Excursions Daily.

St. Louis, Sept. 1, 1892.—The grand street illuminations were repeated to-night, and the throngs on the streets were larger than ever. The electrical panorama proved a perfect success, all necessary power being now available, and the street arches and clusters were regarded generally as brilliant beyond description. Visitors are arriving daily from all sections, and an unusually large number of European tourists are making St. Louis their objective point. Excursions are being run from a large number of cities, and everything points to sustained interest in the carnival right through the entire forty days of the festivities. The city will be illuminated again on Saturday evening, and also on Monday, the other dates announced including September 15, 22 and 29, and October 1, 4, 6, 13 and 20.



P. S. Gilmore.

The exhibits which form the feature of the ninth annual exposition are now in perfect order for the opening next Wednesday, when Gilmore's band with 100 pieces will give a grand concert, which will be attended not only by thousands of visitors, but also by the governors of Missouri and other states, each accompanied by a large suite. As Gilmore's New York engagement does not terminate until Tuesday morning, it has been necessary to charter a special train to bring him here in time for the opening on the evening of September 7. The train will bring the largest as well as the finest band ever heard in the west, and it is safe to say that the playing of one hundred skilled musicians under the leadership of the greatest band master of the day will afford a musical treat such as has never been attempted heretofore in the west.

The general attractions of the Exposition will be more numerous and generally speaking much grander than in the past. In each of the eight successful seasons of the St. Louis Exposition, new features have been introduced, but the number of novelties this year is much greater than usual and an immense increase in attendance is anticipated. The art display is a very grand one, and the electrical and mechanical departments also promise unwonted attractions. The management announces that an inclusive fee of 25 cents will admit to all parts of the exposition, including the great Gilmore concerts.

Persistency is a great virtue, but it is hard to admire it in a fly.

DELANO DIARY

—The Republican caucus will be held at the City Hall, on Saturday evening.

—J. T. Hanna now has his hotel the Danforth House running, in good shape, and solicits his share of the traveling trade.

—Thomas Shaw vs. J. W. Parsons was before Justice Catlin on Monday, and on request of the defendant adjourned for one week.

—The new baker has arrived from Buffalo, and Delano will now have an addition to her industries of which she has long felt the need.

—Delegates to the Democratic County convention coming over the "Soo" road will, we are informed, be met at Rockford station by teams which will convey them to Delano and return them to the station free of charge.

—Be on hand at the Democratic caucus, at city hall, on Wednesday evening to help select delegates to attend the county convention on Friday evening the 16th.

—Mrs. James Desmond, of Superior, Wis., sister of D. Gorman, Miss Lydia Harrison, of Davenport and Miss Gorman of Maple Lake, have been visiting at Dave Gorman's for a short time, and left for home yesterday.—Litchfield Independent.

—On Saturday, after dinner, the guests at Young's Hotel were highly entertained by instrumental music furnished by W. W. Holcomb, violin; George Blackwell, organ and Peter Peterson, claronet; after which W. W. Holcomb rendered a couple of songs, "He Didn't Split the Wood" and "He Never Came Back," in his best style, which is all that need be said except that he was highly applauded.

—A North Dakota editor writes: The polititon is my shepherd, I shall not want for anything during the campaign. He ledeth me into the saloon for my vote's sake. He filleth my pocket with good cigars and my beer glass runneth over. He enquireth concerning the health of my family, even unto the fourth generation. Yea, though I walk through the mud and rain to vote for him and shout myself hoarse when he is elected, he straightway forgetteth me. Yea, though I meet him in his own office he knoweth me not. Surely the wool has been pulled over my eyes all the days of my life.

—The lecture and stereopticon views of Chinese places, and people, at the city hall on Friday evening was well worth seeing. A person might travel over China several years before they would see the same sights and learn as much of them as Rev. W. J. Foo Shun, tells in a couple of hours. Some of the young ladies thought him a little severe in his criticims of American ladies' styles and manners, especially when he suggested that the Chinese ladies tied their daughters feet up to keep them at home, and it might be well to adopt that plan here in some cases. Also that because their mouths were so beautifully small they could not sing so well as American girls.

—Several of the leading, and oldest farmers in our vicinity persist in saying that had their wheat and other small grain been pounded into the ground by hail they would have been as well off as they are now, owing to the expense of gathering and taking care of their crops. When expostulated with upon the subject they argued that they had sufficient old wheat on hand to bread them for a year any way, and, as it costs them about 70 cents per bushel to harvest and get their grain ready for market, and then they can get but 52 and 54 cents for the grade it turns out to be it does look a little discouraging to the wheat raiser. But every bushel saved helps reduce the price to the buyers. It is better to have wheat enough for all to eat anyway.

—"Harrison, Reid and Protection.
Protection banner guard our land,
From England's greed and pauper pay,
And when I play Great Britains hand
Please take me for blooming Jay."

The above inscription confronted the citizens of our village on Monday, emblazoned on a tin plate but little larger than a silver dollar, and dangling from the bossom of the local editor of the newspaper up street, and which went to show that he was in accord with the senior in the zeal displayed for his adopted country. He having become an American citizen but a couple of years ago by foreswearing allegiance to that venerable old lady, Queen Victoria. After having his attention called to the matter he very properly gave the bauble to the children for a play thing.

—Read the synopsis of Harrison's letter of acceptance, on the inside of this paper.

—Social at the M. E. parsonage on Saturday (tomorrow) evening rt 8 p. m. If the weather is suitable ice cream will be served out of doors. All are invited to be present.

—Johnson's Cidar Vinegar for pickling purposes is the best in the market. Warranted absolutely pure. Three years old. For sale by C. H. GREEN & Co.

Personals.

John Kelly, and Miss Barrett, of Waverly, were among Delano visitors yesterday.

J. B. Light and wife of Watertown were transacting business in town on Thursday.

Mr. Fuller, of Lacrosse, Wis., is visiting with his sister, Mrs. W. D. Freeman.

Conductor Albert Kurtz, of the Soo road, made his periodical trip to Delano, this week.

J. Leuzinger and son, of Montrose, visited Delano Monday, on business.

Mastin Conzet, of Greenwood, was in Friday in time to see a pretty good chunk of "pi."

W. W. Holcomb, of St. Paul, smiled on the Delano people on Saturday.

Arthur Johnson, of Morris, visited with his mother here this week.

Henry Iniwie, of Hanover, was over to see old friends in Delano on Wednesday.

Miss Carrie Galley, of Royalton, visited Delano folks this week.

Phillip and John Leudasher were among those leaving for the west this week.

Bradford brothers, with their threshing machine and crew, have gone to Dakota.

Hon. C. G. Halgren, and children, Lottie and Archie, of Watertown, visited Delano on Friday.

Miss Stella Jacobs went to Minneapolis Saturday afternoon where she will attend school the coming winter.

Harvey Halgren, on his way to the cities yesterday, was accompanied this far by his brother Guy.

Miss Nellie O'Leary visited Delano this week looking after her mother's interest in the farm.

Messrs. Culkin, Alley and Mr. and Mrs. Frazee, of Buffalo, attended the rally on Tuesday evening.

Earl Holsington, of Independence, was up to hear the Republican speeches. He says "It is the same old rot."

John Kennedy, of Woodland, who has been mentioned as an aspirant for the commissioner ship from this district, was in town yesterday.

County Cullings.

C. J. Buckley went to Annandale Thursday. Possibly in the interests of his candidancy for Sheriff.

French, of the Times, calls Gutzweller "Judas Iscariot." Why didn't he nominate him for Treasurer at once.

Send your best men to the Democratic convention on Friday, the 16th inst., and let them make a ticket that will win.

From the tone of the Republican press in the county it would appear that the editors don't exactly agree with Chairman Culkin, as to the perfect peace and harmony. The Times is calling Gutzwiller "Judas Iscariot" the Eagle calls French "dog's tail." The Journal says "Shaw" boys to the Howard editors and the Herald accuses A. Y. Eaton of being mad. With such leaders it is no wonder people are leaving the Republican party.

Red-topped boots are cheaper now than they were 40 years ago, says Gutzwiller.

Shoes are cheaper here than in England to day, says Buckley.

Print paper that over thirty years ago cost $8 per hundred can now be bought for $3.20 per hundred says Gutzwiller.

Possibly if the Alps head of the bicephalous bird would consult his fellow from merry England he would find the same thing holds good concerning paper as in shoes.

THE following incident is given us by a Hennepin county correspondent:

A peripatetic school ma'am, who affirmed that she had walked a thousand miles since the first of July trying to get the Republican nomination for school superintendent, came to the door of Harmonia Hall, Minneapolis, on convention day, looked in, and enquired for H. B. McConnell, saying she would like to make a trade with him; but as that genial gentleman could not be readily found in the great crowd, she hurried away, declaring that she never could endure to tarry where there were so many "horrid" men. It is said that she offered Bayard T. Shaver the position of assistant superintendent if he would withdraw in her favor, but he courteously declined the offer. Both McConnell and Shaver probably regret now that they did not step aside months ago and give her the field.

Hennepin County Schools.

The people of Hennepin county are greatly enraged at the action of the late convention in going back on their promises to vote for the nomination of Bayard T. Shaver, for Superintendent of Schools. The action of the convention will defeat the party. No party can afford to disregard the expressed wish of the people in such a way. Defeat is sure to follow.

John H. McGary, and Martin Conzet have been accused of voting for Mrs. Beede for Superintendent of Schools in the late nominating convention in Minneapolis, but they received James A. Lewis' ballots from the hand of the writer and dropped them into the hat with the names up. Both the gentlemen here referred to hold Mrs. Beede in very high esteem, and, I believe, are favorable to her appointments as assistant superintendent; but no one among the thousands of people in Hennepin county who hope to see Prof. Lewis continue in office is more enthusiastically in favor of his re-election than John McGary and Martin Conzet.

The patrons of school district 53, having become suspicious of the qualifications of their teacher, Miss Ella Meeke, to whom they have been paying enormous wages, and who is re-engaged for the coming year at a greatly reduced salary, have presented to the school board of that district a very numerously signed petition asking that the opening of the school be deferred until Miss Meeke has been examined by Prof. James A. Lewis himself, her papers regularly filed in the office of the supersntendent of schools, and a first-grade certificate issued. Miss Meeke has long been known as one of the best teachers in the state and the action of the people of her district has occasioned a great deal of gossip in educational circles. The petitioners claim that the certificate that she has been teaching under was granted by McConnell through favoriteism, and the school board are liable to have to refund every dollar of the money paid to her thus far. They also claim that her mind has been too much given to subjects foreign to her work in the school room, of late, such as politics, fine dresses, matrimony, etc., ete.

COR.

HISTORICAL FACTS.

Pioneer Days In The Region North of Lake Minnetonka.

Written for the BUFFALO GAZETTE, by HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

INDEPENDENCE.

During the Indian troubles of 1862-3 a stockade was erected in section 31, on the premises of Jacob Rader, as a place of refuge for the people of that locality, and elsewhere in case of a raid from the Indians. There was also a stockade erected at Watertown and at various other points in the Big Woods, and on the extensive prairie beyond.

Names of soldiers from Independence:

Frank S. Coffin, Rob't B. Coffin, Wm. Batdorf (died at Helena, Ark., Sept. 9, 1864), Marcus Brownell, James C. Brandon, (died at Montgomery, Ala., July 5, 1864), Daniel S. Styner, John C. Shrewsbury (died at Forest City, Minn., Dec. 9, 1862), George Goodsell, James Rickeson, Francis Sutton, Christopher Wilcut, C. C. Berkman, Wm. Pagenkopf—McKee, John Batdorf, Wm. W. Mills, E. Brandon, George Hoisington, Earl Hoisington, John A. McGary, John Reiffenberger, Nicholas Reiffenberger, Hilarius Schumacher, Timothy Shaw, A. Weidenback, C. R. Carleton, Allen B. Hosmer, John A. Wasson, George W. Terwall, Matthias Weidenback, W. Kissinger, Hollis Hall, Timothy O'Leary.

MEDINA.

In 1860 the Free Thinkers Club was organized, with a membership extending into Plymouth, Independence and Greenwood and other localities, amongst which were the Wolsfield brothers, Bernard Gasper, Dennis Schmidt, John Gerber, John Schmidtz, Martin Conzet, Casper Friess, Henry Faue, J. P. Meurer. In 1868 this society established a cemetary at Bernard Gaspers, and in 1874, they built a hall at Long Lake, which has since passed out of their hands into the possession of the towns of Medina and Orono successively.

During the winter of 1862-3 a number of Germans organized themselves into a Catholic congregation, and in 1863, erected a church on the lands donated by Mathias Hansman and Jas Lenzen, and others. It is the same congregation that still hold services in the church building, at Ditter post office. The first church edifice was a log structure, and was used for religious services till 1876, when the present structure was erected and opened for that purpose, the original being still used for school purposes. In 1862 the Catholic congregation of St. Paul's and St. Peter's church was organized, when a small church building was erected. The present one was built in 1867, and is located one mile southeast of the present village of Loretto.

Soldiers of Medina: Joseph N. Hutchinson, Adolph Butz, Joseph Burchfield, David Maxon. Fred Mohrman, Peter Beledo (died at Pine Bluff, Ark., Oct. 4, 1864), Chas. Barkow, Luman Putnam, John Gerber, Carl A. Hamisch, Leo Stumpf, Frank Arens, B. Schockweiler. Benj. Maxon, Peter Miller Chas. Wolsfield, N. G. Leighton, John Hollander, Nicholas Miller, Benj. Maxon, Romain Poulliotte, Henry Faue, Peter Hoppe, John J. Spurzem, John Gerber.

ORONO.

In 1859-60, Rev. Geo. Galpin, conducted services at George Knettle's. He and Rev. Chas. Galpin were brothers. In 1861, Union Cemetery Association was organized, and its grounds on Long Lake was then purchased and laid out. The grave of Elmer E., infant son of Bradford Wakefield, was the first interal at that place, occurring March, 1862.

During 1860-1, the township school superintendent law was in existance, and Bradford Wakefield was superintendent for Medina, which then included a part of Orono, and under whom several school districts were established, viz: The north part of Long Lake district with school house on North Watertown road, the Reiser district and other disiricts. In arranging some of these districts the cooperation of the Rev. C. B. Shelden, Supt. of Excelsior was necessary, on account of involving territory in both towns, In 1871 John A. Coleman became post master of Tamarack post office, and Wayzetta post office was discontinued. Tamarack post office was then removed to the present site of Long Lake from Henry Stubbs'.

The following parties were also soldiers from Orono:

Chas. H. Parrish, Edwin M. Snow, Andrew Cruikshank, Ronold Cruikshank, Danel T. Thompson, Chas W. Gordon, Joseph L. Brown, Franklin N. Flemming.

In 1665, Mrs. Maria B. Perry, widowed sister of the Christlieb brothers settled within the present limits of Orono. Samuel Perry, deceased was her son.

WAYZETTA.

In 1860 Rev. Charles Galpin, of Excelsior, built the first steamboat on Lake Minnetonka, and named it "Gov. Ramsay" in honor of Alexander Ramsay, who was then governor of the state, having been also the first territorial governor. It was a side-wheeler but operated with but one engine. The "Governor Ramsay plied between Excelsior and Wayzetta and other points on the lake and under a favorable stage of water, navigated into upper Minnetonka and also down the outlet to Minnetonka City, now Minnetonka Mills. The connection between upper and lower Minnetonka was by a short but crooked stream and it required considerable skill on the part of the crew of the Gov. Ramsay (Rev. Galpin and his engineer) to navigate the craft through the stream.

Also in 1860, Henry VanValkenburg came to Wayzetta and commenced the manufacture of potash, buying and collecting ashes from the clearings of settlers, there being no other disposition of the timber than to roll it together in great log heaps and burn it. This industry continued at Wayzetta for a few years in which VanValkenburg was assisted by Mr. Randall, of Silver Lake. Wm. Dudley carried on blacksmithing. Hoagland and family of which Henry L., Louis, Fred and Charles were members. Soldiers: George H. Dayt, C. R. Simpson, Ephrain Harrington, Wm. H. Harrington, Olliver H. Dennis, Frank M. Harrington (died from wound at Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 24, 1864), James N. Dudley, Wm. Bushnell, St. Don. Palmer, Amasa K. Richards, B. F. Keesling.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage duly made, executed and delivered by G. O. Trow and his wife Abbie Trow, as mortgagors, to George E. Bull as mortgagee, bearing date the first day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty seven (1887) with a power of sale therein contained, which mortgage was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Wright and State of Minnesota on the twenty-second (22) day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven (1887), at nine (9) o'clock a. m. in book four (4) of mortgages on page one (1).

Whereas said mortgage was given to secure the payment at maturity of the sum of nine hundred ($900) dollars with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, according to the conditions of ten (10) cupon notes bearing even dates with said mortgage. Whereas said mortgagee did on the 24th day of April 1892 pay taxes for the years 1890 and 1891 then due and unpaid as follows, to-wit: For the year 1890 the sum of ten dollars and seventy eight cents, for the year 1891, the sum of thirty-nine dollars and forty-eight cents, which sum is also claimed to be recovered as an additional lean on said lands and whereas there is claimed to be due and there is due and unpaid on said mortgage and on the notes secured thereby at the date of this notice the sum of ten hundred and sixty-two dollars and seventy cents ($1062.70) principle and interest besides the taxes paid as aforesaid, and interest on said taxes amounting to the sum of one dollar and forty cents and whereas no proceedings at law or in equity has been instituted to recover said mortgage debt or taxes as aforesaid, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage to-wit: Lot number one (1) and block number thirteen (13) situated in the village of Cokato, Wright county, Minnesota, according to the duly recorded plat of record, in the Register of Deeds office in and for the county of Wright and state of Minnesota, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Wright county at the front door of the court house in the village of Buffalo in said county on Thursday, the twenty-ninth (29) day of September, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two (1892) at two o'clock p. m. at public vendue to the highest bidder, for cash, to pay said mortgage debt, principle and interest and taxes paid as aforesaid with costs of these proceedings, together with the sum of thirty-five ($35) dollars attorney's fee stipulated in said mortgage to be paid in case of foreclosure.

Dated August 10, 1892.

GEO. E. BULL, mortgagee,
A. G. SEXTON, Cokato,
Attorney for Mortgagee

THE SONG OF THE '9No. 9.'

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch:
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

Wright county—36.
Sherburne county—5.

Dated at Waverly on the 31st day of Agust 1892.

WILLIAM QUINN, Chairman Legislative Committee.

Reciprocity Reconings.

Reciprocity is understood to be the exchanging of products, goods and wares by mutual consent between two countries, and to the advantage of each country. This far it comes up to the Democratic idea of doing business. But the Republican reciprocity appears to extend mostly to a few countries of South America, and a few islands of the sea the privilege of exchanging their merchandise with us on something like equal terms. On the inhabitants of Europe they claim to lay tariff duties sufficient to run our Government. We are informed by General Sheridan, in his great opening speech of the Minnesota Republican campaign, in Minneapolis, a few weeks ago, that, "Last year we raised $392,000,000. Of this amount we raised nearly $220,000,000 through the custom-houses." The General admits that this tax is raised in our custom houses to help run our Government. (A few Republicans about here try to claim that it is not a tax) but the General was recently in London and bought a suit of clothes, so he informed his audience, consequently is able to speak from experience. McKinley, the father of the latest raise on the tariff, admits the same thing, but in his Minneapolis speech (or the Republican National Convention he is reported as saying, that we do not pay the tariff ourselves but the foreigners pay it for us.

The inhabitants then of Europe pay our taxes, mostly, according to McKinley, pay the bills of $220,000,000, per annum according to Republican statements to run our Government. Democrats don't believe that foreigners pay this, but claim that those persons using the goods, the families who eat or wear or use articles made in Europe and sold here pay the tariff. That we pay them ourselves. But if the Republicans think they can carry Minnesota this year on this issue, by trying to make our citizens most of whom came from Europe themselves, a few years ago, believe that their friends at home are being taxed $220,000,000 a year to run our great and glorious country, we think they will find out their mistake as soon as the first week in November, at least. It is rediculous on the face of it, and requires considerable cheek to stand up and tell the majority of voters throughout Minnesota that $220,000,000 of money is being raised from the scanty purses of their fathers, in Norway and Sweden, in England and down trodden Ireland, in Wales, Scotland, little Belgium, independent Switzerland, from starving Russia, from Germany, France, Austria, Holland and from all over the continent. It is certainly a great undertaking for young men just turned out of college and for prominent politicians to face an audience like the average Minnesota political gathering; in many instances three-fourths or more foreigners. Men who have come to this country to better their condition; and boast that they have been able to realize their expectations, thanks to the productiveness of the soil and other national resources, rather than to protective tariffs, and tell them that their old gray headed fathers and mothers their sisters and brothers are still working at the trades and occupations they were engaged in ten, twenty or forty years ago, when they bid them a good bye and started for America, and living on food, in many instances insufficient for their wants, wearing clothing too meager to shelter them from the storms, and that we in our plenty, rather than send them our finest wheat flour, potatoes and other vegetables and meats in exchange for the products of their hands, and machines; on equal terms, like kinsmen should, shall vote to keep up the "Chinese wall," of protective tariff to our "infant industries" to the highest pitch it has ever been, even when our war debt was very much larger than now, and instead of paying this tariff from our own pockets as Democrats claim we are doing, that we are taxing it up to our relatives and friends in the old country. Most of our naturalized American citizens have family pride enough about them, and respect for their aged parents and friends to at once disclaim the truthfulness of such assertions as that our tariff taxes are paid by their friends at home. Or if they believe they are, they are certainly very unnatural children to permit such a burden as $220,000,000 to be imposed upon "the pauper labor of Europe" as Republicans are fond of calling the working people of the old countries and to which class many of the most respected of our citizens to-day are related by the ties of family and by friendship. If Democrats are right we pay this $220,000,000 ourselves, mostly. If Republicans are telling the truth the relatives of Minnesota's foreign population are contributing no small share toward filling Uncle Sam's coffers, while they themselves are, according to Republican authority, faring sumptiously every day.

Republican County Convention.

The Republicans held their County Convention at Buffalo on Wednesday, W. E. Culkin was selected as chairman of the meeting, and W. H. Towle, secretary. The convention, to all appearance, passed off quite pleasantly. Mr. Westinghouse submitting gracefully to defeat in the first round to F. B. Lamson, with whom he shook hands good naturedly and wished success.

Nathan Warner, that old time wheel hourse and staunch supporter of A. Y. Eaton, giving way at the first fire to Thomas McLeod, of Otsego, who seems to have been a stalwart. For register of deeds there seemed to be no opposition to the young post master from Maple Lake. For judge of probate, Mr. Tarbox, of Monticello, surrendered his chances to what he found to be the inevitable without a vote, and Judge Alley accepted the nomination by acclimation for the 4th time in a few patriotic remarks. Mr. Tarbox said Alley was put on to the ticket to "strengthen it."

For sheriff, Franklin's young man with the new "grand pa's hat" got left and the county seat raked in the chances to beat Nugent. Geo. said "you all know what you have to contend with." County Attorney found a willing victim in W. E. Culkin, who will probably again go through the Cutting process of two years ago. He could not refrain from slurring his opponent who was present in the room in a fashion that many objected to and will probably resent at the polls. For superintendent of schools, there was no opposition, surveyor, ditto. For coroner, Dr. Ridgway and Dr. Shrader, each refused to make the run, when French, of Monticello, nominated his fellow townsman, Dr. Wakefield. Court commissioner fell to S. A. Putnam without opposition.

Auditor, F. B. Lamson.
Treasurer, Thomas McLeod.
Register of Deeds, A. A. Jewell.
Judge of Probate, J. T. Alley.
Sheriff, George Carpenter.
County Attorney, W. E. Culkin.
Superintendent of Schools, F. H. Lindsley.
Surveyor, H. T. Moland.
Coroner, Dr. S. L. Wakefield.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Sept. 9, 1892

Mr. Harrison's letter of acceptance was a very decided innovation in that line. It breaks all precedents and instead of being a letter of acceptance pure and simple, it is, in addition, a carefully and skillfully prepared lawyer's plea for the Republican party in general and the Harrison administration in particular, and like other able lawyers' pleas it is liable to impose on those who are not familiar, and who will not take the trouble to familiarize themselves with the other side. It shows, too, that the stories which have from time to time been told of Mr. Harrison's intention to individually boss the Republican side of the campaign were all founded on the solid truth. The intention has become a fact, and today Mr. Harrison is the acknowledged boss of the Republican National committee, which is conducting the campaign according to his orders. It is known here that the publication of the letter of acceptance this week was directly against the wishes of Chairman Carter and a number of the working members of the committee; they wanted it held back at least a month, but boss Benjamin ordered it given out, and given out it was.

Mr Harrison's attempt to dodge the Force bill issue in such a way as to leave the impression upon those who favor that outrage upon constitutional liberty that he is still with them—as he really is, heart and soul—that he has abandoned it, is like most efforts of a similar nature—supremely ridiculous, and meets only with meaning smiles in every quarter. Democrats and Republicans alike know just where Mr. Harrison stands upon this question: that, if he be re-elected and the next House of Representatives be controlled by the Republicans, he will in his first message to the Fifty-third Congress ask that a bill similar to the notorious Lodge bill of the Fifty-first Congress be passed. There is only one way for this county to escape the horrors of the force bill, which in one section of the country would be as bad as a visitation of the cholera, and that is to defeat Benjamin Harrison and the Republican party.

Mr. Blaine's letter, made public the day after that of Mr. Harrison, fell like a wet blanket upon the candidate's pronunciamento. It nullified about half of Mr. Harrison's letter by advising the Republicans to ignore all issues, except three in the campaign, and worse than all, for Benjaman, the great—in' his own estimation—it nowhere mentioned Mr. Harrison's name. No Republican with whom I have talked has a doubt about this slight to the head of the Republican ticket being deliberate and intentional on the part of Mr. Blaine. It is a slight, too, that Mr. Harrison dare not resent at this time; but you may be sure that he will try to "get even" after the election, which ever way it goes, by jumping on the Blaine Republicans wherever he finds them.

The milk in the cocoanut, concerning the application of the Inman Line Steamship Company for American registry for two of their best steamers, which was granted at the last session of Congress, was exposed when the bids for carrying ocean mails, under the mail subsidy act of the billion-dollar Congress, were this week opened by Mr. Wanamaker. The Inman Line, under its new American name—The International Navigation Company, of Philadelphia—adopted, solely with the idea of getting a slice of this subsidy, was the only company that put in a bid for the European service, and the only company that proposes to carry the mails in vessels of first class. It put in two bids, and Mr. Wanamaker says they will both be accepted. Each of them is for weekly service and in each the compensation asked is $1 per mile. Multiply the number of miles across the Atlantic by four and the result by 101 and a sum of money is piled up that fully explains the desire of the stockholders in this company to change the flag over such of their ships as they could get subsidized so highly. Some people have said that Mr. Wanamaker had some very near friends who were allowed to purchase stock in the reorganized company at a nominal price, but, of course, that had no influence in the deal.

Representative Catchings, of the Mississippi, is in Washington. He says the Democrats will not lose a single electoral vote in the South, and that the People's party will not have as many members in the next as they have in present House. He figures on a Democratic majority of between forty and fifty in the next House.

CORRESPONDENCE

WAVERLY WISDOM.

Chairman Wm. Quinn was in Montrose Friday evening making the necessary arrangements for the organization of a Democratic club. Montrose is a good field for such an organization, having some staunch Democrats and a big missionary circle in which to make known the true Jeffersonian doctrine. May the conversions be many.

Miss Kate Maidoon, the milliner, was in the cities last week purchasing the latest novelties in ladies' hats.

Mr. John Kennedy, of Woodland, made a business trip to Delano last Thursday.

Mr. David Jackson, one of Hanover's solid Democrats, was in our village Friday. Mr. Jackson believes firmly that Grover Cleveland will be elected by an overwhelming majority; he also predicts the election of Dan Lawler for Governor.

John Quinn is looked upon as being a good authority in sporting circles. He predicted the "annihilation" of Sullivan and was a Corbett man from the start.

Mr. Louis Kommers left last week for McCauleyville.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lally, who have been in Chicago during the past month, returned home last Thursday.

Mr. Arthur J. Demers returned home last week from Canada, after enjoying a three weeks visit with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dougherty, of Marysville, are rejoicing over the arrival of a brand new baby girl which came to their home last Saturday.

Matt Cech, of the firm of C. Gotzian & Co., who has been visiting his parents in Woodland during the past week, left for his home in St. Paul Monday.

Chas. Bugbee, one of the solid and prominent Democrats of Rockford, was in our village Monday.

Messrs. L. V. Kyte, Ed. Robarge and E. H. Learned were the delegates from Woodland who attended the county convention at Buffalo Wednesday.

The public school re-opens for the fall term on Monday, September 26. Mr. Stapleton is the principal and Miss Eliza Jordan primary teacher. We understand that the school board are making an effort to raise the standard and expect a general supervision in every detail that tends toward making the school equal to any of our neighboring villages. This is the right spirit in starting out and should be continued during the entire term. Parents should take more interest in school matters than they usually do. It is their duty to see that their children attend regularly, and if they find anything not going as they would wish, report it immediately to the proper authorities and have the wrong corrected. With teachers, parents and school officers doing their respective parts, it may be safely said that the Waverly public school will witness this term that progress and advancement which will be the joy of every parent in the district. By all means let us have a good public school.

Miss Annie Cruzen and Miss Georgie Parker left the beginning of the week to attend the Excelsior College.

Mr. J. K. Cullen and Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Kelly went to Minneapolis Tuesday to attend the marriage of a relative.

The Populists of this county have concluded to put up a county and legislative ticket and will accordingly hold a convention in Maple Lake on the 28th of this month.

The Democrats of Marysville held a caucus in this village Tuesday evening and elected Wm. Quinn, James F. McDonnell, John Kelly, D. W. Flannigan, W. J. Walsh and H. C. Morneau delegates to the county convention to be held in Delano Friday.

The village council held their regular monthly meeting Monday evening.

The Woodland delegates to the Democratic convention are John Kennedy, Charles O'Hara, John Young, T. J. Coyne and Jams Powell.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cullen, last night, a boy.

MAPLE PLAIN.

Miss Ella Hardt, daughter of Julius Hardt, propritor of the Star Hotel, returned this week from a two months stay at Ledgerwood, N. D., in time to attend her mother's birthday party last Wednesday. About twenty ladies were present, and Mrs. Hardt was the recipient of many beautiful presents.

A large crew of men have been working the county roads in this vicinity during the week. The forepart of the week they completed a culvert on the Watertown road. They are now constructing a culvert between Maple Plain and Armstrong. County Commissioner William Chowen was inspecting the work on Wednesday.

Mrs. A. S. Beede, of Greenwood, the well known school teacher, was in town the forepart of the week. Mrs. Beede is very much discussed just now in connection with the office of Superintendent of Schools. A very general sentiment prevails throughout the country that Mrs. Beede should be connected with that office in some capacity. The installation of this noble Christian lady as assistant to Prof. James A. Lewis would add great dignity and efficiency to the office of superintendent of schools in Hennepin county, though no one, not even McConnell, pretends to find fault with the services rendered by Prof. Lewis himself.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

The late heavy rains gave us some more bad roads, wet up the grain stacks and filled up the low meadows, so the prospect for haying on them is not very good. Should we have much more rain potatoes will be likely to take the rot, then up goes the price of potatoes, and the Republican politician will tell you it is the McKinley bill that has done it.

Many farmers feel discouraged at the low price of wheat, but then trade and commerce will right itself by and by.

Henry Thompson, of Hopkins Station was in Independence one day last week on business. Mr. Thompson superintends the Hennepin county poor farm at Hopkins.

W. C. Batdorf represented the Prohibitionists of Independence in convention at Minneapolis one day this week.

The convention harvest will soon be over and then will begin the campaign in earnest.

Farmers are busy threshing, plowing and cutting up corn and yet a good many of them will attend the Wright county Democratic convention, to be held at Delano next Friday.

The possibility of an extra session of Congress put Washington all in a flutter this week, that is, if the rumor prevalent about Mr. Harrison intending to call an extra session to prohibit immigration, on account of the spread of cholera in Europe may be said to make a possibility. Treasury department officials, who ought to know if such a thing was contemplated, decline to talk about it, although several of them admitted that a suspension of immigration would help very much in keeping the cholera out of the United States. Senator Cullom, of Illinois, now in Washington, says he does not believe there is any foundation for the rumor, and that there is no necessity at this time for any law absolutely prohibiting immigration, although he admits that it may become necessary, if the cholera continues to increase in Europe.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill.

Sherburne county—5.

Dated at Waverly on the 31st day of Agust 1892.

WILLIAM QUINN, Chairman Legislative Committee.

Reciprocity Reconings.

Reciprocity is understood to be the exchanging of products, goods and wares by mutual consent between two countries, and to the advantage of each country. This far it comes up to the Democratic idea of doing business. But the Republican reciprocity appears to extend mostly to a few countries of South America, and a few islands of the sea the privilege of exchanging their merchandise with us on something like equal terms. On the inhabitants of Europe they claim to lay tariff duties sufficient to run our Government. We are informed by General Sheridan, in his great opening speech of the Minnesota Republican campaign, in Minneapolis, a few weeks ago, that, "Last year we raised $392,000,000. Of this amount we raised nearly $220,000,000 through the custom-houses." The General admits that this tax is raised in our custom houses to help run our Government. (A few Republicans about here try to claim that it is not a tax) but the General was recently in London and bought a suit of clothes, so he informed his audience, consequently is able to speak from experience. McKinley, the father of the latest raise on the tariff, admits the same thing, but in his Minneapolis speech to the Republican National Convention he is reported as saying, that we do not pay the tariff ourselves but the foreigners pay it for us.

The inhabitants then of Europe pay our taxes, mostly, according to McKinley, pay the bulk of $220,000,000, per annum according to Republican statements, to run our Government. Democrats don't believe that foreigners pay this, but claim that those persons using the goods, the families who eat or wear or use articles made in Europe and send here pay the tariff. That we pay them ourselves. But if the Republicans think they can carry Minnesota this year on this issue, by trying to make our citizens most of whom came from Europe themselves, a few years ago, believe that their friends at home are being taxed $220,000,000 a year to run our great and glorious country, we think they will find out their mistake as soon as the first week in November, at least. It is rediculous on the face of it, and requires considerable cheek to stand up and tell the majority of voters throughout Minnesota that $220,000,000 of money is being raised from the scanty purses of their fathers, in Norway and Sweden, in England and down trodden Ireland, in Wales, Scotland, little Belgium, independent Switzerland, from starving Russia, from Germany, France, Austria, Holland and from all over the continent. It is certainly a great undertaking for young men just turned out of colledge and for prominent politicians to face an audience like the average Minnesota political gathering; in many instances three fourths or more foreigners. Men who have come to this country to better their condition; and boast that they have been able to realize their expectations, thanks to the productiveness of the soil and other national resources, rather than to protective tariffs, and tell them that their old gray headed fathers and mothers their sisters and brothers are still working at the trades and occupations they were engaged in ten, twenty or forty years ago, when they bid them a good bye and started for America, and living on food, in many instances insufficient for their wants, wearing clothing too meager to shelter them from the storms, and that we in our plants, rather than send them our finest wheat flour, potatoes and other vegetables and meats in exchange for the products of their hands, and machines, on equal terms, like kinsmen should, shall vote to keep up the "Chinese wall," of protective tariff to our "infant industries" to the highest pitch it has ever been, even when our war debt was very much larger than now, and instead of paying this tariff from our own pockets as Democrats claim we are doing, that we are taxing it up to our relatives and friends in the old country. Most of our naturalized American citizens have family pride enough about them, and respect for their aged parents and friends to at once disclaim the truthfulness of such assertions as that our tariff taxes are paid by their friends at home. Or if they believe they are, they are certainly very unnatural children to permit such a burden as $220,000,000 to be imposed upon "the panper labor of Europe" as Republicans are fond of calling the working people of the old countries and to which class many of the most respected of our citizens to-day are related by the ties of family and by friendship. If Democrats are right we pay this $220,000,000 ourselves, mostly. If Republicans are telling the truth the relatives of Minnesota's foreign population are contributing no small share toward filling Uncle Sam's coffers, while they themselves are, according to Republican authority, faring sumptiously every day.

Republican County Convention.

The Republicans held their County Convention at Buffalo on Wednesday, W. E. Culkin was selected as chairman of the meeting, and W. H. Towle, secretary. The convention, to all appearance, passed off quite pleasantly. Mr. Westmghouse submitting gracefully to defeat in the first round to F. B. Lamson, with whom he shook hands good naturedly and wished success.

Nathan Warner, that old time wheel hourse and staunch supporter of A. Y. Eaton, giving way at the first fire to Thomas McLeod, of Otsego, who seems to have been a stalwart. For register of deeds there seemed to be no opposition to the young post master from Maple Lake. For judge of probate, Mr. Tarbox, of Monticello, surrendered his chances to what he found to be the inevitable without a vote, and Judge Alley accepted the nomination by acclimation for the 4th time in a few patriotic remarks. Mr. Tarbox said Alley was put on to the ticket to "strengthen it."

For sheriff, Franklin's young man with the new "grand pa's hat" got left and the county seat raked in the chances to beat Nugent. Geo. said "you all know what you have to contend with." County Attorney found a willing victim in W. E. Culkin, who will probably again go through the Cutting process of two years ago. He could not refrain from slurring his opponent who was present in the room in a fashion that many objected to and will probably resent at the polls. For superintendent of schools, there was no opposition, surveyor, ditto. For coroner, Dr. Ridgway and Dr. Shrader, each refused to make the run, when French, of Monticello, nominated his fellow townsman, Dr. Wakefield. Court commissioner fell to S. A. Putnam without opposition.

Auditor, F. B. Hanson.
Treasurer, Thomas McLeod.
Register of Deeds, A. A. Jewett.
Judge of Probate, J. T. Aller.
Sheriff, George Carpenter.
County Attorney, W. E. Culkin.
Superintendent of Schools, F. H. Lindsley.
Surveyor, H. T. Moland.
Coroner, Dr. S. L. Wakefield.
County Commissioners:
1st Dist., Geo. Roscoe.
3d Dist., Adam Horsch.

For Representatives for the 38th district:

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Sept. 9, 1892.

Mr. Harrison's letter of acceptance was a very decided innovation in that line. It breaks all precedents and instead of being a letter of acceptance pure and simple, it is, in addition, a carefully and skillfully prepared lawyer's plea for the Republican party in general and the Harrison administration in particular, and like other able lawyers' pleas it is liable to impose on those who are not familiar, and who will not take the trouble to familiarize themselves with the other side. It shows, too, that the stories which have from time to time been told of Mr. Harrison's intention to individually boss the Republican side of the campaign were all founded on the solid truth. The intention has become a fact, and today Mr. Harrison is the acknowledged boss of the Republican National committee, which is conducting the campaign according to his orders. It is known here that the publication of the letter of acceptance this week was directly against the wishes of Chairman Carter and a number of the working members of the committee, they wanted it held back at least a month, but boss Benjamin ordered it given out, and given out it was.

Mr Harrison's attempt to dodge the Force bill issue in such a way as to leave the impression upon those who favor that outrage upon constitutional liberty that he is still with them—as he really is, heart and soul—that he has abandoned it, is like most efforts of a similar nature—supremely ridiculous, and meets only with meaning smiles in every quarter. Democrats and Republicans alike know just where Mr. Harrison stands upon this question; that, if he be re-elected and the next House of Representatives be controlled by the Republicans, he will in his first message to the Fifty-third Congress ask that a bill similar to the notorious Lodge bill of the Fifty-first Congress be passed. There is only one way for this county to escape the horrors of the force bill, which in one section of the country would be as bad as a visitation of the cholera, and that is to defeat Benjamin Harrison and the Republican party.

Mr. Blaine's letter, made public the day after that of Mr. Harrison, fell like a wet blanket upon the candidate's pronunciamento. It nullified about half of Mr. Harrison's letter by advising the Republicans to ignore all issues, except three in the campaign, and worse than all, for Benjaman, the great—in his own estimation—it nowhere mentioned Mr. Harrison's name. No Republican with whom I have talked has a doubt about this slight to the head of the Republican ticket being deliberate and intentional on the part of Mr. Blaine. It is a slight, too, that Mr. Harrison dare not resent at this time; but you may be sure that he will try to "get even" after the election, which ever way it goes, by jumping on the Blaine Republicans wherever he finds them.

The milk in the cocoanut, concerning the application of the Inman Line Steamship Company for American registry for two of their best steamers, which was granted at the last session of Congress, was exposed when the bids for carrying ocean mails, under the mail subsidy act of the billion-dollar Congress, were this week opened by Mr. Wanamaker. The Inman Line, under its new American name—The International Navigation Company, of Philadelphia—adopted, solely with the idea of getting a slice of this subsidy, was the only company that put in a bid for the European service, and the only company that proposes to carry the mails in vessels of first class. It put in two bids, and Mr. Wanamaker says they will both be accepted. Each of them is for weekly service and in each the compensation asked is 4½ per mile. Multiply the number of miles across the Atlantic by four and the result by 104 and a sum of money is piled up that fully explains the desire of the stockholders in this company to change the flag over such of their ships as they could get subsidized so highly. Some people have said that Mr. Wanamaker had some very near friends who were allowed to purchase stock in the reorganized company at a nominal price, but, of course, that had no influence in the deal.

Representative Catchings, of the Mississippi, is in Washington. He says the Democrats will not lose a single electoral vote in the South, and that the People's party will not have as many members in the next as they have in present House. He figures on a Democratic majority of between forty and fifty in the next House.

CORRESPONDENCE

WAVERLY WISDOM.

Chairman Wm. Quinn was in Montrose Friday evening making the necessary arrangements for the organization of a Democratic club. Montrose is a good field for such an organization, having some staunch Democrats and a big missionary circle in which to make known the true Jeffersonian doctrine. May the conversions be many.

Miss Kate Muldoon, the milliner, was in the cities last week purchasing the latest novelties in ladies' hats.

Mr. John Kennedy, of Woodland, made a business trip to Delano last Thursday.

Mr. David Jackson, one of Hanover's solid Democrats, was in our village Friday. Mr. Jackson believes firmly that Grover Cleveland will be elected by an overwhelming majority; he also predicts the election of Dan Lawler for Governor.

John Quinn is looked upon as being a good authority in sporting circles. He predicted the "annihilation" of Sullivan and was a Corbett man from the start.

Mr. Louis Kommers left last week for McCauleyville.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lally, who have been in Chicago during the past month, returned home last Thursday.

Mr. Arthur J. Demers returned home last week from Canada, after enjoying a three weeks visit with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dougherty, of Marysville, are rejoicing over the arrival of a brand new baby girl which came to their home last Saturday.

Matt Cech, of the firm of C. Gotzian & Co., who has been visiting his parents in Woodland during the past week, left for his home in St. Paul Monday.

Chas. Bugbee, one of the solid and prominent Democrats of Rockford, was in our village Monday.

Messrs. L. V. Kyte, Ed. Robarge and E. H. Learned were the delegates from Woodland who attended the county convention at Buffalo Wednesday.

The public school re-opens for the fall term on Monday, September 26. Mr. Stapleton is the principal and Miss Eliza Jordan primary teacher. We understand that the school board are making an effort to raise the standard and expect a general supervision in every detail that tends toward making the school equal to any of our neighboring villages. This is the right spirit in starting out and should be continued during the entire term. Parents should take more interest in school matters than they usually do. It is their duty to see that their children attend regularly, and if they find anything not going as they would wish, report it immediately to the proper authorities and have the wrong corrected. With teachers, parents and school officers doing their respective parts, it may be safely said that the Waverly public school will witness this term that progress and advancement which will be the joy of every parent in the district. By all means let us have a good public school.

Miss Annie Cruzen and Miss Georgie Parker left the beginning of the week to attend the Excelsior College.

Mr. J. K. Cullen and Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Kelly went to Minneapolis Tuesday to attend the marriage of a relative.

The Populists of this county have concluded to put up a county and legislative ticket and will accordingly hold a convention in Maple Lake on the 26th of this month.

The Democrats of Marysville held a caucus in this village Tuesday evening and elected Wm. Quinn, James F. McDonnell, John Kelly, D. W. Flannigan, W. J. Walsh and H. C. Morneau delegates to the county convention to be held in Delano Friday.

The village council held their regular monthly meeting Monday evening.

The Woodland delegates to the Democratic convention are John Kennedy, Charles O'Hara, John Young, T. J. Coyne and Jams Powell.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cullen, last night, a boy.

MAPLE PLAIN.

Miss Ella Hardt, daughter of Julius Hardt, propritor of the Star Hotel, returned this week from a two months stay at Ledgerwood, N. D., in time to attend her mother's birthday party last Wednesday. About twenty ladies were present, and Mrs. Hardt was the recepient of many beautiful presents.

A large crew of men have been working the county roads in this vicinity during the week. The forepart of the week they completed a culvert on the Watertown road. They are now constructing a culvert between Maple Plain and Armstrong. County Commissioner William Chowen was inspecting the work on Wednesday.

Mrs. A. S. Beede, of Greenwood, the well known [illegible] teacher, was in town the forepart of the week. Mrs. Beede is very much discussed just now in connection with the office of Superintendent of Schools. A very general sentiment prevails throughout the country that Mrs. Beede should be connected with that office in some capacity. The installation of this noble Christian lady as assistant to Prof. James A. Lewis would add great dignity and efficiency to the office of superintendent of schools in Hennepin county, though no one, not even McConnell, pretends to find fault with the services rendered by Prof. Lewis himself.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

The late heavy rains gave us some more bad roads, wet up the grain stacks and filled up the low meadows, so the prospect for haying on them is not very good. Should we have much more rain potatoes will be likely to take the rot, then up goes the price of potatoes, and the Republican politician will tell you it is the McKinley bill that has done it.

Many farmers feel discouraged at the low price of wheat, but then trade and commerce will right itself by and by.

Henry Thompson, of Hopkins Station was in Independence one day last week on business. Mr. Thompson superintends the Hennepin county poor farm at Hopkins.

W. C. Baldorf represented the Prohibitionists of Independence in convention at Minneapolis one day this week.

The convention harvest will soon be over and then will begin the campaign in earnest.

Farmers are busy threshing, plowing and cutting up corn and yet a good many of them will attend the Wright county Democratic convention, to be held at Delano next Friday.

The possibility of an extra session of Congress put Washington all in a flutter this week, that is, if the rumor prevalent about Mr. Harrison intending to call an extra session to prohibit immigration, on account of the spread of cholera in Europe may be said to make a possibility. Treasury department officials, who ought to know if such a thing was contemplated, decline to talk about it, although several of them admitted that a suspension of immigration would help very much in keeping the cholera out of the United States. Senator Cullom, of Illinois, now in Washington, says he does not believe there is any foundation for the rumor, and that there is no necessity at this time for any law absolutely prohibiting immigration, although he admits that it may become necessary, if the cholera continues to increase in Europe.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

The counties are entitled to representation as follows: One delegate at large from each county, and one for every sixty votes or major fraction thereof cast for Wilson for governor at the last general election in November 1890.

Wright county—36
Sherburne county—5.

Dated at Waverly on the 31st day of Agust 1892.

WILLIAM QUINN, Chairman Legislative Committee.

Reciprocity Reconings.

Reciprocity is understood to be the exchanging of products, goods and wares by mutual consent between two countries, and to the advantage of each country. This far it comes up to the Democratic idea of doing business. But the Republican reciprocity appears to extend mostly to a few countries of South America, and a few islands of the sea the privilege of exchanging their merchandise with us on something like equal terms. On the inhabitants of Europe they claim to lay tariff duties sufficient to run our Government. We are informed by General Sheridan, in his great opening speech of the Minnesota Republican campaign, in Minneapolis, a few weeks ago, that, "Last year we raised $392,000,000. Of this amount we raised nearly $220,000,000 through the custom-houses." The General admits that this tax is raised in our custom houses to help run our Government. (A few Republicans about here try to claim that it is not a tax) but the General was recently in London and bought a suit of clothes, so he informed his audience, consequently is able to speak from experience. McKinley, the father of the latest raise on the tariff, admits the same thing, but in his Minneapolis speech to the Republican National Convention he is reported as saying, that we do not pay the tariff ourselves but the foreigners pay it for us.

The inhabitants them of Europe pay our taxes, mostly, according to McKinley, pay the bulk of $220,000,000, per annum according to Republican statements to run our Government. Democrats don't believe that foreigners pay this, but claim that those persons using the goods, the families who eat or wear or use articles made in Europe and sent here pay the tariff. That we pay them ourselves. But if the Republicans think they can carry Minnesota this year on this issue, by trying to make our citizens most of whom came from Europe themselves, a few years ago, believe that their friends at home are being taxed $220,000,000 a year to run our great and glorious country, we think they will find out their mistake as soon as the first week in November, at least. It is rediculous on the face of it, and requires considerable cheek to stand up and tell the majority of voters throughout Minnesota that $220,000,000 of money is being raised from the scanty purses of their fathers, in Norway and Sweden, in England and down trodden Ireland, in Wales, Scotland, little Belgium, indepped at Switzerland, from straving Russia, from Germany, France, Austria, Holland and from all over the continent. It is certainly a great undertaking for young men just turned out of college and for prominent politicians to face an audience like the average Minnesota political gathering; in many instances three-fourths or more foreigners. Men who have come to this country to better their condition; and boast that they have been able to realize their expectations, thanks to the productiveness of the soil and other national resources, rather than to protective tariffs, and tell them that their old gray headed fathers and mothers their sisters and brothers are still working at the trades and occupations they were engaged in ten, twenty or forty years ago, when they bid them a good bye and started for America, and living on food, in many instances insufficient for their wants, wearing clothing too meager to shelter them from the storms, and that we in our plenty, rather than send them our finest wheat flour, potatoes and other vegetables and meats in exchange for the products of their hands, and machines; on equal terms, like kinsmen should, shall vote to keep up the "Chinese wall," of protective tariff to our "infant industries" to the highest pitch it has ever been, even when our war debt was very much larger than now, and instead of paying this tariff from our own pockets as Democrats claim we are doing, that we are taxing it up to our relatives and friends in the old country. Most of our naturalized American citizens have family pride enough about them, and respect for their aged parents and friends to at once discbim the truthfulness of such assertions as that our tariff taxes are paid by their friends at home. Or if they believe they are, they are certainly very unnatural children to permit such a burden as $220,000,000 to be imposed upon "the pauper labor of Europe" as Republicans are fond of calling the working people of the old countries and to which class many of the most respected of our citizens to-day are related by the ties of family and by friendship. If Democrats are right we pay this $220,000,000 ourselves, mostly. If Republicans are telling the truth the relatives of Minnesota's foreign population are contributing no small share toward filling Uncle Sam's coffers, while they themselves are, according to Republican authority, faring sumptiously every day.

Republican County Convention.

The Republicans held their County Convention at Buffalo on Wednesday, W. E. Culkin was selected as chairman of the meeting, and W. H. Towle, secretary. The convention, to all appearance, passed off quite pleasantly. Mr. Westinghouse submitting gracefully to defeat in the first round to F. B. Lamson, with whom he shook hands good naturedly and wished success.

Nathan Warner, that old time wheel hourse and staunch supporter of A. Y. Eaton, giving way at the first fire to Thomas McLeod, of Otsego, who seems to have been a stalwart. For register of deeds there seemed to be no opposition to the young post master from Maple Lake. For judge of probate, Mr. Tarbox, of Monticello, surrendered his chances to what he found to be the inevitable without a vote, and Judge Alley accepted the nomination by acclimation for the 4th time in a few patriotic remarks. Mr. Tarbox said Alley was put on to the ticket to "strengthen it."

For sheriff, Franklin's young man with the new "grand pa's hat" got left and the county seat raked in the chances to beat Nugent. Geo. said "you all know what you have to contend with." County Attorney found a willing victim in W. E. Culkin, who will probably again go through the Cutting process of two years ago. He could not refrain from slurring his opponent who was present in the room in a fashion that many objected to and will probably resent at the polls. For superintendent of schools, there was no opposition, surveyor, ditto. For coroner, Dr. Ridgway and Dr. Shrader, each refused to make the run, when French, of Monticello, nominated his fellow townsman, Dr. Wakefield. Court commissioner fell to S. A. Putnam without opposition.

Auditor, F. B. Hunson.
Treasurer, Thomas McLeod.
Register of Deeds, A. A. Jewett.
Judge of Probate, J. T. Aller.
Sheriff, George Carpenter.
County Attorney, W. E. Culkin.
Superintendent of Schools, E. H. Lundsley.
Surveyor, H. T. Moland.
Coroner, Dr. S. L. Wakefield.
County Commissioners:
1st Dist., Geo. Roscoe.
3d Dist., Adam Horsch.
5th Dist., Ole Mattson.

For Representatives for the 38th district:

John A. Holler, Monticello; S. J. Swanson, Cokato; W. J. McDonald, Annandale; H. E. Craig, Sherburne County.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Sept. 9, 1892

Mr. Harrison's letter of acceptance was a very decided innovation in that line. It breaks all precedents and instead of being a letter of acceptance pure and simple, it is, in addition, a carefully and skillfully prepared lawyer's plea for the Republican party in general and the Harrison administration in particular, and like other able lawyers' pleas it is liable to impose on those who are not familiar, and who will not take the trouble to familiarize themselves with the other side. It shows, too, that the stories which have from time to time been told of Mr. Harrison's intention to individually boss the Republican side of the campaign were all founded on the solid truth. The intention has become a fact, and today Mr. Harrison is the acknowledged boss of the Republican National committee, which is conducting the campaign according to his orders. It is known here that the publication of the letter of acceptance this week was directly against the wishes of Chairman Carter and a number of the working members of the committee; they wanted it held back at least a month, but boss Benjamin ordered it given out, and given out it was.

Mr Harrison's attempt to dodge the Force bill issue in such a way as to leave the impression upon those who favor that outrage upon constitutional liberty that he is still with them—as he really is, heart and soul—that he has abandoned it, is like most efforts of a similar nature—supremely ridiculous, and meets only with meaning smiles in every quarter. Democrats and Republicans alike know just where Mr. Harrison stands upon this question; that, if he be re-elected and the next House of Representatives be controlled by the Republicans, he will in his first message to the Fifty-third Congress ask that a bill similar to the notorious Lodge bill of the Fifty-first Congress be passed. There is only one way for this county to escape the horrors of the force bill, which in one section of the country would be as bad as a visitation of the cholera, and that is to defeat Benjamin Harrison and the Republican party.

Mr. Blaine's letter, made public the day after that of Mr. Harrison, fell like a wet blanket upon the candidate's pronunciamento. It nullified about half of Mr. Harrison's letter by advising the Republicans to ignore all issues, except three in the campaign, and worse than all, for Benjaman, the great—in his own estimation—it nowhere mentioned Mr. Harrison's name. No Republican with whom I have talked has a doubt about this slight to the head of the Republican ticket being deliberate and intentional on the part of Mr. Blaine. It is a slight, too, that Mr. Harrison dare not resent at this time; but you may be sure that he will try to "get even" after the election, which ever way it goes, by jumping on the Blaine Republicans wherever he finds them.

The milk in the cocoanut, concerning the application of the Inman Line Steamship Company for American registry for two of their best steamers, which was granted at the last session of Congress, was exposed when the bids for carrying ocean mails, under the mail subsidy act of the billion-dollar Congress, were this week opened by Mr. Wanamaker. The Inman Line, under its new American name—The International Navigation Company, of Philadelphia—adopted, solely with the idea of getting a slice of this subsidy, was the only company that put in a bid for the European service, and the only company that proposes to carry the mails in vessels of first class. It put in two bids, and Mr. Wanamaker says they will both be accepted. Each of them is for weekly service and in each the compensation asked is $1 per mile. Multiply the number of miles across the Atlantic by four and the result by 104 and a sum of money is piled up that fully explains the desire of the stockholders in this company to change the flag over such of their ships as they could get subsidized so highly. Some people have said that Mr. Wanamaker had some very near friends who were allowed to purchase stock in the reorganized company at a nominal price, but, of course, that had no influence in the deal.

Representative Catchings, of the Mississippi, is in Washington. He says the Democrats will not lose a single electoral vote in the South, and that the People's party will not have as many members in the next as they have in present House. He figures on a Democratic majority of between forty and fifty in the next House.

CORRESPONDENCE

WAVERLY WISDOM.

Chairman Wm. Quinn was in Montrose Friday evening making the necessary arrangements for the organization of a Democratic club. Montrose is a good field for such an organization, having some staunch Democrats and a big missionary circle in which to make known the true Jeffersonian doctrine. May the conversions be many.

Miss Kate Muldoon, the milliner, was in the cities last week purchasing the latest novelties in ladies' hats.

Mr. John Kennady, of Woodland, made a business trip to Delano last Thursday.

Mr. David Jackson, one of Hanover's solid Democrats, was in our village Friday. Mr. Jackson believes firmly that Grover Cleveland will be elected by an overwhelming majority: he also predicts the election of Dan Lawler for Governor.

John Quinn is looked upon as being a good authority in sporting circles. He predicted the "annihilation" of Sullivan and was a Corbett man from the start.

Mr. Louis Kommers left last week for McCauleyville.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lally, who have been in Chicago during the past month, returned home last Thursday.

Mr. Arthur J. Demers returned home last week from Canada, after enjoying a three weeks visit with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dougherty, of Marysville, are rejoicing over the arrival of a brand new baby girl which came to their home last Saturday.

Matt Cook, of the firm of C. Gotzian & Co., who has been visiting his parents in Woodland during the past week, left for his home in St. Paul Monday.

Chas. Bugbee, one of the solid and prominent Democrats of Rockford, was in our village Monday.

Messrs. L. V. Kyte, Ed. Robarge and E. H. Learned were the delegates from Woodland who attended the county convention at Buffalo Wednesday.

The public school re-opens for the fall term on Monday, September 26. Mr. Stapleton is the principal and Miss Eliza Jordan primary teacher. We understand that the school board are making an effort to raise the standard and expect a general supervision in every detail that tends toward making the school equal to any of our neighboring villages. This is the right spirit in starting out and should be continued during the entire term. Parents should take more interest in school matters than they usually do. It is their duty to see that their children attend regularly, and if they find anything not going as they would wish, report it immediately to the proper authorities and have the wrong corrected. With teachers, parents and school officers doing their respective parts, it may be safely said that the Waverly public school will witness this term that progress and advancement which will be the joy of every parent in the district. By all means let us have a good public school.

Miss Annie Cruzen and Miss Georgie Parker left the beginning of the week to attend the Excelsior College.

Mr. J. K. Cullen and Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Kelly went to Minneapolis Tuesday to attend the marriage of a relative.

The Populists of this county have concluded to put up a county and legislative ticket and will accordingly hold a convention in Maple Lake on the 26th of this month.

The Democrats of Marysville held a caucus in this village Tuesday evening and elected Wm. Quinn, James F. McDonnell, John Kelly, D. W. Flannigan, W. J. Walsh and H. C. Morneau delegates to the county convention to be held in Delano Friday.

The village council held their regular monthly meeting Monday evening.

The Woodland delegates to the Democratic convention are John Kennedy, Charles O'Hara, John Young, T. J. Coyne and Jams Powell.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cullen, last night, a boy.

MAPLE PLAIN.

Miss Ella Hardt, daughter of Julius Hardt, propritor of the Star Hotel, returned this week from a two months stay at Ledgerwood, N. D., in time to attend her mother's birthday party last Wednesday. About twenty ladies were present, and Mrs. Hardt was the recepient of many beautiful presents.

A large crew of men have been working the county roads in this vicinity during the week. The forepart of the week they completed a culvert on the Watertown road. They are now constructing a culvert between Maple Plain and Armstrong. County Commissioner William Chowen was inspecting the work on Wednesday.

Mrs. A. S. Beede, of Greenwood, the well known school teacher, was in town the forepart of the week. Mrs. Beede is very much discussed just now in connection with the office of Superintendent of Schools. A very general sentiment prevails throughout the country that Mrs. Beede should be connected with that office in some capacity. The installation of this noble Christian lady as assistant to Prof. James A. Lewis would add great dignity and efficiency to the office of superintendent of schools in Hennepin county, though no one, not even McConnell, pretends to find fault with the services rendered by Prof. Lewis himself.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

The late heavy rains gave us some more bad roads, wet up the grain stacks and filled up the low meadows, so the prospect for haying on them is not very good. Should we have much more rain potatoes will be likely to take the rot, then up goes the price of potatoes, and the Republican politician will tell you it is the McKinley bill that has done it.

Many farmers feel discouraged at the low price of wheat, but then trade and commerce will right itself by and by.

Henry Thompson, of Hopkins Station was in Independence one day last week on business. Mr. Thompson superintends the Hennepin county poor farm at Hopkins.

W. C. Baldorf represented the Prohibitionists of Independence in convention at Minneapolis one day this week.

The convention harvest will soon be over and then will begin the campaign in earnest.

Farmers are busy threshing, plowing and cutting up corn and yet a good many of them will attend the Wright county Democratic convention, to be held at Delano next Friday.

The possibility of an extra session of Congress put Washington all in a flutter this week, that is, if the rumor prevalent about Mr. Harrison intending to call an extra session to prohibit immigration, on account of the spread of cholera in Europe may be said to make a possibility. Treasury department officials, who ought to know if such a thing was contemplated, decline to talk about it, although several of them admitted that a suspension of immigration would help very much in keeping the cholera out of the United States. Senator Cullom, of Illinois, now in Washington, says he does not believe there is any foundation for the rumor, and that there is no necessity at this time for any law absolutely prohibiting immigration, although he admits that it may become necessary, if the cholera continues to increase in Europe.

IT is estimated that the incomes of women doctors range from $200 to $20,000 a year. Ten thousand dollars for a well-educated, gifted and healthy woman doctor is not uncommon, and $5,000 a year is less rare. One doctor of repute earned $3,000 the first year she practised, $5,000 the next, and a corresponding increase until she died; but she spent eight hours a day in severe study for many years after her graduation.

EGYPT has been rightly called "the gift of the Nile," which not only irrigates the soil, but manures it at the same time with the deposit of fertilizing mud which it leaves behind. The Nile mud rests on a bed of sea sand, the whole valley between the first cataract and the sea having been in prehistoric times a narrow estuary. The soil thus formed by the Nile is chemically unique. It contains 63 per cent. of water and sand, 18 per cent. of carbonate of lime, 9 per cent. of quartz, silica, felspar, hornblende and epidote, 6 per cent. of oxide of iron and 4 per cent. of carbonate of magnesia.

AS WOMEN are taking places heretofore occupied by men, the latter need some one to keep their clothes in order. Accordingly a Kansas City man has made preparation to do this in a business-like manner. He proposes for the sum of one dollar a month to keep the garments of every patron in perfect order, to darn his socks, sew buttons on his shirts and do all the mending he requires. All these garments will be called for on notice being given, and delivered at his house in a neat box. This new candidate for public favor will do more for his fellow-men than people who pose as great reformers.

A CENSUS bulletin shows that in 1890 the United States contained 95,280 females for every 100,000 males. In 1880 the proportion of females was 96,544, and 97,801 in 1870. It thus appears that the excess of males over females is steadily increasing by reason of the larger per cent. of males among the immigrants than of females. The females exceed the males by more than 5 per cent. in the District of Columbia, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. In North Dakota there are five males to four females, and in Montana nearly two to one. The number of foreign born to each 100,000 native born was 17,330 in 1890.

KILLED IN A GALE.

A Building Blown Down at Marion, Ind. —Two Men Crushed to Death 'Neath the Ruins—Serious Work of Storms Elsewhere.

MARION, Ind., Sept. 12.—A tornado passed over the lower part of the city Friday night, causing great damage and completely wrecking the buildings of the Indiana pulp works, by far the most important plant in Grant county, killing two men and dangerously injuring two others.

The killed are: Howard Green and Samuel Pond. The injured are: Lawrence Thorn, ankle sprained and badly injured about the head; Fred Tulley, arm crushed and internally injured. There were six men in the mill at the time of the tornado, the regular night shift having been paid off last week. Two men escaped unhurt. The damage to the building will be $15,000. The west half of the main building was crushed, while a wing running over 200 feet south was totally destroyed. The former went down and the latter was turned over and swept clean to the foundations. The building was one of the most substantial structures in the city and the factory had been in operation but a year. Green and Pond were crushed almost beyond recognition. The necks of both were broken.

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 12.—The most destructive electric, wind, hail and rainstorm of years visited this vicinity early Saturday morning. It traversed the greater portion of the county, spending its fury a few miles north of this city, and worked incalculable damage to tobacco and corn fields. Over forty acres of tobacco immediately around Madison were totally destroyed, the wind and hail completely stripping the leaves from the stocks. Much of the crop had been harvested, but many farmers lose their all. The ground was white with pieces of hail, many of which measured an inch in diameter. The loss will aggregate nearly $1,000,000. Dead sparrows covered the ground. Fruit and vegetables were also damaged to a great extent, apples on trees being cut to pieces and watermelons cracked open. In this city an extensive brick wall, 84 by 38 feet, a new addition to the city gas works, was blown down, and many shade trees ruined. Haystacks and buildings were set on fire by lightning and the thunder and lightning were terrific, surpassing all previous experience here.

RACINE, Wis., Sept. 12. — During a storm Charles Christianson, aged 25 years, was struck by lightning and instantly killed at the Herrick farm. He and a brother-in-law, whose name is not known, were making for shelter with a horse and wagon, Christianson leading the horse, when the bolt struck and killed him. The horse was knocked down and the brother-in-law was thrown from the wagon and is not expected to live. The dead man was single and his home was at Windsor.

LA CROSSE, Wis., Sept. 12.—During a heavy storm Friday night three valuable horses were killed in a pasture east of the city. At West Salem, 12 miles east, G. G. Hitchcock's barn was struck by lightning, sixty tons of hay burned with a loss of $2,000, the insurance being one-half. Another barn in the same neighborhood was struck and several cows killed. The lightning ran one-quarter of a mile on a wire fence ending in a hog yard, killing several animals. Other fires occurred in the county, but the heavy rains have made the roads impassable and details have not come in.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Sept. 12.—From 8 to 10 o'clock Saturday night a fearful storm of rain and electricity raged in this vicinity. A great amount of water fell. Several horses were killed by lightning in the country near town and several men were shocked severely. The farmers are afraid the rain will be followed by a killing frost, which will destroy the corn, none of which is out of danger.

HONOR THE DEAD POET.

Funeral of John Greenleaf Whittier at Amesbury—Business Suspended.

AMESBURY, Mass., Sept. 12.—The body of the departed poet, John Greenleaf Whittier, lay in state in the parlor of his late home from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. Saturday. Thousands passed in and took a last look upon the features. At 2:30 o'clock the funeral services were held in the garden at the rear of the house. The Quaker form of service was used, as requested by the deceased. The interment was in the Friends' cemetery. Floral tributes were received from all parts of the country. Flags all over the city were at half-mast and public buildings were draped in mourning. Among the prominent people present were Oliver Wendell Holmes, Congressman Cogswell, ex-Gov. Claflin, Rev. Anson Titus, John W. Hutchinson, of Lynn; Mrs. Ludlow Patten, of New York; E. C. Stedman, New York; F. C. Lovering, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Francis J. Garrison, son of William Lloyd Garrison; H. O. Houghton, Edward L. Pierce, Horace E. Scudder, Col. J. C. Franklin, Gen. O. O. Howard and Col. T. W. Higginson. The Haverhill city government was present in a body and also delegations from many organizations. Many telegrams and letters of sympathy were received, among them James G. Blaine, Frederick Douglass, ex-Gov. John D. Long, R. T. Davis. Business was suspended during the afternoon.

ALL PERISHED.

Reported Loss of a Schooner on the Grand Banks—Her Crew of Nineteen Men Drowned.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 12.—A schooner has just returned to La Have from the Grand Banks, bringing the report of the loss of the schooner Cashier of the same place. The vessels were fishing close together on the evening before the heavy gale of August 22. Next morning after the storm had abated nothing was to be seen of the schooner, but numerous pieces of wreckage were floating about. Without doubt the Cashier went down in the gale, and her entire crew of nineteen persons perished.

POLICE NOT TO BLAME.

Verdict of the Coroner's Jury on the Garfield Park Murders.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—After an hour's deliberation Saturday afternoon the coroner's jury which for three days had been sitting in an inquest on the bodies of John Powell, Henry McDowell and James M. Brown agreed upon a verdict. It fully exonerated the police authorities of any criminal responsibility for the death of Brown, claiming that Brown having drawn his revolver in an effort to resist arrest the shooting was done in self-defense. The other two verdicts were substantially the same.

TRAINS COLLIDE.

Nine Persons Killed and Thirty-Eight Injured in a Disaster Near Boston.

BOSTON, Sept. 12.—To a dense fog and apparent carelessness on the part of the engineer of the freight train are to be ascribed the fatal accident on the Fitchburg railroad shortly before 11 o'clock Saturday evening at West Cambridge by which nine were killed and thirty-eight injured A few hundred feet beyond the West Cambridge station a single track branching from the main line constitutes the Watertown branch. The outward Watertown train which left Boston at 10:15 Saturday night was well filled with passengers. Detained a few minutes at Charleston, where the Fitchburg crosses the tracks of the Boston & Maine it reached the cross-over two or three minutes late and there waited for an inward bound passenger train to pass on the main line before switching over to the branch. The conductor knowing that a freight was coming up in the rear sent a brakeman back with a red lantern. The fog was thick and the engineer of the freight asserts that he saw no danger signal. Just before the freight reached the brakeman, the inward passenger train having thundered by, the outward train sounded the recall to the brakeman and began to move toward the cross-over track to the branch. All the cars had crossed over except the rear one, when there was a short blast for down brakes from the engine of the freight in the rear and an instant later a crash. The engineer of the freight saw the danger too late to avoid the accident. His big engine plowed its way through nearly the whole length of the rear coach and passengers were crushed beneath it or jammed in between the sides of the car and the engine's hot boiler.

Escaping steam added to the torture of the injured and scalded many who had otherwise miraculously escaped harm. Surgeons and ambulances from Cambridge, Somerville and Boston were quickly on the scene, and the remains of the dead were tenderly cared for and the wounds of the injured promptly dressed. The list of the dead is:

Miss Margoire Adams, 35 years, Watertown, died in hospital; John H. Barnes, 61 years, Newton; Miss Rhita Feyler, 23 years, Waltham; John Hudson, 51 years, Watertown; John Lane, 41 years, Watertown; H. F. Merrifield, Watertown; Leon O. Raymond, freight brakeman, Winchetdon; Standish P. Sullivan, 56 years, East Watertown; Benjamin Tuck, 65 years, Watertown.

The official investigation into the cause of the accident will undoubtedly result in placing the blame where it belongs, but the railroad people themselves do not hesitate to charge Engineer Goodwin, of the freight, with the responsibility. The switches at the junction of the Watertown branch with the main line are moved from a signal tower and are protected by signals, which under the interlocking system now in such general use by the railroads cannot be wrongly set and which if seen and obeyed will prevent even the possibility of accident. That Engineer Goodwin ran by one of these signals set at danger is said to be true. It is also said that had he seen and obeyed the signal and brought his train under control, as the rules of the road require, he would never have crashed into the rear of the passenger train. While the fog may have obscured the signal from Goodwin's sight it is said that the rules of the road required that he should come to a full stop if necessary to see and read it before passing.

The rear brakeman of the passenger train, who shortly before the accident was sent back about 600 feet to notify the engineer of the freight train of danger ahead, states that he went back as directed and signaled the freight train, and his signal was answered by two whistles, which is the usual answer that all signals have been seen and noted. The reason for the collision, he feels sure, was that the engineer of the freight train could not control his train, which was of thirty cars, the greater part of them containing lumber, all heavy.

BACK FROM THE ARCTICS.

Lieut. Peary and His Band of Bold Explorers Reach St. John's in Safety.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Sept. 12.—The Kite arrived here Sunday afternoon from North Greenland, whence it sailed August 24. On board are the entire Peary relief expedition in good health, with Lieut. and Mrs. Peary and party, except Mr. Voorhoof, who, it is believed, lost his life by falling into the crevasse of the glaciers at the head of Robertson's bay.

With the exception of this casualty, which has saddened both parties, the two expeditions have been eminently successful. Mr. Peary has carried out his plans fully and made a great inland ice journey of 1,500 miles with Mr. Astruph, and the members of his party who remained at McComick bay have made a rich collection of the flora, fauna and ethnology of north Greenland, besides which he has demonstrated the ease and comfort with which a winter can be spent in the arctic regions. The relief expedition has been equally fortunate.

Jumped to His Death.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

Fortune for an Old Veteran.

William Henry Allen, an inmate of the Minnesota soldiers' home, has received notice that by the death of a brother in California he has fallen heir to a large slice of an estate valued at from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000. A nephew of the deceased gets the larger slice of it, but as William Henry's portion amounts to about $6,000,000 he thinks that by rigid economy he may manage to get along during the remainder of his natural life.

Big Payment for Life Insurance.

J. J. Hill, of St. Paul, president of the Great Northern railway, while in New York recently, gave his check on the First national bank of St. Paul for $136,350 in full payment of an insurance policy in an eastern company of $100,000 on his life and an annuity of $12,500 commencing ten years hence. This is the largest sum ever paid for a single life insurance policy in the history of the business.

Treasurer Petersen Exonerated.

Gov. Merriam has filed his decision in the case of Hans O. Petersen, who was suspended from the office of county treasurer of Hennepin county pending an investigation of charges of malfeasance in office. After the suspension T. J. Buxton was elected treasurer ad interim and now holds the office. By the decision of Gov. Merriam Mr. Buxton will step down and out and Mr. Petersen will step up and in.

Double Murder at Duluth.

Frank Hank, bartender for James Cogin at West Duluth, shot Jack Murphy and Jack Haggarty in Cogin's saloon. Haggarty died an hour later and Murphy could not live. The shooting was the result of an old quarrel. After the affair the murderer stepped behind the bar, helped himself to about $25 from the till and fled, but was captured and placed in jail.

Denies Both the Stories.

Regarding the Duluth story that he is to be made a cardinal and sent to France as mediator to harmonize church differences, Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, says that the yarn was a unique falsification without the slightest basis of truth. He also characterizes the report that he is to be made cardinal and located at St. Louis as silly nonsense.

She Saw the Holy Apparition.

Miss Nellie Mullen, of Crookston, has returned from Iowa, and while there saw the apparition in the window of the Canton Catholic church. It appears only on certain hours of the day, she says, and thousands of people constantly come and go to view it. It looks like a picture of the Virgin and Child, but it is impossible to say what causes it.

An Express Messenger Gone.

For the last two years W. H. Smyth has been a United States express messenger, running between Winona and Green Bay. The other night he was due at St. Paul, but he got off at New London, claiming to be sick, and another man took his run. Since then nothing has been heard from him. About $1,000 is missing.

THAT PARROT.

It was some years ago, in an old-fashioned store,
That a parrot perched daily just over the door;
There he squinted at strangers, who stared up aghast,
And he chatted and swore at the urchins that passed.

But his master was quite a remarkable man,
A retailer of goods on a vigorous plan:
He'd a habit of swearing his prices were low,
And of saying, to clinch his assertions: "That's so."

This sagacious old parrot for many a day
Noted down every word that his master would say,
Till the oft-uttered phrase he at last came to know,
And his principal pastime was squawking: "That's so."

Once an elderly gentleman entered the store:
He was very much pleased with the bird at the door,
And he said to the owner: "My friend, do you know
That's a mighty fine bird?" Said the parrot: "That's so."

The old gentleman stared, with a look of surprise,
Like a person who scarcely can credit his eyes,
And exclaimed: "I declare, he is wonderful, though;
How distinctly he talks!" Said the parrot: "That's so."

And he marveled still more at the wonderful bird;
'Twas the plainest discourser he ever had heard:
And he said: "Will you sell him?" The owner said: "No."
"But I'll have him, I vow." Said the parrot: "That's so."

"Well, old fellow, I see you're determined to buy.
What's your offer? remember now, parrots are high."
"Forty dollars, by jingo! Come, say it's a go."
Said the owner: "Too cheap." Quoth the parrot: "That's so."

"Then I'll raise it to fifty." "Well, take him along;
But it's really letting him go for a song."
So the money was paid. "Now, away we will go,"
Quoth the buyer. The parrot responded: "That's so."

With delight in his heart and with pride in his eyes,
The old fellow went home with his gibbering prize,
Where he gleefully said to his wondering wife:
"There's a present. You never had such in your life."

"Did you buy it?" she asked him. "How much did you pay?"
For she feared he'd been fooling his money away.
"Why, I paid fifty dollars. Some money, it's true,
But you'll find he's well worth it. I bought him for you."

"Fifty dollars!" she said, in a voice of surprise,
With a frown on her brow and a flash in her eyes
"Ain't he worth it, my dear?" "Fifty dollars! why, no, You're a stupid old fool." Said the parrot: "That's so."

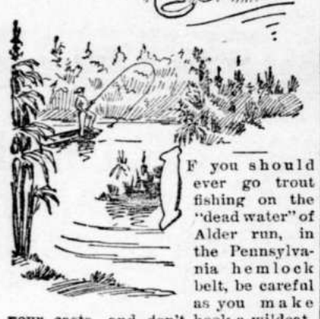
—Every Day.

A Queer Catch



If you should ever go trout fishing on the "dead water" of Alder run, in the Pennsylvania hemlock belt, be careful as you make your casts, and don't hook a wildcat, for if you do you may be put to a good deal of annoyance, and as like as not have your day's fishing spoiled. That is, if your wildcat should happen to have a disposition like the one had that my friend Harry Cavanaugh hooked the time he was fishing these dead waters. He was in charge at the time of a gang of men who were at work constructing one of the tram roads that the big lumber operators of the hemlock belt had then just begun to build in the isolated and mountainous forest tracts.

"I had heard," says he, "a good deal about the dead water of Alder run, and the big trout that had their home there, which were likely to always have their home there, because of the difficulties that lay in the way of anyone who sought to fish those waters. The dead waters extended for nearly a mile over a level stretch of the stream's bed, and were nowhere less than four feet deep. They were bordered on each side by an almost impenetrable thicket of alders, growing close to the edge, and in some places, where the stream was narrow, closing over it and hiding it from view. There were many narrow openings in this thicket where deer sought the creek to drink, and among the alders many hemlocks and other trees grew along the stream. In some places the dead waters were fifty feet wide, but the most of the stretch was narrow.

"In those days I enjoyed nothing so much as trout fishing. I had found excellent sport in the many wild streams in that locality, but felt that I could never go away from those woods entirely satisfied without trying what the dead waters of Alden run were capable of, and as the season grew my determination to get into those waters grew with it. At last I had one of my men make me a small, rude, flat-bottomed boat out of hemlock boards, had it carried to the head of the dead waters, two miles distant, and one humid, overcast June day I started in the rather unsteady and not entirely water-tight craft to fish through that virgin trout ground. The capacity of the dead waters was even greater than I had anticipated, and before I had fished one-quarter of the way through the dark stretch of stream I had landed a score or more of the biggest trout I had ever seen come from any brook—all of them of a dark color, with the crimson spots almost as brilliant as sparks of fire.

"My boat had drifted, aided by an occasional movement of the paddle, into a part of the creek where the alder borders were at least fifty feet apart. This big pool grew very narrow at its lower end, and a hundred feet from its head, and there the thick alders interlocked their branches over and in the water, and the creek disappeared from view as completely as if it had been swallowed up by the earth. On the right side of this broad extent of water was one of the deer openings in the thicket, and the soft dirt at the top of the creek showed by myriad tracks that deer were frequent visitors there. Just above that opening a hemlock tree reared its big stem, some of the lower branches on the upper side extending several feet out over the water.

"I had drifted along beneath these branches, and twenty feet below the tree. There I stood up in my boat to make a cast at the edge of a bunch of alders, some of whose limbs were stretched out on the surface of the water. As I threw my rod forward my hook stopped suddenly in the air behind me, and my reel hummed at the resistance. Simultaneously with the stopping of the hook a blood-curdling screech rent the air. I turned quickly about. I was just in time to see a big wildcat leap from the lower limb of the hemlock, and he was pointed straight for me, although there was a watery space between us, and all woodmen have always held that an intervening stretch of water is a sure barrier against the attacks of all fierce animals of the cat kind. My hook had caught somewhere in a tender spot on the wildcat, which had been crouching on the lower limb unknown to me, and the pain of the puncture had waked him instantly into uncontrollable fury.

"I was standing near the bow of the boat but moved quickly to the other end, and none too quickly, for the wildcat pounced into the boat on the spot where I had stood before I'd had time to steady myself in my new position. Then I saw that the hook was fast in one of the animal's ears, and a cat's ears are the most sensitive part of its body. The hook had gone clear through the tender membrane and the blood was trickling down in quite a stream. Fortunately the paddle was in the stern of the boat. As the big cat struck the boat it almost upset the clumsy craft. The enraged beast came for me again without an instant's delay. I met it with a blow from the paddle. The paddle flew into a dozen pieces. The disturbance in the boat was too much for the boat's equilibrium, and over it went, tumbling the wildcat and me into the water. We floundered there close together, and instead of the bath cooling down the wildcat's temper it seemed to make it hotter, and the ugly beast renewed the fight in the water.

"The boat, when it upset, was within a few feet of the foot of the pool, where the water disappeared behind the tangle of alders. I had nothing to defend myself with against the wildcat but my fists, and I pounded it with them, with very little effect, except to their own damage. The wildcat could swim like a duck, kept its head well out of water, and struck and bit at me with such quickness and agility that my sleeves were torn in strips in a very short time, and the blood began to flow from deep gashes on my hands and arms. I saw that in the struggle my hook had torn loose from the wildcat's ear, leaving a long and bleeding slit. The persistent animal kept up an unearthly yelling as it fought. We soon worked our way down against the wall of alders, and, as the struggle went on for a moment against it, I heard another screech, and presently another wildcat came tearing through the thicket to the edge of the pool. As this second ugly customer crouched as if to leap upon me to the aid of its mate, the alders that barred the channel gave way, and my cat and I floundered through the maze. Below it the creek was ten feet wide between the alders, which closed above it in a regular canopy of netted branches, nowhere more than three feet high. It was almost as dark as night in that low-vaulted watery tunnel. The channel was straight, and far below I could see a small circle of light, where the creek emerged again into open water.

"As we disappeared through the dense alders the other wildcat bounded into the thicket and made toward the spot. I could hear him crashing through, screeching as he came, and finally saw the tall bushes swaying before him as he drew nearer. I had changed my tactics in my struggle with my wildcat, and was trying to force it beneath the surface and hold it under long enough to drown it, but the cat was too active and supple, and about all I succeeded in doing was to lessen the quantity of my clothing and add to the slashings in my flesh. I had been struggling with the wildcat a minute, perhaps, in that close, dark passage, where the water was fully six feet deep, when I saw the two fiery eyes of its mate appear in the alders, where he had thrust his head through on the opposite side. That wildcat, though, hesitated to take to the water, even to help his mate, but I didn't know how long he would be of that mind, and consequently saw the importance of getting the best of one fierce contestant before another joined in the fight. I resolved on a desperate move, but one that would be decisive if it were successful. Watching my opportunity I seized the wildcat with both hands by the throat, and, holding it at arm's length, dove to the bottom, taking the cat with me. My breath was short, owing to the long and hard struggle in the water, but I had good lungs. I put all my strength in that clutch on the wildcat's throat. The cat struggled desperately, but at about the time when I found I must return to the surface it gave one tremendous kick and hung heavy and motionless in my hands. I knew it was dead, and dropped the carcass and rose to the surface, with just about strength enough left to grab an alder bush and hold myself up. If that wildcat's mate had tackled me then he would have found me an easy victim, for I could have made no defense. He pushed his head and half of his body beyond the edge of the bushes, and his eyes almost lit up the place, they blazed so when they fell on me. Then with a yell, which in the close confines of that watery tunnel was indescribably terrible, he turned and went crashing away through the thicket.

HOOKED BY THE EAR.

"My strength gradually returned and after awhile I was able to make my way back through the alders at the head of the dark and narrow channel and out into the open pool. My upturned boat was lodged against the alders. I pushed it to the deer opening, righted it, and with a long pole poled it back to my starting place, and struck out for home. My fish and tackle were lost. Although the gashes and scratches on my hands and arms were numerous, they were not as serious as they seemed, and in a week or so I was able to repeat my fishing trip, much to my enjoyment. I also spent an evening with a jack and a rifle at that deer opening, and got a fat and juicy buck and a doe. I believe, also, that the big wildcat I tumbled from that hemlock branch just at dusk that same evening was the mate of the wildcat I drowned in the alder tunnel. He was lurking there, as his mate had been, I have no doubt, with the hope of springing on a fawn that might come into the creek at that watering place."

THE FIGHT IN THE WATER.

SPEED OF SHOOTING STARS.

Swarms of Them Flashing Through Space at a Prodigious Rate.

The shooting stars are small bodies, weighing at most a few pounds and consisting mainly of iron and carbon. They traverse space in swarms and also revolve around the sun in long, elliptical courses like the comets. When these little bodies enter the earth's orbit they are deflected toward the earth and Public Opinion says great numbers are seen in a single night. Their brightness is due to the heat engendered by the energy of their motion. Their speed is enormous—namely, forty-two and a half kilometers a second, while the speed of the earth on its orbit is only twenty-five kilometers a second, forward. Consequently when a shower of them approaches the earth in the direction opposite to its course, the initial speed is seventy-two kilometers a second; when they follow on its course they gain sixteen and a half kilometers a second on it, their mean rate of approach being thirty to forty kilometers a second. The friction engenders a temperature of three thousand degrees Celsius, subject to which they burst into flame. If under these conditions their substance is not vaporized they pass through and beyond the upper strata of our atmosphere and pursue their proper course around the sun, but as a rule they are vaporized, in which case the vapor mingles with the atmosphere, to fall later as meteoric dust. In this manner we come in contact annually with one hundred and forty-six milliards of shooting stars, which add considerably to the earth's substance.

A Hungry Man's Dreams.

One of the worst evils attending penal servitude is said to be the hunger which assails a man with a healthy appetite during the first few months or years of his imprisonment. A man who has just done a long term for forgery says: "I used to go to bed every night pinched by hunger. I began dreaming of banquets and would have thought nothing strange about it had not the same dream come to me every night. The banquet was always the same, in the same place, and I always had the same place at the table. The exasperating thing about it was that just as the first course was offered I always awoke, so that even in my dreams I was not permitted to taste of the munificent spread which was nightly presented to me in my sleep. I dreaded to go to bed because the dream tortured me. It only made me the hungrier, and I then understood the agony of Tantalus, the fabled hero who was tortured with thirst, and to whose lips the waters were ever coming, and receding just as he was in the act of taking a drink."—Boston Globe.

A Convenient Paper Weight.

An Italian cure was about making a journey. Many friends called to say good-by, and, as had happened before, each gave him a paper on which was jotted down a list of things which the writer wished the traveler to purchase for him. Only one of these friends accompanied his memorandum with the necessary money. This one friend's commission the cure carefully executed, and delivered the articles to him.

When the others called for their goods, he said:

"Soon after I sailed I took out all your papers to look them over and classify them. I laid them on the deck before me. Suddenly there came a gust of wind, and they were all blown away. I could not remember what they contained, and so I could not do your errands."

"But," they objected, "you bought what so and so asked you to get."

"Oh yes," said the cure. "You see he inclosed the cash with his memorandum, and that kept it from blowing away."—Youth's Companion.

Not an Upstart.

Public men, if they are to be successful, must learn to stifle personal prejudices. Prince Talleyrand, who shifted his politics so skillfully that he served under several distinct and contradictory political systems in France, learned this lesson very early.

When M. Thiers, who was of humble origin, began to rise in the world, Talleyrand treated him with great consideration. This greatly displeased a high-bred lady of the prince's acquaintance.

"What!" she exclaimed; "do you receive this upstart?"

"Madame," Talleyrand answered, "he is not an upstart. He has got up!"—Youth's Companion.

—Featherstone—"I wish you would come and help me select some trousers, old man." Ringway—"I don't believe my taste is any better than yours." Featherstone (hopefully)—"No; but your credit is."—Tid-Bits.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—An inexpensive and acceptable wedding present is a glove-case, a handkerchief-case and a night-gown case all made of the same material and scented with violet sachet powder.—N. Y. Tribune.

—Ham Omelet: Beat half a dozen eggs separately, very light. Have ready a spider with three tablespoonfuls of hot butter, and then pour in the eggs. Let them brown on the bottom and on top, then spread over it a cup of finely-chopped ham; fold the omelet over, take up and serve immediately.—Boston Budget.

—Bread and Butter Pudding: Cut bread in rather thin slices, remove the crusts, lay the buttered slices in a pudding dish and sprinkle currants liberally over the bread layers. When the dish is nearly full pour a boiled custard over it; bake fifteen to twenty minutes. Serve with sauce.—Orange Judd Farmer.

—Orange Fritters: Beat three eggs very light, then stir in one pint of milk, a teaspoonful of salt, one quarter of a pound of butter, and one pound of flour. Remove the rind and white pith from four oranges and divide into sections without breaking the skin. In each spoonful of batter put a piece of orange, and fry to a golden brown. Sift white powdered sugar over each when taken from the pan. Dish on a napkin and serve immediately.—Housekeeper.

—Plain Omelet: Four eggs, one tablespoonful of flour, two tablespoonfuls of milk; beat two eggs and the yolks of the other two with the egg-beater until very light; sift in the flour, add the milk and a pinch of salt; then beat the whites of the other two eggs very light and add; put a small piece of butter in a smooth spider; shake the spider so that the butter greases it well; then pour in the omelet, and watch closely until it is cooked on the bottom; loosen from the spider, set in the oven on the top grate for two minutes to cook it on top; slip out on to a plate and serve. Small omelets, with only two eggs, are easy to cook, and preferred to larger ones.—N. Y. Observer.

—Quaking Pudding: Break some stale bread into small pieces. Take a double stew-pan and place in it a layer of bread crumbs, then sprinkle in some raisins, then another layer of bread crumbs and more raisins, and so on until the pudding is as large as desired. Make a custard with five eggs, one quart of sweet milk, a cup of sugar, and seasoning to suit the taste. Pour this over the bread and raisins and let stand two hours. Then place on the stove and steam one hour and a half, or until the custard hardens. When done set off to cool a little, then run a knife around the edge between the kettle and the pudding to loosen it. Turn it out on a deep plate and you will have a pudding true to its name.—Home.

UPHOLSTERING CHAIRS.

Some Directions that May Be Found Helpful in Many a Home.

To upholster chairs the cane seats of which are broken, begin by removing the superfluous bits of cane and cover the space with a matting formed of three-inch wide canvass belting woven together. Tack it temporarily in place. After placing over this some coarse, strong muslin, draw both smoothe, and secure at the edge with twine, making use of the perforations. Remove the tacks, turn the raw edges over toward the center, and baste all down smoothly. Arrange the curled hair, or wool, or whatever you propose using for stuffing, and keep it in position by basting over it a piece of muslin. Then very carefully fit the rep or plush on your selected covering, pinning it into place, then tacking down permanently. Cover the edge galloon to match the cover, using this time tiny ornamental tacks, and tie with an upholsterer's needle in as many places as is desirable, having a button on the upper side (this button is a mold made of turned wood covered with circles of the same material used as a cover.) Turn the chair over and tack on a lining to the under side of the seat. If the back of the chair is to be repaired the lining should be neatly put on the back with fancy tacks.

The writer of this has a chair of the days of that French king, Louis, whose taste we modern folks never question, but rather allow to dictate and guide us—a graceful chair whose cushion age had spoiled. I painted the framework with two coats of white enamel, then finished it with a curled hair cushion, and covered it with—well, where do you suppose that dark green brocaded silk velvet (so deftly patched from little pieces by A. R. T.) ever figured? Give it up? It was once a beautiful bodice worn at concerts by a friend—Mme. Julia Reve King—America's first pianiste!—Detroit Free Press.

Cereals for Breakfast.

Almost all families are fond of cereals of some sort for breakfast. As a welcome change from oatmeal and cracked wheat, many families will be glad to try a comparatively new article, which is brought out under the name of farinose. It is identical with the preparation known as wheatena, but is sold at a price a little more than half of that article. Both preparations are made at the same mills, and consumers of the one would not be able to distinguish between the two. It is very easily prepared, all that is required being a little boiling water, with salt, into which the farinose is stirred until of the proper consistency. It boils in a moment, and is served with cream or milk. Some persons add a little sugar, but this does not improve it for the majority of tastes. This farinose makes a most delicious gruel made thin with half milk and half water; or or made somewhat thicker than regular gruel and diluted with a little cream, it is at once a most dainty and comforting dish for the sick, and will be relished when most other cereals would be rejected.—N. Y. Ledger.

In Making Jams.

There is a great difference in the space of time used by housewives in making jams. Twenty minutes is the average time for most fruits, but others prefer to cook their fruit half an hour, or even an hour, and, as the old Scotch servant declared: "To boil the very judgment out o' it." Long cooking certainly destroys the natural flavor of any fruit, and in many cases renders it mucilaginous or candied. In other cases, a delicious and distinctive flavor is certainly developed by the process of long cooking, as in the case of the quince, which only thus attains its red, rich color and flavor.—N. Y. Tribune.

ST. LOUIS EN FETE.

The Exposition Opened—Additional Attractions Announced.

Gilmore's Band and Its Special Concerts—Extraordinary Success of the Street Illuminations and Electro-Pyrotechnic Display.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 7.—The exposition opened this evening in the presence of an enormous crowd, and its Ninth annual season was inaugurated in a most opportune and successful manner. It will continue open until October 22d, and four times daily. Gilmore's magnificent band of one hundred pieces will give its concerts. The band is even stronger than expected, and the programme includes an immense number of new and irresistable attactive tunes. Special nights are reserved for Irish, Scotch, German and American music, while two days will be devoted to quadro-centennial exercises. On October 1st the Travellers' Protective association will take charge of the building and one of the largest parades of traveling men ever seen will take place.

The illuminations continue to prove a glorious success and a never-failing source of entertainment to the crowds which throng the streets every evening. An illustration is given of the mammoth globe at the corner of Broadway and Olive street. No picture can convey an adequate idea of the extraordinary nature of this attraction. The globe revolves on its axis, and is studed with upward of 3,000 electric lights and globes, these marking out the outlines of the continents and oceans with geographical accuracy and a dazzling splendor which must be seen to be appreciated.

All the railroads running to St. Louis, and their name is legion, are making exceptionally low rates to the city, and the opportunity to visit a great metropolitan center and to enjoy a magnificent carnival is one that it would be foolish to ignore.

FOR THE MATRON.

What Is Suitable for the Woman in Her Prime to Wear.

A dear delightful woman of forty complained the other day that there was no help for her in the fashion hints given by our writers in the various newspapers, and that she must depend on her own and her modiste's ideas to evolve a suitable and pleasing costume.

"You cater for the young," she said, "and, though most enjoyable reading, it is of no earthly good to me. What I want to know is how can a woman inclined to stoutness, with more than one gray hair in the once brown locks, dress so as not to look either like her own grandmother or her youngest daughter." Now, this is the question we are going to take up and give a few simple hints that may prove helpful to this perplexed dame and many others in the same state of mind.

For summer wear the grenadines and China silks in black or with small patterns of neutral colors are always lovely. These, made up with a slightly draped bell skirt and a basque with vest front, a little lace trimming or a heading of jet, make suitable as well as quite up-to-date gowns.

Do not go in for ribbon bows. They are for the very youthful. Avoid, likewise, light colors, unless, indeed, you choose gray with trimmings of black. That is always lovely. Do not adopt elaborate trimmings. The simpler styles do not emphasize the marks of time as the more ornate decorations are apt to do.

Hat trimmings, such as silk or braid passementeries or very fine pieces of jet, are far preferable to lace yokes, ruffles, or chiffon jabots. A bit of real lace at the neck and the dainty ruffles at throat and wrists are not looked upon as trimmings, but part and parcel of the gracious lady past her first youth. Bonnets are not necessities, but are always the most in keeping, yet this season large black hats will be much worn by the matron. Of course these are not bent into fantastic shapes or bedecked with the nodding sprays of the girlish Leghorn. But lace and ribbon, usually black with rings of jet or steel, make a most desirable and effective bit of millinery.

You can not go far wrong if you avoid the bizarre and stick to the quiet tones and non-ultra styles which look well on both old and young.—Philadelphia Press.

Aid to the Afflicted.

The tramp walked into a Jefferson avenue store with an air of deep dejection.

"I beg your pardon," he said to the proprietor, "but can you give a poor suffering man something?"

"Certainly," responded the proprietor blithely, "here's a bottle of Jamaica ginger. I guess that will make you feel better," and the disgusted tramp growled and went off without it.—Detroit Free Press.

Peculiarities of Birds and Animals.

"Some animals exhibit a queer lack of sense," says a man who has observed them. "Put a buzzard in a pen about six feet square, and open at the top, and it is as much of a prisoner as though it were shut up in a box. This is because buzzards always begin their flight by taking a short run, and they either can not or will not attempt to fly unless they can do so. Again, take a common bumblebee and put it in a goblet. It will remain a prisoner for hours, trying to escape through the sides, without ever thinking of escaping from the top. So also a bat can not rise from a perfectly level surface. Although it is remarkably nimble in its flight when once on the wing, and can fly for many hours at a time without taking the least rest, if placed on the floor or on flat ground it is absolutely unable to use its wings. The only thing it can do is to shuffle helplessly and painfully along until it reaches some trifling elevation, from which it can throw itself into the air, when at once she is off like a flash. —N. Y. Tribune.

CAUTION.—Beware of dealers substituting shoes without W. L. Douglas name and the price stamped on bottom. Such substitutions are fraudulent and subject to prosecution by law for obtaining money under false pretences.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN.

A genuine sewed shoe that will not rip; fine Calf, seamless, smooth inside, flexible, more comfortable, stylish and durable than any other shoe ever sold at the price. Equals custom-made shoes costing from $4 to $5.

The only $3.00 Shoe made with two complete soles, securely sewed at the outside edge (as shown in cut), which gives double the wear of cheap welt shoes sold at the same price, for such easily rip, having only one sole sewed to a narrow strip of leather on the edge, and when once worn through are worthless.

The two soles of the W. L. DOUGLAS $3.00 Shoe when worn through can be repaired as many times as necessary, as they will never rip or loosen from the upper.

Purchasers of footwear desiring to economize, should consider the superior qualities of these shoes, and not be influenced to buy cheap welt shoes sold at $3.00, having only appearance to commend them. W. L. DOUGLAS Men's $4 and $5 Fine Calf, Hand Sewed; $3.50 Police and Farmers; $2.50 Fine Calf; $2.25 and $2.00 Workingmen's; Boys' $2.00 and Youths' $1.75 School Shoes; Ladies' $3.00 Hand Sewed; $2.50, $2.00 and Misses' $1.75 Best Dongola, are of the same high standard of merit.

Will give exclusive sale to shoe dealers and general merchants where I have no agents. Write for catalogue. If not for sale in your place send direct to Factory, stating kind, size and width wanted. Postage free. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

DELANO DIARY

—All kinds of job work neatly done at this office.

—The Wright County Fair opens on Tuesday, Sept. 20, at Howard Lake.

—The ladies of the M. E. church expect to hold a fair in the near future.

—James Lindsley, of Montrose, met his death last night in the flames of his burning building.

—The Health Officer is in receipt of a proclamation concerning the cleaning up of villages before cholera comes. Let our city council take warning.

—W. R. Baldwin of Duluth, candidate for Congress, and John E. Stryker of St. Paul, will be present and address the convention today.

—The M. E. Ladies' Aid Society will hold a Golden Rod social at the residence of Mrs. J. D. Young, on Wednesday evening next. Everybody invited.

—Our business men appear to be regaining their spirits as the fall trade begins to open up. The cool frosty nights act as stimulants to trade in woolens and clothing.

—Gentlemen are requested by the Cleveland Club, to refrain from smoking in the Convention Hall, as many ladies are requested to be in attendance, and the large majority of our ladies are not smokers.

—It is quite bad enough to see some of the leading men of the village engaged in tooting tr-ra-ra and such on the Sabbath day. But when they bring along and display their stock in trade it shows they have an eye to business.

—Sam Pape, our effictuant and gentlemanly day operator at the G. N. depot has taken up his abode with our neighbors at Wright county's Dublin for a brief season. Sam was one of the few Hill men in this country, but says Adlai is all right.

—We extend to all visitors to Delano on the occasion of the Democratic county convention to-day a hearty welcome, on behalf of the citizens of Delano, and on our own account, would invite all to call on us at our office, opposite the depot, and see where Simon pure democracy, unadulterated, is served out to our readers every Friday.

—Prof. Bohn has been engaged on a salary by the Delano cornet band and at the rehearsels on Tuesday and Friday evenings is as conspicuous as ever. The band is a nice thing to have in town and people enjoy its sweetest strains on many occasions. And no one has contributed more to this end than has the professor.

—On Saturday afternoon Senator A. Y. Eaton, of Buffalo, was seen on our streets consulting with some of his followers. In the evening a Republican caucus was held at the city hall, when O. L. Billings and Ignatius Gutzwiller, Jr., were placed in nomination for the first delegate. A ballot was taken resulting in the election of O. L. Billings. Others elected were F. F. Chancellor, Ed. Kelsey, Adam Horsch, and Chas. Vorse, post master.

—On Sunday evening Rev. J. R. Davies preached an eloquent sermon to a large and appreciative audience, on the subject of a good name. Before beginning the regular services the choir and congregation joined in singing several regular old fashioned Methodist hymns much to the enjoyment of everybody as each vied with the other in "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name," "Beautiful Words" and "There is a Fountain Filled With Blood." A few moments of song service as a prelude to the services would be approved of by every one and serve to quiet the audience and get them in better condition to receive the gospel truths from the minister's lips.

—A Democratic caucus was called to order on Wednesday evening by T. J. Catlin of the committee. Geo. P. Schaffer was chosen chairman and R. M. Bohn, Secretary. The following delegates were chosen to attend the county convention, to be held here today:

M. A. O'Hair, J. C. Hitz, C. Marth, E. H. Bowen, Jos. Bauman, Wm. Sturman, Jr., George Goodrich, and Henry Buck.

The meeting adjourned, and the delegates living in the village occupied the rear end of the hall while those from the country took the front seats and each selected a committee.

Village committee, M. A. O'Hair, A. W. Wittman and C. J. Hitz.

Township committee, Joseph Bauman, C. Marth and Clark Sturman.

—Johnson's Cidar Vinegar for pickling purposes is the best in the market. Warranted absolutely pure. Three years old. For sale by C. H. GREEN & Co.

—Cleveland Club committees for the Democratic county convention are—Decoration, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hitz, Sam. Murphy and Mrs. Louis Bock; instrumental music, Charles Wiese; vocal music, Henry Grafft, Mesdames A. W. Wittman and M. A. O'Hair; teams, Ennis Brandon, August Bernick, Sam Murphy and Henry Bock; seats, Catlin and Goodrick; badges, Coolen and Probst.

—The seats for delegates at the Convention have been arranged so that each commissioner district sits by itself, and each Township's place is marked by a card in sight of all, and each delegate will be provided with a badge so that he willl be known to the ushers and conducted to his place in the hall. Plenty of room for, others than delegates will be found in the rear of the room, while the band and newspaper reporters will be seated near the chairman of the convention.

—On Monday the case of Thomas Shaw vs. J. W. Parsons which was adjourned until that time came before Justice Catlin again. F. H. Lindsley appearing as attorney for defendant asked to file an answer which privilege was granted. The answer being filed the plaintiff made affidavit that he fear-he the justice would not from prejudice and bias, give him a fair trial. M. A. O'Hair his attorney moved for a change of venue which motion was granted. The case being sent to Justice Herman Otto, to be heard on Tuesday, Sept. 20th.

Personals.

E. H. Westinghouse, of Waverly, was in town on Monday evening.

Chester Johnson, of Rockford, took supper at Young's Hotel on Sunday evening.

Mr Stryker, of St. Paul, speaks this evening in the hall.

John Tracy, of Cokato, was the GAZETT'S earliest visitor this morning, about 6 A. M.

Chas. S. Hawker, returned on Monday to his studies at Hamline University.

Messrs Riggs and Fuller, of Monticello, were the first delegates to arrive. They drove over yesterday.

Mrs. C. J. Buckley, and son and daughter, returned Monday frmm a protracted visit to Hamline.

Messrs. Lamson, of Cokato, and Westinghouse of Waverly, rival aspirants for County Auditor, visited Delano this week.

William Dallas visited Minneapolis on Wednesday. He is now enjoying a visit with his father from Corcoran town.

County Cullings.

Judge J. C. Nethaway, Democratic candidate for Attorney General, and whom many Wright county people will remember as one of the most interesting and effective speakers in the campaign, and Lars. M. Rand one of Minneapolis' leading citizens, spoke at a Democratic meeting at Cokato Monday evening.

It is perfectly disgusting to the true Democrat as it is to the true Republican or any other man who has a spark of patriotism, or even a sprinkling of principle, to hear of the proposed trades, and fusions of the different parties for the sole purpose of procuring office, regardless of right or wrong, suggested by different individuals.

LONG LAKE.

The farmers of this vicinity are busy now threshing. The three different threshers of our vicinity, Carr, Hursh, and Weier, seem to have all that they can do although the yield is limited.

Mrs. D. A. Lydiard and daughter, Miss Villa, are visiting at Hutchinson.

Joseph Butz, of Traverse county, arrived in this village on his way to visit his friends in his former home in Medina.

Dr. Wakefield, with his wife, daughter and niece, of Hutchinson, are visiting relatives in this vicinity.

Wm. Hursh left on Wednesday evening to resume his studies at the Minneapolis Academy during its winter session.

Chas. Heath, formerly station agent at this place and latterly of Arizona, is visiting with his bride at D. A. Lydiard's.

Michael Huntsberger has traded some property in this village to Dr. Shaw, of Minneapolis, for property in Rice Lake Park, near Minnehaha. Dr. Shaw intends locating in our village.

HISTORICAL FACTS.

Pioneer Days In The Region North of Lake Minnetonka.

Written for the BUFFALO GAZETTE, by HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

MINNETRISTA.

Samuel Wilson, father of George Wilson, settled near St. Bonifacius in 1853 with his family. He was a Pennsylvanian.

During the early years of the German settlement at St. Bonifacius, about 1855, a Catholic congregation was organized there, who then erected a log structure as a place of worship. This congregation it is claimed was first organized by Father Shaver. The log structure was superceded some years later by a larger church edifice.

The German Baptist congregation was organized in 1858 in which Rev. John Wendt and Charles Wendt were prominent, and during the early years of the existance of this society a church building was erected.

In 1855 Capt. Frank W. Halstead settled on upper Minnetonka on the premises known as the Hermitage. He was a member of a prominent New Jersey family and about 1849, at the age of sixteen he accompanied his three brothers by way of Cape Horn to California, returning to New Jersey in 1850, and came to Minnetrista in 1855. He was a lover of sea life and in 1861 on the breaking out of the Rebellion enlisted in the naval service. On the termination of the war returned to his home on upper Minnetonka, where in 1866 he erected the building known as the Hermitage, where he resided as a much loved and respected citizen till his tragic death which took place in 1876. His body was found in the lake near Crane Island. There is a question still existing among old settlers as to the cause of his death, although a coroners jury brought in a verdict of suicide. It may have occurred by accident after all: no one witnessed the scene, and taking into consideration the fact that accidental drownings on our lakes even among expert boatmen are of frequent occurrence, there is much plausibility in the idea that the drowning of Capt. Frank W. Halstead occurred by accident only.

In 1856 Daniel Black settled in Minnetrista. In 1857 Frederick A Jennings, Sr., father of Frederick A. Jennings, previously mentioned in connection with Orono, came to Minnetrista with the rest of the family and settled on land previously selected by the son. James G. Jennings, now of Minnetrista, was another son and there were also several daughters.

Settlers of 1858 were: Fritz Seiffert, Wm. Nagel, F. Logelin, Math A. Logelin, Br. Wm. Jackson, father of the Jackson brothers. In 1859, John A. Brerstettle, Martin Orth, Henry Zanger, John Maerz, Bernard Blotz, Henry Rehbin, Joseph Forner, C. Otto, Chas. Harmon, G. Hettke, Jacob Dull.

It was early in the spring of 1859 that the town of Minnetrista became organized. The first election was held at the house of Mathew S. Cook when the following officers were elected: Supervisors, Peter Mitchels, chairman; M. S. Cook and Ephraim Dudley; town clerk, R. V. Langdon.

SCHOOLS.

On Sept. 28, 1859, on petition of John Wendt and others, School Dist. No. 70 was established by the county board. It embraced territory about St. Bonifacius, and on Jan. 4, 1860, school district number 82 was established on petition of C. J. Braman and others. It embraced territory in Independence and Minnetrista and is latterly known as the Jackson Dist. In 1881 under a different statute three districts were established in Minnetrista, which affected or superceded those already established by the county board in town.

Settlers of 1860: John Kieser, Jacob Schleb, Wm. Freunshap, Chas. Roth, Isador Lay, Richard Dressell. 1861: Jacob Wehle, Jacob Robben, John Bosch. 1862: Wm. Luettke, Lambert Lanman, Warren Merriman, Horace Merriman, Carl Klein, Frederick C. Maltby, Esq., Joseph Horn. F. C. Maltby was an attorney by education and was called on frequently to appear before justice courts in behalf of his clients. 1863: L. Schuler, John Baillie, James Baillie.

Soldiers: Franz Pahl, Fred Lieders Tobias Pahl, Frank McCarwan, Edwin Jackson, Henry Jackson, Wm. H. Sutherland, D. D. Sutherland, G. W. Braman, Norman Shook, Richard Dressell, J. C. Baillie, M. V. B. Sutherland.

THE men who have been broken down, in any way, have usually said of the destrover beforehand: "It will not hurt me." They have said this of overwork, of exposure, of moral evil, of pollution, of strong drink, of opium of evil companionship, of deviation from strict integrity. They have fallen victims, too, and their bones are bleaching on the sands. Any sole is safe who walks, trustfully and obediently, with Christ, fearing sin in any mode and any measure. Any sole is in danger who underestimates the power of sinful habit and thinks that in his own strength he is free from harm and death—Herald and Presbyter.

World's Fair Notes.

A creole kitchen, with native cooks and waiters, and dishes prepared in creole style, will be a striking adjunct to the exhibit which Louisiana will make at the World's Fair.

In the Minnesota building at the World's Fair will be exhibited the old printing press upon which the first newspaper printed in the state—The Minnesota Pioneer—was run off in 1849.

A model of ocean currents is to be exhibited at the World's Fair which will possess great practical value. This model, which is a huge scientific tank, is made to represent the surface of the earth spread out on an aera of about 30 feet square, the ocean and seas being shown by actual water, are ejected through pipes under the model so that the whole body of water moves exactly as the ocean currents move. The direction of water is shown by a white powder on the surface of the water. Near the model will be placed a large map giving the fullest details of the force, volume and direction of the various ocean currents.

Ten almond trees in full bearing will be transplanted in the exposition grounds at Chicago from San Joaquin county California. They will be furnished by P. B. Armstrong, president of the Armstrong Fruit and Nut Company, which owns an orchard of 1,015 acres—one of the largest in the world. Mr. Armstrong will also make a display of peaches, no one of which will be less than a foot in circumference.

Over Michigan's building at the World's Fair will float a large American flag, made of Belding silk by the women of Ionia county of that state.

Illinois will have an exhibit in its state World's Fair building of specimens of all the indigenous woods of the state. In order to secure uniformity each specimen will be about 42 inches long and consist of a section of the trunk. It will be cut in such manner as to show the grain from the surface to the center. On each specimen will be painted a picture of the leaf and fruit of the tree.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage duly made, executed and delivered by G. O. Trow and his wife Abbie Trow, as mortgagors, to George E. Ball as mortgagee, bearing date the first day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty seven (1887) with a power of sale therein contained, which mortgage was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Wright and State of Minnesota on the twenty-second (22) day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven (1887), at nine (9) o'clock a. m. in book four (4) of mortgages on page one (1).

Whereas said mortgage was given to secure the payment at maturity of the sum of nine hundred ($900) dollars with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, according to the conditions of ten (10) cupon notes bearing even dates with said mortgage. Whereas said mortgagee did on the 33th day of April 1892 pay taxes for the years 1890 and 1891 then due and unpaid as follows, to-wit: For the year 1890 the sum of ten dollars and seventy eight cents, for the year 1891, the sum of thirty-nine dollars and forty-eight cents, which sum is also claimed to be recovered as an additional loan on said lands and whereas there is claimed to be due and there is due and unpaid on said mortgage and on the notes secured thereby at the date of this notice the sum of ten hundred and sixty-two dollars and seventy cents ($1062.70) principle and interest besides the taxes paid as aforesaid, and interest on said taxes amounting to the sum of one dollar and forty cents and whereas no proceedings at law or in equity has been instituted to recover said mortgage debt or taxes as aforesaid, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sail of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage to-wit: Lot number one (1) and block number thirteen (13) situated in the village of Cokato, Wright county, Minnesota, according to the duly recorded plat of record, in the Register of Deeds office in and for the county of Wright and state of Minnesota, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Wright county at the front door of the court house in the village of Buffalo in said county on Thursday, the twenty-ninth (29) day of September, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two (1892) at two o'clock p. m. at public vendue to the highest bidder, for cash, to pay said mortgage debt, principle and interest and taxes paid as aforesaid with costs of these proceeings, together with the sum of thirty-five ($35) dollars attorney's fee stipulated in said mortgage to be paid in case of foreclosure.

Dated August 13, 1892.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

D. W. LAWLER.

Minnesota's next Governor.

"Will be no man's man, and wear no man's collar."

IF the Alliance party is in earnest in its protestations against the rottenness of the old parties whose ranks they have just left it is hardly likely they will embrace with open arms the rottenest move of all and join with Democracy in putting up a ticket for the legislature which, when elected, will satisfy neither party to the bargain.

THE one great issue of the campaign is the tariff question. On this issue the president stands or falls. On this issue the legislative fight should be made, and not on whether this or that man goes to or stays at home from the legislature. Right is bound to prevail. It may be mixed up with wrong and kept back for a time but the people know their rights and dare maintain them.

IF you wish to break up an army take away the officers of their choice, and replace them with new men not in accord with their views concerning the cause in which they are engaged. If you wish to demoralize a political party allow an interested man or two to so manipulate things as to deprive the voters of their choice for leaders, succeed in changing the principles for which they are contesting and the thing is done.

THE Graphic, Chicago, for September 17, contains an elaborately illustrated article on the State University of Minnesota. The sketch contains a comprehensive outline of the University courses, and a concise historical review. Views of all the principal buildings are given, and portraits of the principal instructors and others who are or have been identified with the institution. The excellent wood engravingof President Northrup will be much appreciated by his friends.

WE have every reason to believe Mr. S. M. Owens to be a first-class gentleman. A man of principle, as he has shown on several occasions. Not a man seeking "office" but rather to advance the "cause" he advocates for these reasons we respect him. But we doubt his accepting the position of U. S. Senator at the hands of fusion legislators imposed upon his followers, and upon the Democrats, by schemers. Some man who will accept will be found, a man whom neither party will care to have.

Legislative Chances.

The ticket placed in nomination by the Republicans is sure to be cut. Two men on the ticket are most likely doomed to defeat if the Democrats improve their opportunity and place in nomination four straight men; they stand a good chance of electing two, and possibly four legislators, who, when they get to the Capitol will be Democrats. Whereas, if they fuse with the People's party all they can hope to have or can possibly get is what they nominate, men who hold "office" dearer than principles.

A Public Office A Public Trust.

One thing that endears Grover Cleveland to the heart of every patriotic American citizen is the knowledge that Grover Cleveland believes this and is not afraid to act on his idea. The same holds good along this line. What gives S. M. Owen his faithful followers and the respect of all men is the same idea, the faithful adhereance to principles firmly believed in by him, and the refusal to run for office on other principles. Preferring right, to office. If our country had more men in the ranks that would dare face their leaders when they undertake to lead in wrong paths and "knowing their rights dare maintain them" fewer wrong leaders would be found.

Strength vs. Weakness.

"In unity there is strength" is an old saying, and it is so to-day. It is as much so concerning the make-up of the Democratic ticket as in any thing else. The ticket so far as made is a very good one, and needs only to be completed according to the wishes of the voters and not the schemers, to make it an exceptionally strong one. One that will win on its merits, and on its principles. But when men who are the choice of the people, who entertain true principles of Democracy are thrust aside with an "away with your honesty, and away with your principles" air, to make place for men who are willing to be Democrats, or be Peoples party, men who are looking out for number one, it is about time to call a halt. It is unnecessary to go into details here, the matter is quite well understood and will require a vast amount of "fixing" a thing hard to do under the new system of voting, before reparation can be made. Most likely the fusion ticket will be elected, if nominated, but what will become of the county ticket? It is weakness to divide the party by placing a People's legislative ticket in the field to work for itself. It is strength to place four good Democrats on the legislative ticket to work for the WHOLE ticket, and the chances to secure two at least of the legislative ticket are excellent.

That Pill Argument,

After exhausting other arguments in favor of a fusion with the People's party one of the participants in the move said to a solid Democrat, who he was earnestly trying to convince to his way of thinking "you can't swallow a pill and hold it in your hand" to which he received the unanswerable reply, "neither can you take a pill and not feel the effects of it." Now pills, as everybody understands, are for the purpose of purifying the system, and people are not fond of taking them oftener than is actually necessary

Two years ago the Democrats of Wright county took a "pill" administered by some "quacks" and have not yet recovered from its drastic effects. They had fixed up for them a ticket with several candidates from the Democratic and several from the Republican party who had not succeeded or who were afraid they would fail of an election to our legislative halls, on their own tickets; who were either too timid, or could not get the chance to run on a party ticket, preferring "office" to "party principles" and Wright county Democrats were asked to swallow it. It was a bitter dose, nauseating to the Democratic digestive organs as pills usually are to the human anatomy. But it had its effect. And now we are asked to repeat the dose. Continually taking pills is bad practice, after you have had a dose or two there is apt to be rather a lax condition of things, and it is far more pleasant to desist for awhile, and give old nature a chance to recover herself. If the People's party principles are preferable to Democratic principles then were it better for the Democratic party to stop "keeping house" and move in with the People's party altogether, and not be fighting them on one end of the ticket and voting for them for the very office that would be of most use to our own party if filled with Democrats.

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Ticket Nominated.

On Friday last the delegates to the County Convention except those from Albion, Chatham, Clearwater and Stockholm, assembled at the City Hall, in Delano, to nominate a county ticket and choose delegates to the legislative convention.

The hall was nicely decorated with flowers, bunting and other beautifiers. A large picture of Cleveland adorned one side of the stage and one of Stevenson the other. The seats were arranged in such order as to allow the delegates to sit away from the visitors, of whom there were many from all parts of the county and some from Hennepin county.

The day was fine, and many ladies attended the convention. One noticeable innovation was that no smoking was done in the hall, the air being unclouded by tobacco smoke.

The Delano Cornet Band discoursed sweet music. The Delano Glee Club rendered some selections of campaign songs.

The orators of the occasion were mostly from Waverly, Messrs. McDonnell, Walsh and Kelly doing their share. Messrs. Cutting and Wendell, of Buffalo did some talking and Delano's spokesman was M. A. O'Hair.

William Quinn was made chairman and H. Tanner Secretary, and committees appointed as follows:

Credentials—J. H. Wendell, H. C. Bull, Louis Krack, J. F. McDonnell, G. A. Ruckoldt.

Permanent organization—Mark Foskett M. C. O'Danohoe, D. W. Flannigan, Levi Cochran, John Kennedy.

Resolutions—J. C. Hitz, J. N. Grafft, John Tracy, John Kelly, Henry Berning.

On motion a recess of 30 minutes was taken on re-assembling, the report of the committee on credentials was adopted. showing the following delegates entitled to seats in the convention:

Albion—Not represented.

Buffalo—J. H. Wendell, Louis Krack, Wm. Dedrick, Peter Bjorglund.

Chatham—J. C. Nugent.

Corinna—J. N. Grafft, J. J. Sheyer, S. H. McGuire.

Clearwater—Not represented.

Cokato—H. C. Bull, John Tracy, G. Mabusth.

Frankfort—Henry Berning, Joseph Reems, Huburt Dick, Frank Zackman, Frank Preiser, Joseph C. Neise.

Franklin—M. A. O'Hair, J. C. Hitz, Conrad Marth, E. Bowen, Joseph Bauman, Wm. Sturman Jr., George Goodrich, Henry Buck.

French Lake—M. C. O'Donohoe with authority to cast vote of town.

Maple Lake—Wm. Jude, Albert Westrup, Dan Flaherty, James A. O'Loughlin.

Marysville—Wm. Quinn, J. F. McDonnell, John Kelly, D. W. Flannigan, W. J. Walsh, H. C. Morneau.

Middleville—H. Tanner, Levi Cochrane, Leander Watson, Joseph Ferrell.

Monticello—T. G. Mealey, Ashley Riggs, E. E. Fuller.

Otsego—John Michaels, Thomas Walker, A. M. Sands.

Rockford—George Frederick, George Irving, G. A. Ruckold, I. P. Harvey.

Silver Creek—R. H. Melrose.

Southside—James Tracy, A. G. Lano, John Bullard.

Stockholm—not represented.

Victor—D. F. Jackson, O. M. Lloyd, Mark Fosket, Chas. Glanville.

Woodland—John Young, John Kennedy, Chas. O'Hara, Thomas Coyne. Jas. Powell.

The report of the committee on credentials was adopted.

The committee on permanent organization recommended that the temporary oeganization be made permanent. Report adopted.

The committee on resolutions reported the following:

We, the Democrats of Wright county in convention assembled, congratulate the Democratic party on the union and harmony prevailing in their ranks and we confidently predict the triumph of the principles we have espoused and the candidates we have nominated on the national, state, judicial and congressional tickets and the candidates we shall select today on the county and legislative ticket.

The report of the committee on resolutions was adopted.

On motion, a committee of five was appointed from each commissioner district to present the names of thirty-five delegates, one to be chosen at large by the chairman and seven from each commissioner district. The chair selected John Kelly as the delegate at large to the legislative convention and the following five were named from their respective districts.

1st district—J. P. Scheyer, James O'Loughlin, James Tracy, William Jude.

2d district—J. H. Wendell, Joseph Reems, A. C, Riggs, Henry Berning, Thomas Walker.

3d district—M. A. O'Hair. G. A. Ruckoldt, J. C. Hitz, Chas. O'Hara, George Fredericks.

4th district—H. Tanner, H. C. Morneau, W. J. Walsh, D. W. Flannigan, J. Ferrell.

5th district—John Tracy, H. C. Bull, D. T. Jackson, Mark Fosket, Charles Glanville.

On motion the convention adjourned until 2 o'clock, to allow the committee on delegates to the legislative convention to report.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Sept. 16, 1892.

It is both shameful and outrageous, nevertheless true, that an attempt is being made to use the National G. A. R. encampment, to be held here next week, to boom the Republican National ticket. It may, if persisted in, cause the ugliest sore of a row, as thousands of the veterans who will attend the encampment are Democrats who will not take kindly to seeing what ought to be a week of pleasure and recreation turned into a partisan political demonstration. Many members of the local citizen's committee, which has worked so hard all during the summer to raise the money and make the necessary arrangements to properly entertain the old soldiers, are Democrats, and they are not disposed to quietly stand by and see their work and money used to benefit a party to which they are bitterly opposed.

Prominent Republican officials have been quietly at work on the scheme for some time, and now, unless Providence interferes through the continuance of the much regretted illness of Mrs. Harrison and this prevents Mr. Harrison keeping up his end of the program, they think they have got every thing just as they want it and that the members of the G. A. R. can be sent home shouting for Harrison and Reid and scattering enthusiasm—an unknown quantity on the Republican side up to this time—around promiscuously. The programme of these schemers was completed several days ago when Whitelaw Reid was invited to attend the encampment, ostensibly as a war correspondent, really as the Republican candidate for Vice President. With Harrison and Ried both on the ground, both loaded to the muzzle with "taffy" for the "dear comrade," whose vote may be influenced, the concoctors of this political move expect great things; but they should remember that "great expectations" have in the past proved disappointing, and may do the same again.

The rumor of the intended resignation of our minister to Italy, Mr. Albert G. Porter, of Indiana, was started in anticipation of his obeying the command of Mr. Harrison to resign and come home to help save Indiana. The situation in that state is alarming to the Republicans and Mr. Porter's influence is more valuable at home just now than abroad. A friend of Porter's said to-day, "He may resign and come home to work for Harrison, but if he does I know it will be against his inclination. He knows that if he comes home he will have to share in the responsibility for the defeat of the party in his state and that it is bound to injure his future political prospects: whereas, if he remained abroad his friends could say: "If Porter had taken part in the campaign we might have escaped defeat."

The Democratic horrizon has taken on a a very roseate hue this week, and there is a corresponding feeling of depression among the Republicans, who look with dismay upon the falling off of their majority in Main and upon the unmistakable signs of Democratic harmony in New York state. The Democratic rooster is truly roosting high these September days, and when he opens his mouth in November his crow of victory will be heard by a rejoicing people, from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Mr. Lawrence Gardner, secretary of the National Association of Democratic Clubs, who has just returned from Democratic headquarters in New York, is enthusiastic over the outlook. "We have them on the run," said he, "and we propose to keep them going until election day." Mr. Gardner said: "Splendidly. They are doing a quiet but effective work in many localities among the doubtful voters that cannot be fully appreciated until the results of the election are in and can be compared with previous election returns."

The lawyers of the Department of Justice are trying to find some law under which immigration may be stopped, at least until Congress can get an opportunity to say what shall be done to protect the people of this country from the cholera. It is believed that Congress will be asked, upon the advice of medical experts, either to pass a bill prohibiting immigration for a stated period, of not less than one year, or to authorize the President to do so. The idea is that our greatest peril will come with the warm weather of next year.

CORRESPONDENCE

WAVERLY WISDOM.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. McKinney, of St. Paul, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Owen during the beginning of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace King, and Mr. and Mrs. Branshes, left for the big cities Tuesday.

The Waverly band played at the County Fair Wednesday.

The Waverly delegates and visitors to the late county convention at Delano speak in the highest praise for the citizens of that village, and the cordial treatment meeted out to everybody.

Mrs. John F. Walsh, of Minneapolis, is visiting with Mrs. D. W. Flannigan.

Dr. O'Hair and Miss Kemp were united in marriage by Father Guillot at St. Mary's church Tuesday morning and was witnessed by a large number of friends of the contracting parties. Miss Hannah O'Hair acted as bridesmaid and Mr. W. J. Walsh did the honors for the groom. After the ceremony the wedded pair with their immediate friends partook of a splendid wedding dinner at the home of the brides sister, Mrs. E. A. Westinghouse. Mr. and Mrs. O'Hair left on the evening train for Duluth to be gone about a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O'Hair, of Wheaton, Mr. John O'Hair, of Minneapolis, were here the beginning of the week attending the wedding of their brother Dr. O'Hair.

Sheriff Nugent passed through town on Wednesday on his way to the County Fair.

Mrs. D. W. Flannigan, who has been visiting friends in Minneapolls, returned home Wednesday.

Prof. John F. Collins will poll the full Democratic vote, and a good many Republicans, recognizing his admirable fitness for the office of Superintendent of Schools, will give him their votes. He is a practical teacher and a graduate of the State University of Wisconsin, and the citizens of Wright county will be proud to roll up for him an unusually large majority.

Who is George Carpenter, who has been nominated for sheriff by the Republicans? Nobody ever heard of him until he was nominated, and he will retire into his native obscurity, knocked out in one round, by Valentine Eppel, on the 8th day of November, next.

Messrs. W. H. Cutting, of Buffalo, and Striker of St. Paul, will be the orators at the Democratic rally Saturday night.

Ed. Westinghouse is visiting relatives in St. Paul.

LONG LAKE.

Mrs. Percy Stuart is quite ill at present with stomach troubles.

A. C. Bailey left a few days ago to attend the meeting of the G. A. R. at Washington, D. C., and in the rounds will make a visit to his old home in Trumbull county, Ohio.

The only son of E. Redien died during last week in this village, aged six years.

The store building of B. F. Christlieb, under the management of P. E. Westervelt, is progressing rapidly.

BAPTISTE, the Indian pilot, known by all the American tourists who have passed down the rapids of the St. Lawrence, died at his home in the Indian village of Coughnawaga recently, aged 82. He was the first Indian to run a boat down the rapids, and everyone felt safe when he was in charge.

HIRAM CAMP, of New Haven, who gave the $25,000 with which Dwight Moody erected his famous school at Northfield, has in the last year added $75,000 to the endowment. There have, of course, been other contributions. It is twelve years or so since the school opened. There are now 136 boys in attendance there.

THE longest cataleptic sleep known to medical science has been attracting attention in Germany. The latest report states that a man—a miner at Silesia—has been unconscious for four and a half months, with no unnatural appearance except absolute rigidity of the limbs. During this time the patient's hair has grown, but his beard has remained stationary.

Now that this country is to have a navy worthy of the name we need the best possible training for the officers of the new ships.

IT is now reported that a buckwheat-cake trust has been formed in New Jersey. The plan is to "corner" all the buckwheat in the United States and Canada, adulterate it with theusual amount of corn meal and wheat middlings, mix with the compound the requisite proportions of material for raising the batter, and put in up in packages to be sold to housekeepers. It is thought that "there's millions in it," and there are certainly millions who love buckwheat cakes and wish the time would come again when farmers and country millers would furnish the genuine, unadulterated material for making them.

JERUSALEM is now united with Joppa by a railroad, and trains run from one of these ancient cities to the other every day. No longer will the pilgrim be obliged to plod over the barren sand and round the hills of Judea in order to reach the spot where the great events of Biblical history were enacted. He will not be obliged to subsist on dates, figs and the flesh of goats, but can partake of first-class meals served in French style. Still in some respects the change will not be desirable. The city associated with so many sacred memories will become like a modern town and so lose its greatest charm.

GOES TO THE PEN.

Anarchist Berkman, who Attempted to Kill Mr. Frick, Convicted of His Crime.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 20.—The trial of Alexander Berkman, the anarchist who attempted to kill H. C. Frick July 28, was called before Judge McClung in the criminal court yesterday. Berkman, when brought in, maintained the same indifferent demeanor that has characterized his conduct since his arrest. He had no attorney and did not cross-examine witnesses. He had no witnesses for his defense. The prosecution was conducted by District Attorney Burleigh, who, in his opening speech, presented the seven indictments, charging Berkman with offenses ranging from felonious assault and battery down to carrying concealed weapons.

H. C. Frick, chairman of the Carnegie Steel company and the victim of Berkman's assault, was the first witness. He described the location of the Carnegie offices, and stated that the assault was made between 2 and 3 o'clock, July 23. Witness saw Berkman pacing the hall outside his office when he entered. Shortly after Berkman was announced, and when he came in he shot the witness, who fell to the floor. He tried to rise, but received another bullet wound. A photograph showing the disarranged furniture as it appeared after the shooting was shown, as was also the clothing that Mr. Frick was wearing at the time. Mr. Leischman, vice chairman of the Carnegie Steel company, who was in Mr. Frick's private office at the time, then testified.

The district attorney did not make an address, saying that argument was unnecessary. Judge McClung made a brief charge and the jury returned a verdict of guilty on all seven indictments without leaving the box. Judge McClung pronounced the sentence at once, aggregating twenty-one years in the penitentiary and one year in the workhouse. Just before the sentence was passed Berkman said he had not been given justice, nor had he expected it.

OLD VETS IN CAMP.

Thousands of Old Soldiers Camping Around Washington.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Grand Army week opened fair and cool with every apparent indication of a continuance of good weather during the exercises and celebrations in connection with the national encampment. All through the night the streets were alive with marching men, G. A. R. posts and their friends, on their way from railroad stations to quarters. Despite all the exertions that the railroad companies made to handle the crowds promptly the visitors were from two to twelve hours late in reaching the city. Despite all delays it is believed that every one who is bound for the encampment and reunion will reach the city in time to witness the great parade tomorrow.

Among the noteworthy arrivals was that of the famous Sixth Massachusetts, the first to respond to President Lincoln's call for troops. Enroute to Washington they were fired on in Baltimore April 19 and spilled the first blood after the assault upon Sumter. Distinguished visitors are abundant—Ex-President Hayes, Major Generals Howard, Miles and Crooks and General B. F. Butler are prominent among them.

Last of the Cholera.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The cholera scare has all but petered out, and it also shows that cholera has done likewise. Affairs were at a complete standstill at sanitary headquarters today. The only steps taken by the board of health today was to quarantine the steamship State of Nevada and an old canal boat on the North river. In its official bulletin this morning the board of health states that no cholera has appeared in the city since its last bulletin. And up from quarantine this morning comes tidings that the Anchor line steamer Furnessia from Glasgow arrived at quarantine at 6:45 this morning with 629 cabin passengers aboard and all well.

The Odd Fellows.

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 19.—The grand representatives to the sovereign grand lodge of Odd Fellows assembled today in Marquam theater, where they were formally welcomed to Portland and the state of Oregon by Mayor Mason and Gov. Pennoyer. J. J. Walton welcomed the representatives in behalf of the grand lodge and grand encampment of Oregon. The representatives, escorted by the Canton, Portland, No. 1, marched to Arion hall, where the sixty-eighth annual session was formally opened by Grand Sire Busbee. The session was immediately adjourned, however, to allow the representatives to participate in the parade.

Cowhided in the Pulpit.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 19.—Dr. A. E. Bridger, pastor of the Congregational church at Jennings, was cowhided in the pulpit yesterday by D. E. M. Burke, who acted for the male portion of the congregation. He made sweeping condemnations of the characters of the women of the town generally. Dr. Bridger did not flinch under the punishment.

Safe in Port.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—The steamer Carroll, with 100 passengers and forty sailors, which is nearly three days overdue here from Halifax, and concerning which great anxiety has been felt both here and in Nova Scotia, arrived at Booth Bay, Me., this morning with her crank pin broken, but otherwise all right.

Indiana's Gerrymander Unconstitutional.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 19.—Judge Bundy, of the Henry county circuit court at Newcastle, today decided unconstitutional the gerrymander of 1886 and 1891 by the Indiana legislature. He instructs election officers to post all election notices under the laws of 1879.

A Bank Permitted to Resume.

The Commercial bank of St. Paul, which closed nearly five months ago with liabilities running up into the hundreds of thousands, has reopened for business under the same management, it being shown to the satisfaction of the court that the bank was in good shape to carry on business. The depositors and creditors made an agreement with the stockholders as to methods of strengthening the bank. The assignment was caused by a scare arising out of the connection of the Commercial bank stockholders with the recently defunct German Fire Insurance Company.

End of the State Fair.

The state fair held in Minneapolis has come to an end after a successful meeting. The receipts at the treasurer's office for the week were as follows:

Monday	$392 75
Tuesday	1,203 75
Wednesday	11,182 10
Thursday	4,310 25
Total	$17,088 85

These figures refer solely to the receipts of the treasurer and do not include the tickets sold by the railroads and in the cities. The receipts for the same period last year were $14,629, showing an increase of $2,459.85.

After Thirty-Two Years.

Katherine Zahn asks for a decree of divorce from Frederick Zahn, and for the custody of their five minor children. They have ten living children, several of whom are married. Mr. and Mrs. Zahn were married at St. Paul in 1860. She is 55 and he 62 years old. Mrs. Zahn charges her husband with having been an habitual drunkard for the past ten years, during which time he has gone home drunk almost daily and treated her brutally.

Prison Binding Twine.

President Dunn, of the state prison board, says the binding plant will run at full blast during the winter months. There will probably be a much larger output of twine next year and more of it on hand, as a much greater demand is expected. The board will ask the next legislature to have an agent appointed in each county, from whom the farmers can order their twine direct. It can then be shipped directly to each agent in carload lots.

A Chicago Millionaire Drowned.

George R. Grant, a millionaire attorney, a guest for a few days of Hon. William B. Keep, both of Chicago, at the Chicago club on Lake Miltona, near Alexandria, was drowned while fishing. He stood up in the boat to remove his coat, which was loaded down with cartridges, and had it off just so far as to securely pinion his arms when he fell overboard.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

THE ARMY WORM.

Life History and Habits of the Pest and How to Destroy It.

This insect is one of the worst enemies of our agriculture. It occasionally does great damage to cereals and forage crops, and this year has appeared in Illinois and several other states. The worm itself is related to the cut worm and has similar habits. It hatches from eggs laid by a brown moth, shown in the upper part of the illustration. These eggs, which are deposited between the sheaths of grass and the blades, hatch in a week or ten days. The young larva, shown in lower half of the illustration, is at first green, but later longitudinal stripes of yellow, gray and black appear. The worms feed upon the leaves of grass, wheat, oats, rye, corn, etc., and become full grown when a month old. Ordinarily they remain concealed about the base of the grass or grain, but occasionally the larvæ become so numerous that they exhaust their food supply and are forced to seek other feeding grounds. It is then that these troublesome and injurious "armies" appear and move in solid masses, destroying all grasses and cereals in their way. When full grown the larva enters the ground and pupates, emerging two weeks later as a full-grown moth. In southern latitudes there are two or three broods, while at the north there are one or two. The insect passes the winter both as a moth and larva. The army worm has many enemies which hold it in check. It is preyed upon by birds, parasitic insects and bacterial diseases which often sweep off millions.

The artificial means for destroying it consist in burning pastures and meadows during autumn and winter, or spraying the vegetation in their path with Paris green and London purple. The latter method is very effective when the work is thoroughly done. The migration of these worms from field to field may be prevented by plowing deep furrows with perpendicular sides, or by placing fence boards on edge and smearing the top with coal tar. Very few worms will pass these barriers. It is probable that ere long scientific methods of fighting by contagious disease germs will be developed. It is reasonable to suppose that some fungous parasite, like that affecting the chinch bug, may soon be discovered.—Orange Judd Farmer.

POULTRY POINTERS.

A DOZEN ordinary eggs will weigh a pound and a half.

SCATTER small grain among chaff and the hens will scratch in it instead of in the garden.

KEEP account of the eggs you get for awhile. You will be surprised at the number you get.

THE common puddle ducks are not profitable to keep. If you want to make money with ducks try the Pekins.

TO MAKE poultry pay the owner must have eggs to sell when they are wanted, as well as fowls when they are in demand.

CLEAN out the nest boxes every week during warm weather. Give them a dose of kerosene emulsion and put in fresh straw.

NEITHER barley nor rye are profitable feed for poultry. They are not equal to wheat or corn, these last being the best in the list.

DO NOT expect to have your poultry lay very well if you neglect them. They need constant and intelligent care to be of the most profit.

AN acquaintance who raised a flock of 100 turkeys without losing a single one says that only good care is required to prevent disease and insure profit.

FOR a burn there is nothing better than the white of an egg. Made into a paste with flour or used alone it excludes the air and stops the pain in a very short time.

TURKEYS must have a good range to be profitable. They are bug eaters by nature and unless they have a wide scope of territory to forage over they will not do well.

DON'T be in a hurry to change breeds. Be sure that the breed you are thinking of adopting is as good as the one you are about to discard. The old one you know about and the new one's characteristics must be learned. "Be sure you are right, then go ahead."—Farmers' Voice.

How to Ship Cabbage.

Considerable latitude can be allowed in cutting cabbage, as it is ready any time after it has attained sufficient size and become well "headed," viz., hard, but sells best while yet green. Enough of the outside leaves should be left on to protect the head. Ship nothing but good and sound heads. Pack as solid as possible (to prevent shaking and bruising during transportation) in barrels or barrel crates of standard size, 12 x22x36. When packing in barrels fill closely and tightly, rounding up the top well, and use a clean cover. Ventilate well by cutting the barrel about eight times on the side. When using barrel crates fill tightly and closely, placing the "butts" to the outside. Use strong pressure in putting on the closing slats. —Farm and Home.

Fuel for Bee Smokers.

A correspondent of the Bee Keepers' Review has the following to say concerning fuel for bee smokers: I for fuel we have tried rotten wood, hard wood, pine sticks, sawdust, shavings, excelsior, paper, rags, peat, corn cobs and a peculiar kind of sawdust that comes from making hand holes with a wobbling saw in bee hives. The last named we find to be far superior to all the others. It lights quickly and smolders enough to give quite a dense blue smoke. It is readily obtainable of the supply manufacturers. It should be remarked, however, that the fine sawdust should be carefully sifted out.

ROADS AND MORALS.

Poor Highways a Serious Bar to Intellectual Development.

It has always seemed to me that one of the most serious drawbacks in a farmer's life is the fact that, to a very great extent in most cases, the farmer and his family are necessarily cut off from free and easy communication with all the world except that small portion which may happen to live in their immediate neighborhood. And it is this isolation which is one of the most important factors in setting the current toward the city—a tendency so much to be regretted, but which I am sure can be successfully counteracted by the improvement of our country roads. The inhabitants of the farms are from the very nature of the case, with rare exceptions, separated from mankind in general by a greater or lesser distance, and it follows that they are in the main thrown upon their own resources for that variety which is the spice of life, and which tends to the elevation of mankind. I think I am not putting it too strongly when I say that there are times when the isolation of many of those who inhabit the hundreds of thousands of fertile farms scattered wildly over this continent is almost as perfect as that of the lonely family in the island home. To be sure, the farmer and his boys may occasionally break their way into the nearest town when actual necessity compels them to do it, but only after much trial and tribulation do they reach their destination; and who can blame them if they prefer to stay at home and thus spare themselves the severe tax upon their energies. And so it is that in bad weather the farmers and their families are generally left pretty much to themselves.

I maintain that bad roads, by virtue of the fact that they prevent so large a proportion of our people from getting out into the world and seeing what their distant neighbors are doing, are a serious bar to our intellectual development. Shut up within a narrow range, not realizing what is going on and therefore not fully appreciating the blessings which they lack, can anything else be expected? Can we in the very nature of things look for intellectual improvement when circumstances prevent the lonely dwellers on the farms from acquainting themselves with any other standards than those to be found in their immediate neighborhood? It is this isolated character of of the farmer's life that explains why it is that, as statistics prove, the farming class contributes more than its share to those who people our insane asylums. And if such is the lamentable result of isolation, an isolation rendered more complete by roads which are almost impassable at the very time of the year when the farmer is at leisure, and might otherwise be able to get out of his rut, is it not time for us to begin to think of remedying this part of the evil? And on the other hand, may we not confidently argue that by offering facilities in the shape of improved roads, to those who are thus unfortunately circumstanced, to get out into the world more frequently, and to get more thoroughly in touch with their fellowmen, we are offering something which must tend to their intellectual development and improvement.—Address of President Schaeffer, of the Iowa University, before the first annual session of the Iowa Road Improvement Association.

A BLINDING DEVICE.

The Only Rational Way of Managing an Ugly Bull.

What to do with the bull in summer, I have solved to my satisfaction. However ugly he may be or disposed to take down fences when by himself, if properly blinded he will be docile at once and follow in the herd with cows and other stock any time after the service season is over. Procure a strong rope or five-ring leather halter and with a piece of tough leather, like a strong old boot leg, inclose the front by riveting the leather together around the halter on each side in a loop. The blind should be long enough up and down to prevent seeing under or over and should be loose enough to spring out from the animal's face, admitting light for the eyes. If it inclines to slip down on the halter, a strap may be riveted to the top in front and attached to the head strap between the horns. With this arrangement on and unruly animal, there need be no danger of owners or neighbors being gored while crossing the field.—L. J. Simpson, in Farm and Home.

SHRINKAGE OF HAY.

It Loses Less in Weight Than Is Generally Supposed.

There is no fixed or established amount of water in hay, but the quantity varies with circumstances. Farmers deciding according to their judgment differ in the amount of drying to which they would subject the drying grass. The more nearly the grass ripens the freer from water it commonly becomes. In a dry hot summer it is usually found drier than in a wet season. If made quite dry it would not lose much if any in weight the next spring. Where weighing has been frequently practiced it has been found actually to increase in weight as the weather became more moist in autumn after a dry summer. The amount of loss of water would vary with the mode of stowing it away. If in small and loose masses it would dry or become heavier faster than when placed in a large and solid stack, or if packed away solid in a large barn. Farmers who have weighing scales (which every farmer should possess) may easily settle such questions accurately by weighing single loads when the hay is made and the mass again in autumn, or during the following winter or spring. As a general rule, it may be laid down that the same quantity of hay is lighter in April than in the previous August; and although the weight is subject to various fluctuations, on the whole it becomes lighter in time, but less so than many farmers generally suppose.—Country Gentleman.

NIGHT.

Bless thee, bless thee, solemn night,
For thy calm and holy light,
Beaming from the stars above
Like a mother's watchful love;
For thy stillness and repose,
For the rest from daily woes
Which thou givest to our sight.
Bless thee, bless thee, gentle night!

Thou hast brought the pearly dew
From its chambers, to renew
Life and beauty in the flowers
Blooming in our verdant bowers;
While the daisy on the plain,
And the gently waving grain,
And the forest's cool retreat,
Drink with joy the nectar sweet.

Peace comes with thee; thou hast shed
Sleep o'er many a weary head;
O'er the robin, through the glen,
'Mid the haunts of beast and men.
Hushed is now the honey bee,
Still the sportive lamb's young glee,
And the violet shuts its eye
When it knows that thou art nigh.

Bnd with sleep thou givest dreams
On a thousand pleasant themes;
Of the present, of the past,
With its bliss too great to last.
Thrilling love-tones greet our ear,
Words we long have pined to hear;
Eyes departed beam with light—
Bless thee, bless thee, holy night!

MARY'S SOLDIER.

The General's Story of How He Escaped Sentence.

"Speaking of court martial," said my friend, the general, "I recollect one which terminated more pleasantly, and yet it was a narrow escape for the poor fellow."

"Tell me about it," I urged, as the man brought us our coffee and cigars.

"Do you know what 'In front of the enemy' means in military parlance?" he asked, thoughtfully, as he flecked away the first ash.

"Why, I suppose in front of the enemy means—in front of the enemy."

"Sapient youth! In time of actual warfare all troops as soon as they have been mustered into service are in front of the enemy."

"When they get there?"

"No, at once."

"Then a regiment raised here in New York during the rebellion as soon as it had been sworn in was in front of the enemy."

"Precisely. And thereby hangs a tale."

"It gave carpet knights a chance for pensions," I reflected; "but it must have caused some cruel misunderstandings."

"Not at all. The articles of war are explicit, and if there's one thing drummed into a soldier's ears, day in and day out, it's the articles of war. They are his creed."

"Yet how many of us can repeat our creed correctly? Can you?"

"You just ought to hear me! But to my story: At one time during the latter part of the war I was stationed here in New York, detailed as inspector general to raise a brigade. I had been successful, and my camp of instruction contained fair material. It was a few miles distant on foreign soil."

"What!"

"Yes, in Jersey. One afternoon, while I was resting in my quarters after the fatigues of a hot day, an orderly brought me the unpleasant tidings that my camp was in an uproar. The men refused to obey orders, and open violence impended."

"What was the reason?"

"There's no reason for disobedience in the services, yet, I admit to you, there was an excuse. I had seen cause of trouble for some time, and had striven to avert it. The pay was in arrears through some red-tape delay. The men were poor, and their families were suffering."

"Of course you went. A man of your acknowledged daring—"

"Tut, tut! The bravest often fear the most. They don't show it, though; and I didn't. But it seemed the forlornest of hopes. I dressed myself carefully in full uniform. Why? Because an officer who expects obedience must first command respect. If he wishes his soldiers to be soldierly he must set the example, for no men are more critical or imitative. I hastened over the ferry and soon reached the high board fence which encircled the encampment. From within came a confused rumble like the portent of a storm. I approached the wicket. It was locked. I peered through the lattice. There was the sentry, sure enough; but with what a difference! His musket leaned against a post. He sullenly slouched up and down, with hands in pockets, in no wise heeding my presence. I would like to have shot that man, but I was bound and braced with self control.

"'Attention!' I commanded, sharply. The man started, then straightened, seized his musket, presented, and stood as a soldier.

"'Open that gate!'

"He obeyed at once, and I passed through and marched quickly forward. All over the field were knots of men, shouting, gesticulating, fiercely haranguing. Here and there were a few officers arguing and pleading in vain. The majority, however, sat dejected within their tents. It was a most distressing sight for a true soldier.

"I approached the first group of about two hundred frenzied men. A captain was just leaving them, pursued by taunts and jeers. He was an insignificant man, with a repulsive face; naturally pompous in bearing, but now thoroughly cowed. Yet as he saw me he assumed a certain uneasy bravado.

"'Capt. Johnson, at your service, sir,' he announced as he saluted.

"'What does this mean?' I asked.

"'They are fiends incarnate, general,' he exclaimed, as he glanced over his shoulder. 'They will murder us all and ravage the town. Oh, what shall you do?'

"'I shall form the men.'

"'Impossible. Why, that's just what I've been trying; but—'

"'Silence, sir.'

"As I reached the mob I noticed one face alone which expressed respect or sympathy. All others bore a look of malevolence. A young soldier well set up and scrupulously neat, seemed to be attempting to dissuade his comrades from some mad project. He was a fine-looking fellow, with a long, light mustache and bright, blue eyes, from which, as I say, I caught a flash of admiration.

"I drew my sword and stood upright and motionless before the men.

"'Attention, men! Fall in!' I commanded.

"There was a hesitation, a momentary huddling together, then they arrayed themselves.

"'Present arms! Carry arms! Order arms! Parade rest!' I ordered, and they obeyed.

"Behind me stood a knot of wondering officers.

"'How do you dare?' I began. Then arose a growl from the ranks. 'We want our rights. We'll get them, too. We demand our pay. We won't stand such treatment. Our wives, our children are starving.'

"'Silence!' I warned them. 'Not another word. If you have grievances, if you have complaints, send them through the proper channel and they shall be heard and allayed, I promise you. Men, I'm ashamed of you. While your comrades are in the field facing privation and danger and death for the glory of that old flag which you have only just sworn to defend, you, for a trifling delay which the throes of our government should excuse, dare to murmur and revolt. Out upon such soldiers! Do you know what you risk? Do you appreciate that I have but to step to that telegraph and the regulars will surround you and rake your camp with an enfilading fire? Do you long to serve your country at the Dry Tortugas? Have a care or there you shall be sent, weighed with the contempt of all loyal men. Officers, to your posts! There will be a review presently.'

"'Three cheers for the general!' shouted the clear voice of the blue-eyed recruit as I turned away, and they were given with a will.

"So I went through that camp, speaking as I never had spoken, inwardly overwrought with excitement, but outwardly the cold, distant personification of discipline. Within two hours I had that brigade formed in a hollow square, and from its center I renewed my threats and my promises. They were effective. Reason returned to the men, and with it came shame. What had looked like a dangerous outbreak was quelled by moral force.

"As I left the parade I met Capt. Johnson.

"'By the way, captain,' I asked, 'who is that bright-looking young soldier of yours who seemed to be resisting the madness of the men?' The captain scowled quite unnecessarily.

"'That's Thomas Browne,' he answered, moodily. 'He doesn't amount to much.'

"'I'm certain you don't,' I reflected as I returned to the city.

"A month passed by. Discipline had done its perfect work. The mob had become a well-drilled brigade. The men had received their arrears, and were eager to wipe out disgrace and to achieve renown in action. The order for their advance was expected daily. I sat in my quarters in this city, alone and idle, for my duty had been fulfilled and I was about to report at Washington. The door opened, and a tall, slender young woman, neatly dressed, stood before me. Her face was pallid; her large black eyes shone intensely.

"'Oh, sir,' she exclaimed, 'save my soldier! He said that you might,' and she sank in a chair by my side weeping and moaning and wringing her fragile hands in a manner most pitiable to behold.

"'But, my dear madam,' I expostulated sternly, 'this won't do at all. If you wish my aid you must be calm and sensible. Tell me who you are, who your soldier is, and what you want.'

"'I beg your pardon,' she said, gently, and I felt like a brute. 'My name is Mary Graeme, and—and I'm engaged to Thomas Browne. He's my soldier, you know; and he's in the camp over in New Jersey.'

"'Thomas Browne!' Oh! I remembered. "'Yes, my dear,' I replied. 'A fine-looking young fellow, with bright blue eyes, I think?'

"'Oh, such bonny eyes, so tender, so true! And they speak his nature, believe me. I know him so well; we were little children together. He has been placed under arrest, sir, and is to be tried before the court martial now in session.'

"'For what offense?'

"'He was a sentry, sir, and was found asleep on his post.'

"'Phew! Here was a pretty mess indeed for the young recruit.

"'My dear child,' I responded, gravely, 'this is a most serious matter. Asleep on his post of duty in the face of the enemy! Why, it may cost him his life! And at the very time, too, when there has been a revolt in the camp and the court feels the necessity of a stern example.'

"I shook my head dubiously." Here my friend the general paused to light a cigar, and I sprang at once into the breach.

"Hold on!" I exclaimed. "Do you mean to seriously claim that a sentry might be executed for sleeping on his post in a suburb of New York, four hundred miles away from any enemy?"

My friend the general nodded.

"I explained all that to you in the first place," he replied. "Given those facts, the court would find him guilty, and the articles of war prescribe death as the penalty. Courts martial must render an absolute, unqualified verdict of either guilty or not guilty. Mitigating circumstances can only be considered in review.

"As I spoke the poor child wavered like a rare pale lily in a storm. But she remembered my warning, though her eyes streamed and her hands strained in their grasp.

"'Oh, sir, but he isn't guilty, the poor boy. Think how tired he was. Up all night; ordered on duty again the moment he was released. It was inhuman. No wonder he dozed without knowing it.'

"'But—'

"'Oh, sir, I know what you would say. It couldn't be. But it was. The orderly sergeant has always hated him. On the day before he had ordered Tom—excuse me, sir, Thomas—when he was off duty to clean the equipments of another soldier, which Thomas refused to do.'

"'He was perfectly right there.'

"'So Thomas says. Besides, he was expecting to see me. But that night when he came off his post, oh, so tired, the sergeant ordered him right on again to take the place of the soldier whose arms he wouldn't clean.'

"'If this is so, no court will punish him for falling asleep.'

"'I'm so delighted. That's what Thomas said he knew you would say. You are so learned in the regulations. But he didn't mean to—oh, no indeed. He's so ashamed; when he has been so anxious to distinguish himself for me.' And here a blush deepened through poor Mary's cheeks.

"'He shall have the chance, never fear. But why didn't you go to his captain? Does he know these facts?"

"Again Mary blushed, and far less transiently. Her fingers picked her dress uneasily.

"'Capt. Johnson?' she faltered. 'He doesn't like Tom; he—he—likes me.'

"Oh, ho.' Here was a little drama. I recalled the captain's repulsive face and sullen ways, and I recognized the villain's part.

"'Besides,' she continued, 'the orderly is his brother-in-law.'

"'And he tells a far different story, I suspect.'

"'Indeed, yes; there is no hope for Thomas from either of them.'

"'Well, my dear, save your tears and keep a stout heart. I like your soldier, and I like you. I believe the story, and you shall have my aid. But be cautious and secret. The court is now in session, you say?'

"'Yes, sir; all this week. But Thomas' case was only reached this afternoon just before adjournment.'

"'Then I must act at once. Good-by now; you may rely on me.' And with a God bless you! which it seems as if I could feel even now, the girl withdrew. Yet with a sudden inspiration I called after her: 'What is the name of the soldier whose place Thomas took?'

"'Joseph Brant.'

"Here, surely, was a difficult situation. The sergeant hostile, the captain vindictive. What hope gleamed for Mary's soldier? Yet I followed the inspiration. The proof—if I only could get the proof! It existed, unless cunning had destroyed it. Again I arrayed myself in full fig. Again I hastened over the ferry to the camp. I sought the sergeant's tent and I found him within and alone. 'Too stupid to be provident,' was my mental glance. 'Sergeant, your detail book, at once!' I commanded. The man stared and gaped and then handed it to me without a word.

"I went to a retired spot. I turned the pages with trembling fingers. Ah! fate had favored me. There was the record for the night in question, and among the reliefs I didn't find the name of Thomas Browne, but I did find that of Joseph Brant.

"Then I visited the judge advocate, a friend of mine, a fine fellow, now a supreme court judge of this state. Put that in your civil pipe and smoke it.

"'What sort of a man is Capt. Johnson?' I asked.

"My friend shrugged his broad shoulders.

"'Hum!' he replied. 'With all there is back of him he ought to get the single star in six months.'

"'Fluence, hey?'

"'Great. But, man to man, now, why do you ask?'

"'You needn't go any further, old fellow, your scruples reveal more than they conceal. But to change the subject. I am going to put a hypothetical case to you, and I want you to tell me just how you would act regarding it.' And I detailed the facts of Mary's soldier's troubles, using, of course, assumed names.

"The judge advocate deliberated. 'A difficult and delicate matter,' he said. 'The man is innocent, but he would be condemned. The sentence would be commuted on review; still his career would be ruined. I think I should do this: I should lay these inside facts confidentially before the president of the court. Then, if he approved, at the next session I should announce that the main witness, the officer of the day, was absent—and he would be, too. And in view of the stress of other business, and of grave doubts as to the defendant's culpability, I should ask that the case be dismissed.'

"'You would surely do this?'

"'Certainly. It would be the quickest and most prudent way out of a nasty rush.'

"'Then listen, old fellow.' And I explained my parable to him. 'And here's the proof,' I said, in conclusion, and I showed him the sergeant's detail book.

"'The villains!' he exclaimed. 'I'll stick to my word, never fear. It's the wisest course, too. At this present crisis the friends of that captain must not be offended. His time may come. But that sergeant should be punished in some way.'

"'Leave that to me. He shall lose his chevrons, I promise you.'

"'Very well. I'm off to see the president.'

"The next morning came, the court convened. Mary was present, anxious yet hopeful, with her gaze fixed on the erect, manly form of her soldier. So, too, were the captain and the sergeant in attendance, the former exultant, the latter secretly worried. But I looked in vain for the officer of the day.

"The judge advocate was faithful to his rehearsal and letter-perfect in his part.

"'I do, therefore, suggest,' he said, in conclusion, 'that this charge against Private Thomas Browne be dismissed.'

"'This seems a proper disposition,' said the president. 'I think so,' said each officer, from the junior to the senior, and Thomas Browne left the courtroom a free man, with the devoted Mary clinging to his arm.

"I caught Capt. Johnson as he was sneaking away with a white, scared face. 'Captain,' I said, 'I learned the truth of this matter, and I am responsible for this ending. You've had a lucky escape. Now, mark my words. You will reduce that orderly sergeant to the ranks forthwith. He won't appeal to the colonel, nor will the colonel question the act.'

TRAVELERS AT ST. LOUIS.

Three Thousand Men to Parade with Military Escort.

The Illumination Attracting Great Crowds—Increasing Popularity of the "Ex."—Other Attractions.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 15.—The illuminations to-night embraced all the grand features of the earlier displays, and were even grander than the earlier illuminations, owing to the arrival of several thousand additional globes and an immense quantity of electrical apparatus. The whole of the 75,000 gas and electric lights were alight, and the proceedings passed off without a hitch and amid great enthusiasm. Several visitors from eastern cities and from Europe were loud in their expressions of opinion that the illuminations are far grander than anything ever seen in any other city.

After the lights were turned out there was a general rush to Exposition Building, and the magnificent structure was thronged with delighted guests. This, the ninth consecutive season of the St. Louis exposition, is far exceeding all past efforts, both in the matter of beauty and attendance, and Gilmore with his band of one hundred men holds the crowd enraptured four times daily.

A large number of special attractions are announced for the Exposition, including a Travelers' Protective association celebration on Saturday, October 1. On the evening of that day the T.

P. A. will take charge of the Exposition programme. An oration will be delivered by W. C. P. Breckinridge and by the governors of Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and other states. A general invitation has been issued by the national president and directors of the T. P. A., and the largest gathering of traveling men of the west seen for years will be the result. About 3,000 will parade with a military escort, and a very elaborate programme has been prepared for the entertainment of the visitors during the day.

The Veiled Prophet will also arrive on October 1st, and will give his annual parade and ball on the following Tuesday. The route of the parade has been considerably extended and the pageant will be grander than ever. From October 3 to October 8 the annual fair will be open, and for this a large number of additional attractions are announced with two grand street illuminations and other treats. The carnival is proving a remarkable and unprecedented success.

The railroads are offering exceptional inducements to tourists and excursionists, and full advantage is being taken of their enterprise and liberality. As is well known throughout the commercial and business fraternity of the United States, St. Louis is the best railroad center on the continent, an immense number of trunk lines either terminating or passing through the city. It is on the line of three or four favorite routes from New York to the Pacific coast, and is the natural terminus of all roads running south and southwest and into the Mexican republic. St. Louis is so highly appreciated as a great manufacturing and commercial center, as well as a unique carnival city, that the practice of securing tickets through it and stopping off a few days to enjoy the beauties of the city is becoming more and more common. Tourists in making their arrangements should bear this fact in mind, and not omit from their itinerary one of the most important and interesting points of the new world.

WHAT DOCTORS' SIGNS MEAN.

They Are Latin, Much Abbreviated, But the Druggists Read Them.

When a man goes to consult his doctor about his health he comes away with a small paper covered with some apparently cabalistic signs. This he delivers to the druggist, who deciphers the mysterious symbols without the least difficulty.

Doctors generally employ Latin in an abbreviated form—so shortened that the initial letter only of a word is used. It is a relic of the past, when physicians used to write in Latin not only prescriptions but everything professional.

The first thing that strikes the eye on a prescription is a sign like a big R with a long tail. This stands for the word "Recipe," and means, being addressed to the dispenser, "take thou:" that is, "provide thyself with the articles which follow."

When the drugs have been ordered and the water sufficient to dissolve them—generally a considerable quantity—there is seen a large M with a line drawn through it. This stands for "Misce ut fiat mistura," or, in other language, "Mix these ingredients so that they may form a mixture."

Next the instructions as to how the patient is to take the medicine are given. They may run thus: "S. c. m. II. 4 h." This, being interpreted, signifies: Sumat, let him—i. e., the patient—take, cochlearia duo, two large tablespoonfuls—4 stands for quartis and h. for horis—together, every 4 hours.

Some times may be seen "Ft. hst. p. r. n. s." "Ft." means that "hst." or haustus, a draught may be formed. "P. r. n." imply Pro re nata, as the occasion may be born; in simpler words, when required. "S." is sumendus—i. e., to be taken.

A draught ordered to be taken at bedtime would be prescribed "h. s. s." The first two letters mean hora somni, or at the hour of sleep. The second s. is sumendus again.

Physicians use many idioms. For instance, "ex lacte" means in milk. "Ex aqua sumenda" to be taken in water. "Tusse urgente" (ablative absolute), when the cough is troublesome. "Mistura ad tussim" is a mixture for a cough.

Some people think that this method of prescribing is employed for the purpose of keeping the patient in the dark as to what is being done with him. This may be one motive, and a very wise one, as many nervous people would be alarmed if they were to find out that they were taking strychnine or arsenic.—Boston Globe.

—A Necessary Precaution.—"Pardon me, but I think I've met you somewhere before," began the masher. "Perhaps," replied the young lady, icily, "but you'd better go back to the place and make sure."

POOR TEETH.

They Are Very Harmful to the Health and Require Early Treatment.

Poor, decaying, abscessed teeth are very often the sole cause of internal derangements of the digestive organs, and are at the foundation of many nervous diseases. As a breeder of foul-smelling breath they are very important, and one can not afford to let such a tooth remain long in the mouth. Poor people as a rule suffer more in this respect than the rich, for the latter have their teeth early attended to by a dentist, while the former allow them to remain in the head until they are very far gone. Some teeth can not be filled with any success, and the owner hates to have them pulled out. The proper time for the extraction of a tooth is really a difficult matter to determine. If the back teeth are abscessed in any way, they should at once receive skillful treatment, and if the discharge of pus can not be controlled in time they should be extracted. Chronic abscesses in the teeth discharge pus continually, and the stomach is forced to assimilate this septic poison along with the food. In the course of time it must poison the digestive organs, and eventually impregnate the whole system. Too much attention can not be given to poor teeth in this way. There is a dry rot in some teeth which does not discharge pus, and a great amount of injury may not be done to the system by letting them remain, but the majority are harmful. The question of pain should not keep one from the dentist's chair, for when gas is administered the work is comparatively painless. In taking gas, however, it should be taken only on an empty stomach, for if taken immediately after a good meal nausea and vomiting may be caused.—Yankee Blade.

Give Ear

To the plain facts about Pearline, and then give Pearline a chance to prove them, by giving it a fair trial. Nothing else will give the same result. It washes safely, as well as surely; it cleans carefully, as well as easily. It is as cheap as soap and better. Anything that can be washed, can be washed best with Pearline. It lightens labor and does lightning work. As nearly as we can figure, about eight millions of women use it. Do you? You will sooner or later.

Don't Listen To peddlers or unscrupulous grocers who offer imitations of Pearline, and say, "it is just as good as," or "the same as" Pearline. IT'S FALSE.—Pearline has no equal and is never peddled.

DELANO DIARY

--A carload of watermellons at 15 and 20 cts. a piece at GREEN'S.

—Register of Deeds Podas called this P. M. on his way home from the County Fair.

--The regular meeting of the Cleveland Club takes place at the office of M. A. O'Hair on Saturday evening.

--Quite a number of Delano people took advantage of the cheap rates to visit the cities during the past week.

—Delano holds her own in the live stock market. Hogs, sheep and cattle are being marketed nearly every day.

—Henry Inwie, of Hanover, is stopping on his farm near town for a short time, making hay while the sun shines.

--The Delano Furniture company have added some fine upholstered goods to their stock. Rockers, Easy chairs and such. Call and see them.

—I. Donnelly will speak in the city hall on Tuesday evening, Sept. 27. He needs no recommend. As an orator he is supposed to hold the championship in Minnesota.

—The Delano cornet band has been engaged to play for the County Fair at Howard Lake today. This the last is expected to be the biggest day of the Fair.

—Read Ed. Stewart's new add concerning the harness business. Ed. appears to be getting his share of the trade. Nothing like healthy competition.

—The case of Shaw vs. Parsons was not sent to Mr. Billings because he was supposed to be legal adviser for the defendant concerning that for which suit was brought, previous to the bringing of the suit by Shaw.

—The humane society, if we had one, could have found an opportunity to use its powers on Monday, upon a man who had three calves tied in a wagon in such a manner as to excite the sympathy of all who saw them.

—Peter Rusick lost his separator on Sunday morning about 3 o'clock by fire. It was standing alone in the field having been started for Peter Yaunick's, but, on account of soft ground, was left for daylight. There is talk of an incendary. Peter has already bought a new one.

—The public school appears to be running quite smoothly so far this term. Pupils seem to be interested in their studies, teachers in their duties, and parents in having their children acquire a knowledge of books sufficient to take care of themselves in the world.

—Martin Conzet says: Hurrah for McKinley and reciprocity' and all the belongings of the Republican administration! Work was plenty, wages high, especially through harvest, wheat is low and getting lower every day, and groceries raising. What more do you farmers want? What reason have you to complain?

—The death of A. H. Braat, town clerk of Silver Creek, occurred at his home last Friday morning, caused from an acute attack of Bright's disease. Deceased was a man of sterling worth, and will be greatly missed by neighbors and friends of this community.—Clear Water News.

—Maj. Baldwin, of Duluth, Democratic candidate for Congress, was a GAZETTE caller on Saturday. He desired us to say to our readers that he was very sorry for his unavoidable absence from the convention here. He expects in company with Harry Hawkins, the nominee for Lieutenant Governor, and Adam Bede, who nominated Harry Hawkins, to be here in the near future and address the citizens.

—A local paper published at Ashby, Minn., regrets the probability of the mill in that community being moved elsewhere. Incidently it gives a reason why the mill will seek another location. It is the same old story of the grocer preferring to sell outside flour to the home article. The paper states that the miller is well liked and the farmers satisfied, but the competition of the merchants is too much. When the mill is gone and the farmers fall into the habit of going elsewhere the town can thank its merchants for the loss of trade. But this experience will go on repeating itself indefinitely elsewhere. Most people in agricultural towns do not appreciate the business drawing qualities of the local mill until it is burned, moved away or bankrupted by the boycott of the town grocers.—American Miller.

—Several cases suspiciously near like cholera have appeared among some of our citizens to alarm the villagers. It is to be hoped that the street commissioner will now remove the manure and rubbish from the alleys as ordered a month or two since by the village council.

—Rev. Davies' discourse to parents on "what shall I do for my boys" was quite interesting. Some of the parents are of the opinion however that a six weeks old boy of his own could give him lots of pointers. Next Sunday evening he will talk to the young folks on their duty to their parents.

—A car passed over the Great Northern road, eastward bound, attached to the early train Saturday morning on the sides of which in large letters was inscribed. "DEPARTMENT OF NORTH DAKOTA, G. A. R." It was on its way to the reunion at Washington.

Harvest Home Fair.

A "Harvest Home Fair" will be held in the city hall, Tuesday, Oct. 4, for the M. E. church. Fancy work, quilts and other articles will be for sale, also house plants, lemonade and confections will be sold in the hall. A unique curiosity and art gallery will be opened in the evening full of many attractions. Supper will be served from six to eight, after which will be the following entertainment:

1. Song, by choir.
2. Tableau.
3. Recitation.
4. Tableau.
5. Song, by Rev. Davies.
6. Tableau.

Personals.

Elmer Babb visited the cities on business, on Wednesday.

Sam Cutter went to Minneapolis Saturday afternoon to attend the exposition.

Mr. A. Reinmuth, of Howard, was in town Monday negotiating with the band boys.

John Seams, Minnetrista's merchant, done business in Delano on Monday.

Mrs. C. F. Peters and Freddie are spending the week in Minneapolis.

Dr. and Mrs. Knight of Minneapolis, spent Sunday in Delano.

Albert Neitzel, Hanover's butcher, visited Delano friends over Sunday.

Miss Etta M. Parsons left for Minneapolis last Saturday for a week's visit with relatives and friends.

Misses Nellie and Stella Jacobs returned Monday morning to their studies in the Flour City.

Mrs. Ladenburg, sister of Mrs. Wm. Franklin, after a pleasant visit returned home, to Marshall, on Saturday evening.

Messrs James McClelland and William Guthrie, of Woodland, two prominent Alliance men, were in town on Tuesday.

D. R. Farnham, of Rockford, president of Wright County Agricultural Society, passed through town on Tuesday, on his way to the Fair.

On the roll of old soldiers attending the reunion of the Minnesota Second, at St. Peter, last week shines out the name "Bradford Hall, I. Rockford, Minn."

Sam Pape is again at his post in the depot. He seems to be as strong a Democrat as ever, and says Dublin's Tammany fellows are no slouches on an argument.

County Cullings.

John Kelly believes firmly that when you see a red headed girl you will immediately after see two white horses. He was not superstitious before the Fair.

The People's party will hold a convention at Maple Lake on Monday, Sept. 26, for the purpose of placing in nomination a legislative and a county ticket.

A prominent member of the People's party of Wright County was heard to say, the other day, that "the proposals of the Democrats to fuse with the Peoples party, reminded him of Satin taking Christ up into a high mountain and offering to give him every thing in sight."

Prominent leaders of the Alliance in this county are bitterly opposed to fusing with the Democrats on the legislative ticket, and as we believe the majority of the rank and file of the Democratic party prefer a straight Democratic ticket it is altogether likely there will be two tickets nominated at Maple Lake on Monday.

The County Fair at Howard was quite well attended for what there was to see. But people seem to have lost interest in trying to make displays. What displays were made were good. A few fine horses, and cattle, pigs and speep, but not enough competition to, in some cases even allow a choice. The display of poultry and bees was good. The vegetables fair. The display of apples and plums was excellent, what there was of it. The art gallery display was good, only too many empty stalls. Mr. Lutzinger & Son, of Waverly had a good display. If people want a fair, they must take along what they have to exhibit, even if they do not get the prize always. This is a good opportunity to see what your neighbors have and to let them see what you have. Wallace King was conspicous among exhibitors. The horse racing was as good as generally seen in county fairs.

Democratic County Convention for the 38th Legislative District.

The Delegates selected to attend the 38th Legislative District Convention met in the City Hall, in Delano, on the 16th inst. and adjourned to meet at Maple Lake on the 28th inst., next Monday. Each delegate should feel that on him may hang the destiny of the Democratic party in our district or county this year, and for years to come, and should make it a point to be present and vote as his conscience, and not some other man, tells him. Several refrained from voting on the adjournment, we are told, and but few openly opposed it. The following is a list of delegates to attend, and whom we hope to see present and doing their duty:

At large—M. A. O'Hair.

1st district—M. C. O'Donohoe, James Tracy, J. P. Sheyer, W. Jude, James O'Loughlin, Dan Flaherty, J. N. Grafft.

2d district—J. C. Neise, Joseph Reems, Thos. Walker, C. A. Riggs, J. H. Wendell, E. E. Fuller, W. H. Cochran.

3d district—Chas. O'Hara, John Kennedy, George Fredericks, G. A. Ruckoldt, Conard Marth, J. C. Hitz, Henry Bock.

4th district—P. O'Hair, Levi Cochran, C. H. Cullen, T. F. Kelly, J. F. McDonnell, J. C. Nugent, H. Tanner.

5th district—John Tracy, H. C. Bull, Mark Fosket, D. F. Jackson, Chas. Glanvill, O. Mabusth, O. M. Lloyd.

The report of the committee on delegates was adopted.

Congressional Committee.

Chairman Calhoun has appointed the following Democratic Congressional Committee:

T. T. Hudson, of Duluth, committee man at large and chairman.
John Morgan, of Aitkin county.
W. Greenwold, of Anoka.
Samuel Sutter, of Beltrami.
J. B. Beatty, of Benton.
Andrew Gowan, of Carlton.
C. C. Kelly, of Cass.
John Morrison, of Cook.
H. S. Totton, of Crow Wing.
R. E. Shields, of Hubbard.
Michael Toole, of Itasca.
Charles, Keith, of Mille Lacs.
George Geissel, of Morrison.
H. M. Hannon, of Lake.
J. H. Hurley, of Pine.
J. L. Harwick, of Sherburne.
A. H. Petitt, of Stearns.
Samuel Lee, of Todd.
T. M. Helinski, of St. Louis.
A. G. Broker, of Wadena.
J. H. Wendell, of Wright.

Democratic County Ticket.

For Treasurer, FRANK MCKNIGHT, the present incumbent needs no other recommend. All know him as an efficient officer.

Register of Deeds, ISAAC PODAS, is similarly situated as the Treasurer. Republicans concede the re election of both.

For Auditor, J. A. WHITAKER Cokato's able depot agent, and who is so noted for his ability as an accountant, a very necessary qualification in this office, as to have been tendered, recently, the office of traveling auditor of the Great Northern Railroad, is a young man that will make a good man for the place.

For Sheriff, VALENTINE EPPEL is an old and much respected citizen of Delano, and will probably poll the largest vote ever cast for one candidate in this part of the county. His honesty is proverbial whereever he is known.

For County Attorney, W. H. CUTTING, the present officer proposes to come before the public on the record he has made during the present term.

For Superintendent of Schools, JOHN F. COLLINS, a graduate of Wisconsin University, an old teacher, at one time principal of the Delano school, and now teaching at Smith Lake is the candidate.

For Surveyor, E. B. MCCORD, who has held the office before.

For Coroner, GEORGE C. BARTON, M. D., of Buffalo, a genuine Democrat, and who is one of the rising young physicians of the county, and who has recently returned from taking a special course at Philadelphia will make a good coroner.

Court Commissioner, W. H. COCHRANE, everybody knows "Billy" they meet him at the Court House when ever they go there. and he obligingly assists them in looking over records in the Register of Deeds office.

World's Fair Notes.

Seats for 125,000 people are to be provided in the great manufacturers building at the World's Fair for the dedication exercises in October 21.

The women of La Salle county, Ill., are raising money for the purpose of paying the expenses of some 600 or 700 women and girls during a visit to the World'a Fair.

The owners of the Mammouth Cave Kentucky proposes to reproduce the "starry chamber" in the Mining building at the World's Fair.

Arkansas will exhibit at the World's Fair a releif map of the State, showing all elevations, depressions, lakes, swamps and stone areas, arable lands, wheat, corn, and cotton regions, timber and prarie lands, etc.

Sweden's building at the World's Fair has been designed on the lines of the Norse Stave churches, but with more solidity. The building is being constructed in Sweden and will be sent to Chicago in sections.

Persons in Bombay, India, are persuaded that there will be considerable profit in making a varied display at the World's Fair. They propose to send over twelve elephants, so that visitors can take rides "in howda with mahout"; to give exhibitions of suttee, cremation, jugglery, nautch, wrestling, etc., and to sell tea at ten cents a cup. They expect to sell a million cups.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage duly made, executed and delivered by G. O. Trow and his wife Abbie Trow, as mortgagors, to George E. Bull as mortgagee, bearing date the first day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty seven (1887) with a power of sale therein contained, which mortgage was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Wright and State of Minnesota on the twenty-second (22) day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven (1887), at nine (9) o'clock a. m. in book four (4) of mortgages on page one (1).

Whereas said mortgage was given to secure the payment at maturity of the sum of nine hundred ($900) dollars with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, according to the conditions of ten (10) cupon notes bearing even dates with said mortgage. Whereas said mortgagee did on the 30th day of April 1892 pay taxes for the years 1890 and 1891 then due and unpaid as follows, to-wit: For the year 1890 the sum of ten dollars and seventy eight cents, for the year 1891, the sum of thirty-nine dollars and forty-eight cents, which sum is also claimed to be recovered as an additional loan on said lands and whereas there is claimed to be due and there is due and unpaid on said mortgage and on the notes secured thereby at the date of this notice the sum of ten hundred and sixty-two dollars and seventy cents ($1062.70) principle and interest besides the taxes paid as aforesaid, and interest on said taxes amounting to the sum of one dollar and forty cents and whereas no proceedings at law or in equity has been instituted to recover said mortgage debt or taxes as aforesaid, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage to-wit: Lot number one (1) and block number thirteen (13) situated in the village of Cokato, Wright county, Minnesota, according to the duly recorded plat of record, in the Register of Deeds office in and for the county of Wright and state of Minnesota, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Wright county at the front door of the court house in the village of Buffalo in said county on Thursday, the twenty-ninth (29) day of September, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two (1892) at two o'clock p. m. at public vendue to the highest bidder, for cash, to pay said mortgage debt, principle and interest and taxes paid as aforesaid with costs of these proceedings, together with the sum of thirty-five ($35) dollars attorney's fee stipulated in said mortgage to be paid in case of foreclosure.

Dated August 10, 1892.

GEO. E. BULL, mortgagee,
A. G. SEXTON, Cokato,
Attorney for Mortgagee

DELANO DIARY

--A carload of watermellons at 15 and 20 cts. a piece at GREEN'S.

—Register of Deeds Podas called this P. M. on his way home from the County Fair.

--The regular meeting of the Cleveland Club takes place at the office of M. A. O'Hair on Saturday evening.

--Quite a number of Delano people took advantage of the cheap rates to visit the cities during the past week.

—Delano holds her own in the live stock market. Hogs, sheep and cattle are being marketed nearly every day.

—Henry Inwie, of Hanover, is stopping on his farm near town for a short time, making hay while the sun shines.

--The Delano Furniture company have added some fine upholstered goods to their stock. Rockers, Easy chairs and such. Call and see them.

—I. Donnelly will speak in the city hall on Tuesday evening, Sept. 27. He needs no recommend. As an orator he is supposed to hold the championship in Minnesota.

—The Delano cornet band has been engaged to play for the County Fair at Howard Lake today. This the last is expected to be the biggest day of the Fair.

—Read Ed. Stewart's new add concerning the harness business. Ed. appears to be getting his share of the trade. Nothing like healthy competition.

—The case of Shaw vs. Parsons was not sent to Mr. Billings because he was supposed to be legal adviser for the defendant concerning that for which suit was brought, previous to the bringing of the suit by Shaw.

—The humane society, if we had one, could have found an opportunity to use its powers on Monday, upon a man who had three calves tied in a wagon in such a manner as to excite the sympathy of all who saw them.

—Peter Rusick lost his separator on Sunday morning about 3 o'clock by fire. It was standing alone in the field having been started for Peter Yaunick's, but, on account of soft ground, was left for daylight. There is talk of an incendary. Peter has already bought a new one.

—The public school appears to be running quite smoothly so far this term. Pupils seem to be interested in their studies, teachers in their duties, and parents in having their children acquire a knowledge of books sufficient to take care of themselves in the world.

—Martin Conzet says: Hurrah for McKinley and reciprocity' and all the belongings of the Republican administration! Work was plenty, wages high, especially through harvest, wheat is low and getting lower every day, and groceries raising. What more do you farmers want? What reason have you to complain?

—The death of A. H. Braat, town clerk of Silver Creek, occurred at his home last Friday morning, caused from an acute attack of Bright's disease. Deceased was a man of sterling worth, and will be greatly missed by neighbors and friends of this community.—Clear Water News.

—Maj. Baldwin, of Duluth, Democratic candidate for Congress, was a GAZETTE caller on Saturday. He desired us to say to our readers that he was very sorry for his unavoidable absence from the convention here. He expects in company with Harry Hawkins, the nominee for Lieutenant Governor, and Adam Bede, who nominated Harry Hawkins, to be here in the near future and address the citizens.

—A local paper published at Ashby, Minn., regrets the probability of the mill in that community being moved elsewhere. Incidently it gives a reason why the mill will seek another location. It is the same old story of the grocer preferring to sell outside flour to the home article. The paper states that the miller is well liked and the farmers satisfied, but the competition of the merchants is too much. When the mill is gone and the farmers fall into the habit of going elsewhere the town can thank its merchants for the loss of trade. But this experience will go on repeating itself indefinitely elsewhere. Most people in agricultural towns do not appreciate the business drawing qualities of the local mill until it is burned, moved away or bankrupted by the boycott of the town grocers.—American Miller.

—Several cases suspiciously near like cholera have appeared among some of our citizens to alarm the villagers. It is to be hoped that the street commissioner will now remove the manure and rubbish from the alleys as ordered a month or two since by the village council.

—Rev. Davies' discourse to parents on "what shall I do for my boys" was quite interesting. Some of the parents are of the opinion however that a six weeks old boy of his own could give him lots of pointers. Next Sunday evening he will talk to the young folks on their duty to their parents.

—A car passed over the Great Northern road, eastward bound, attached to the early train Saturday morning on the sides of which in large letters was inscribed. "DEPARTMENT OF NORTH DAKOTA, G. A. R." It was on its way to the reunion at Washington.

Harvest Home Fair.

A "Harvest Home Fair" will be held in the city hall, Tuesday, Oct. 4, for the M. E. church. Fancy work, quilts and other articles will be for sale, also house plants, lemonade and confections will be sold in the hall. A unique curiosity and art gallery will be opened in the evening full of many attractions. Supper will be served from six to eight, after which will be the following entertainment:

1. Song, by choir.
2. Tableau.
3. Recitation.
4. Tableau.
5. Song, by Rev. Davies.
6. Tableau.

Personals.

Elmer Babb visited the cities on business, on Wednesday.

Sam Cutter went to Minneapolis Saturday afternoon to attend the exposition.

Mr. A. Reinmuth, of Howard, was in town Monday negotiating with the band boys.

John Seams, Minnetrista's merchant, done business in Delano on Monday.

Mrs. C. F. Peters and Freddie are spending the week in Minneapolis.

Dr. and Mrs. Knight of Minneapolis, spent Sunday in Delano.

Albert Neitzel, Hanover's butcher, visited Delano friends over Sunday.

Miss Etta M. Parsons left for Minneapolis last Saturday for a week's visit with relatives and friends.

Misses Nellie and Stella Jacobs returned Monday morning to their studies in the Flour City.

Mrs. Ladenburg, sister of Mrs. Wm. Franklin, after a pleasant visit returned home, to Marshall, on Saturday evening.

Messrs James McClelland and William Guthrie, of Woodland, two prominent Alliance men, were in town on Tuesday.

D. R. Farnham, of Rockford, president of Wright County Agricultural Society, passed through town on Tuesday, on his way to the Fair.

On the roll of old soldiers attending the reunion of the Minnesota Second, at St. Peter, last week shines out the name "Bradford Hall, I. Rockford, Minn."

Sam Pape is again at his post in the depot. He seems to be as strong a Democrat as ever, and says Dublin's Tammany fellows are no slouches on an argument.

County Cullings.

John Kelly believes firmly that when you see a red headed girl you will immediately after see two white horses. He was not superstitious before the Fair.

The People's party will hold a convention at Maple Lake on Monday, Sept. 26, for the purpose of placing in nomination a legislative and a county ticket.

A prominent member of the People's party of Wright County was heard to say, the other day, that "the proposals of the Democrats to fuse with the Peoples party, reminded him of Satin taking Christ up into a high mountain and offering to give him every thing in sight."

Prominent leaders of the Alliance in this county are bitterly opposed to fusing with the Democrats on the legislative ticket, and as we believe the majority of the rank and file of the Democratic party prefer a straight Democratic ticket it is altogether likely there will be two tickets nominated at Maple Lake on Monday.

The County Fair at Howard was quite well attended for what there was to see. But people seem to have lost interest in trying to make displays. What displays were made were good. A few fine horses, and cattle, pigs and speep, but not enough competition to, in some cases even allow a choice. The display of poultry and bees was good. The vegetables fair. The display of apples and plums was excellent, what there was of it. The art gallery display was good, only too many empty stalls. Mr. Lutzinger & Son, of Waverly had a good display. If people want a fair, they must take along what they have to exhibit, even if they do not get the prize always. This is a good opportunity to see what your neighbors have and to let them see what you have. Wallace King was conspicous among exhibitors. The horse racing was as good as generally seen in county fairs.

Democratic County Convention for the 38th Legislative District.

The Delegates selected to attend the 38th Legislative District Convention met in the City Hall, in Delano, on the 16th inst. and adjourned to meet at Maple Lake on the 28th inst., next Monday. Each delegate should feel that on him may hang the destiny of the Democratic party in our district or county this year, and for years to come, and should make it a point to be present and vote as his conscience, and not some other man, tells him. Several refrained from voting on the adjournment, we are told, and but few openly opposed it. The following is a list of delegates to attend, and whom we hope to see present and doing their duty:

At large—M. A. O'Hair.

1st district—M. C. O'Donohoe, James Tracy, J. P. Sheyer, W. Jude, James O'Loughlin, Dan Flaherty, J. N. Grafft.

2d district—J. C. Neise, Joseph Reems, Thos. Walker, C. A. Riggs, J. H. Wendell, E. E. Fuller, W. H. Cochran.

3d district—Chas. O'Hara, John Kennedy, George Fredericks, G. A. Ruckoldt, Conard Marth, J. C. Hitz, Henry Bock.

4th district—P. O'Hair, Levi Cochran, C. H. Cullen, T. F. Kelly, J. F. McDonnell, J. C. Nugent, H. Tanner.

5th district—John Tracy, H. C. Bull, Mark Fosket, D. F. Jackson, Chas. Glanvill, O. Mabusth, O. M. Lloyd.

The report of the committee on delegates was adopted.

Congressional Committee.

Chairman Calhoun has appointed the following Democratic Congressional Committee:

T. T. Hudson, of Duluth, committee man at large and chairman.
John Morgan, of Aitkin county.
W. Greenwold, of Anoka.
Samuel Sutter, of Beltrami.
J. B. Beatty, of Benton.
Andrew Gowan, of Carlton.
C. C. Kelly, of Cass.
John Morrison, of Cook.
H. S. Totton, of Crow Wing.
R. E. Shields, of Hubbard.
Michael Toole, of Itasca.
Charles, Keith, of Mille Lacs.
George Geissel, of Morrison.
H. M. Hannon, of Lake.
J. H. Hurley, of Pine.
J. L. Harwick, of Sherburne.
A. H. Petitt, of Stearns.
Samuel Lee, of Todd.
T. M. Helinski, of St. Louis.
A. G. Broker, of Wadena.
J. H. Wendell, of Wright.

Democratic County Ticket.

For Treasurer, FRANK MCKNIGHT, the present incumbent needs no other recommend. All know him as an efficient officer.

Register of Deeds, ISAAC PODAS, is similarly situated as the Treasurer. Republicans concede the re-election of both.

For Auditor, J. A. WHITAKER. Cokato's able depot agent, and who is so noted for his ability as an accountant, a very necessary qualification in this office, as to have been tendered, recently, the office of traveling auditor of the Great Northern Railroad, is a young man that will make a good man for the place.

For Sheriff, VALENTINE EPPEL is an old and much respected citizen of Delano, and will probably poll the largest vote ever cast for one candidate in this part of the county. His honesty is proverbial wherever he is known.

For County Attorney, W. H. CUTTING, the present officer proposes to come before the public on the record he has made during the present term.

For Superintendent of Schools, JOHN F. COLLINS, a graduate of Wisconsin University, an old teacher, at one time principal of the Delano school, and now teaching at Smith Lake is the candidate.

For Surveyor, E. B. MCCORD, who has held the office before.

For Coroner, GEORGE C. BARTON, M. D., of Buffalo, a genuine Democrat, and who is one of the rising young physicians of the county, and who has recently returned from taking a special course at Philadelphia will make a good coroner.

Court Commissioner, W. H. COCHRANE, everybody knows "Billy" they meet him at the Court House when ever they go there. and he obligingly assists them in looking over records in the Register of Deeds office.

World's Fair Notes.

Seats for 125,000 people are to be provided in the great manufacturers building at the World's Fair for the dedication exercises in October 21.

The women of La Salle county, Ill., are raising money for the purpose of paying the expenses of some 600 or 700 women and girls during a visit to the World's Fair.

The owners of the Mammouth Cave Kentucky proposes to reproduce the "starry chamber" in the Mining building at the World's Fair.

Arkansas will exhibit at the World's Fair a releif map of the State, showing all elevations, depressions, lakes, swamps and stone areas, arable lands, wheat, corn, and cotton regions, timber and prarie lands, etc.

Sweden's building at the World's Fair has been designed on the lines of the Norse Stave churches, but with more solidity. The building is being constructed in Sweden and will be sent to Chicago in sections.

Persons in Bombay, India, are persuaded that there will be considerable profit in making a varied display at the World's Fair. They propose to send over twelve elephants, so that visitors can take rides "in howda with mahout"; to give exhibitions of suttee, cremation, jugglery, munich, wrestling, etc., and to sell tea at ten cents a cup. They expect to sell a million cups.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage duly made, executed and delivered by G. O. Trow and his wife Abbie Trow, as mortgagors, to George E. Bull as mortgagee, bearing date the first day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty seven (1887) with a power of sale therein contained, which mortgage was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Wright and State of Minnesota on the twenty-second (22) day of February one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven (1887), at nine (9) o'clock a. m. in book four (4) of mortgages on page one (1).

Whereas said mortgage was given to secure the payment at maturity of the sum of nine hundred ($900) dollars with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, according to the conditions of ten (10) cupon notes bearing even dates with said mortgage. Whereas said mortgagee did on the 30th day of April 1892 pay taxes for the years 1890 and 1891 then due and unpaid as follows, to-wit: For the year 1890 the sum of ten dollars and seventy eight cents, for the year 1891, the sum of thirty-nine dollars and forty-eight cents, which sum is also claimed to be recovered as an additional lean on said lands and whereas there is claimed to be due and there is due and unpaid on said mortgage and on the notes secured thereby at the date of this notice the sum of ten hundred and sixty-two dollars and seventy cents ($1062.70) principle and interest besides the taxes paid as aforesaid, and interest on said taxes amounting to the sum of one dollar and forty cents and whereas no proceedings at law or in equity has been instituted to recover said mortgage debt or taxes as aforesaid, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sail of the premises described in and covered by said mortgage to-wit: Lot number one (1) and block number thirteen (13) situated in the village of Cokato, Wright county, Minnesota, according to the duly recorded plat of record, in the Register of Deeds office in and for the county of Wright and state of Minnesota, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Wright county at the front door of the court house in the village of Buffalo in said county on Thursday, the twenty-ninth (29) day of September, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two (1892) at two o'clock p. m. at public vendue to the highest bidder, for cash, to pay said mortgage debt, principle and interest and taxes paid as aforesaid with costs of these proceedings, together with the sum of thirty-five ($35) dollars attorney's fee stipulated in said mortgage to be paid in case of foreclosure.

Dated August 10, 1892.
GEO. E. BULL, mortgagee,
A. G. SEXTON, Cokato,
Attorney for Mortgagee

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

Monday at Maple Lake.

Monday found Maple Lake populated with more than her usual quota of inhabitants. Delegates to the People's party county convention and delegates from Wright and Sherburne counties to both the People's party and to the Democratic Legislative convention were present, together with quite a number of newspaper reporters and politicians of greater or lesser magnitude. In the forenoon the People's party organized by electing Adolph Rheume, chairman, and Nicholas Vandergon, secretary. The committee on credentials was: Ed. Day, Henry Gorman, J. Hoglund, Wm. Andrews, W. P. West.

On resolutions, Wm. Guthrie, W. J. Roll, J. Robinson, J. Rheume, and Wm. Andrews.

DEMOCRATS.

At about 10:30 a. m. the Democrats came together at Mr. O'Laughlin's hardware store. M. A. O'Hair, chairman and J. F. McDonnell, secretary. Several proxies were admitted as delegates after which the roll was called revealing the fact that many were absent. The Sherburne county delegates reported were, J. W. Coats and N. D. Brown, Big Lake; Henry Murphy, Baldwin; J. P. Taylor and Bernard Powers, Elk River; E. Harwick, Becker. Moved to allow delegates present to cast vote for county. Wendell moved to allow delegates present to cast vote for county. Wendell moved that delegates present from each district be authorized to cast the vote of the district.—Carried. J. H. Wendell moved that a committee of five, the chair to be one of the number be appointed by the chair to confer with the People's party committee as to making a fusion ticket for the legislature.—Carried.

Committee chosen was, M. A. O'Hair, J. H. Wendell, J. P. Taylor, J. C. Nugent and H. C. Bull.

Mr. Bull asked that an expression of the delegates be taken as to whether or not a majority favored fusion. Wendell and Tanner opposed this as not being the proper time. The question was not insisted upon and no expression was taken.

Convention adjourned till 1 p. m.

The delegates repaired to dinner, your scribe being among those who stopped at Mr. Lahey's Hotel, where the tables were kept full for a long time all pronouncing the dinner one of the best they had partaken of for a long time. We presume other houses did as well, as we heard no complaint. The band with the stars and stripes led the crowd around to the hall in the afternoon where the People's party held their meetings. The Democrats merely came together and adjourned to await the action of the People's party, which seemed decidedly averse to fusing, and was in no hurry.

PEOPLE'S PARTY P. M.

The People's party proceeded to discuss nominations.

Mr. Guthrie wanted a committee appointed to select a ticket and submit it to the convention. Bennett opposed this. Nominations were then declared in order and J. W. McDonald, of Woodland, nominated by acclamation for Treasurer.

H. W. Roll moved that we endorse neither Democrats nor Republicans.—Carried. H. W. Roll, of Cokato, was nominated for Auditor; Nicholas Vanlergon, Silver Creek, Register of Deeds; H. L. Sand, Stockholm, Sheriff; P. G. Moody, Howard Lake, Judge of Probate; A. G. Sexton, Cokato, County Attorney; E. D. McDonald then objected to Cokato having a monopoly of offices; John S. Johnson, of Woodland, was then nominated for Court Commissioner; and John F. Collins for Superintendent of Schools.

For County Commissioners:
1st Dist. W. P. West, Clearwater.
3d " J. P. Rogers, Woodland.
5th " Herman Johnson.

It was voted that the county committee should fill all vacances.

It was voted that the chair appoint a committee of five for next two years and announce the appointments in the newspapers.—Convention adjourned.

PEOPLE'S PARTY LEGISLATIVE CONVENTION.

Wm. Guthrie then called the Legislative convention to order. Mr. Shamon of Sherburne county, occupied the chair and J. B. Plant was elected secretary.

J. B. Plant moved that a committee of five, two from Sherburne and three from Wright be appointed to confer with the Democratic committee on making a fusion legislative ticket.

The chair appointed: Wm. Guthrie, Woodland; Geo. Coombs, Silver Creek; J. B. Plant, Satiago; John Black, Big Lake.

The convention then took a recess for the committees from the two conventions to talk over fusion.

The People's party voted it down in convention, 20 against to 9 for, and proceeded to nominate a Legislative ticket as follows:

J. B. Plant, of Santiago, Richard Benett, of Woodland James O'Loughlin, Maple Lake, and Herman Gomnetz, Sherburne.

DEMOCRATIC NOMINATIONS.

The delegates that had not gone home, then met and placed in nomination for the legislature, H. C. Bull, Cokato; Henry Berning, Frankfort; J. L. Harwick, Becker; and J. J. Renney, Annandale. Convention adjourned.

KNUTE NELSON must have been too busy to read Congressman Burrows' speech in St. Paul Last Monday night Knute told the Republican's of Pig's Eve that there are now twenty-six factories in operation turning out tin plate, while Julius C. Burrows told the same audience a week before that fifty factories are in operation. There is only a difference of twenty-four factories between them.—Irish Standard.

Chris. Gallagher told a Delano Audience a short time ago that one had "busted up." Perhaps that's where the rest of the difference has gone to.

A Farmer on Tariff.

EDITOR OF GAZETTE: I see by the Eagle, of last week, that a prominent farmer living near Delano, has discovered a new blessing of the McKinley bill. The discovery shows a very deep study of the tariff question. And the subject discovered is hucksters that come to the door of prominent farmers and buy butter, eggs and chickens for cash and at prices higher than he used to get delivered at the stores.

It is very fortunate for that prominent farmer that he lives near Delano, and, probably, near a good and often traveled road, for, if he lived away from Delano, somewhere in the woods, on a poor road, the hucksters might not bother themselves much to find him.

Oh yes! Those hucksters are a great benefit to the country and McKinley can hardly be praised enough for sending them. But this is not all. We have also numberless Russian Jew peddlers of late, who bring us all kinds of goods to our doors, and all we have to do is to have the cash ready for them. They even claim, frequently, that the goods were smuggled, and no tariff paid on them, and, therefore they can sell them cheaper than the merchants who pay the duty on them. Of course the goods are not always as we expect them to be, and the wool goods may have been manufactured out of woolen rags formerly worn by European pauper laborers, but that cuts no figure, as long as we can have them right at our door without any exertion on our part, even if it does cripple our home merchants or industries. We also have delivery wagons for free delivery of groceries and provisions, established in Delano, since the McKinley bill has gone into effect. But, I would ask, what has all this to do with the tariff? It is only the effect of natural causes. Hucksters had traveled through the country in the Eastern states long before McKinley and his bill were known. They were not particularly protected, but worked more on free trade principles. The more competition the less profit for the hucksters and better prices for the farmers. The hucksters and peddlers do not travel at the command of McKinley, nor for the benefit of the farmer nor any other class of people, but for their own interest. When we first setttled here, and that was long before the prominent farmer could locate near Delano (as that place was not then in existence) there was no need of the above mentioned class. That was the time of home consumption, now praised so highly. We were then all more consumers than producers and would have consumed more if we had had the means to get it. I do not believe that one of the old settlers wishes himself back to those days of home consumption. In those days a huckster could not have made a living by buying eggs, butter and poultry, and the farmers were glad to take those articles to the nearest store and take goods in exchange, and if they had only eleven eggs they could take along a laying hen and have the dozen full by the time the store was reached.

But, now, conditions have changed, the country has developed, farms are more numerous and larger, all are raising a little surplus to sell and we live within easy reach of the market of two large cities. This is what caused buyers to come here and buy direct from the producer. He knows where he can sell his goods at a good profit for cash. These are causes of the presences of the hucksters, and not the protective tariff. Prominent farmer wants to know whether we ever got such prices for those articles. Well, I can tell him that before the Republican party came into power, I paid $13 for a barrel of flour; 35 cents per dozen for eggs; and $40 in gold for 100 pounds of butter. Time does not permit to go further.

CORRESPONDENCE

WAVERLY WISDOM.

The Democratic rally Saturday evening was in every sense a spontaneous outburst of patriotic devotion to grand principles and the exposition of the living issues of the day. The Democratic party of today comes down to us as the champion and guardian of the people's rights as she has always been. Her history is a noble one, and when we look back to the early developments of our nation and trace page by page the stand Democracy has taken under all circumstances, battling for the plain common people against the tyrrany and oppression of a class of unscrupulous men, we look up to her kind and benignant face with that love and respect which a child always finds in the look of his good mother. It is the duty of every American citizen to study the history of his country, to acquaint himself thoroughly with her constitution, and be able to give a clear definition of the most important essentials of that great Democratic document, the Declaration of Independence. When the American people set out to do a thing they always succeed. It is one of our peculiar characteristics that we know not failure and when we become thoroughly convinced that a principle is right we take a stand that no power can change. Beheving then in the welfare of the common people and having their interests as the corner stone of her ever progressive declaration of principles she sends forth to the people of this country a document which she asks them to study, weigh each and every paragraph carefully, diligently looking into the subject, and often doing this as an honest and conscientious duty and with that honest and determined conclusion which Americans reach after carefully studying a subject. Grover Cleveland and Dan Lawler with the entire Democratic ticket will be elected by such a majority as they fitingly deserve. The meeting Saturday night was a most enthusiastic one. The Cleveland and Lawler Club had the heavens ablaze with fire works and the Glee Club sang in a splendid manner Democratic Campaign songs. President John Kelly introduced County Attorney W. H. Cutting, as the first speaker, and for an hour Mr. Cutting held the audience spell-bound. He was applauded frequently and everybody declared that he entered into his subject in a gentlemanly manner. He devoted considerable of his speech to the discussion of county matters and proved beyond any doubt that his administration has been one of economy and that he has saved for the county hundreds of dollars. The honest voter believes this and will cast his vote on the 8th day of November to continue in office a man who dared to do his duty. This is the kind of a man the people want, and this is the man they will elect. The next speaker was Mr. Stricker, of St. Paul, who arrived on the evening train. Mr. Stricker gave a clear explanation of the issues of the day and proved conclusively that the Democratic principles are in every sense for the good of the people against the exertions of aristocratic eastern manufactures. Mr. Stricker spoke at considerable length and entered into his subject with that honest conviction which has a splendid effect on an audience. Throughout his speech he was roundly cheered, and it was manifested in every portion of the vast audience that the people were in accord with his views. This was the first political meeting of the season, and was a grand success.

John Kelly makes a good presiding officer and is the David B. Hill of Tammany.

Mr. A. J. Demars had charge of the fire display and everything was done in first class style.

Wm. Quinn has a gracious smile for everybody and on this occasion his face was radiant with smiles.

Judge Morneau makes a fine appearance on any occasion, but on the occasion of a Democratic rally his appearance is extra No. 1.

Wallace King takes great interest in these meetings. He is the vice-president of the Cleveland and Lawler club, and keeps himself well posted on the tariff and other questions.

The Glee club sang very appropriate campaign songs at the rally. The following young ladies and gentlemen comprise the club: Mary Berkner, Lulu Flannigan, Mabel Flannigan, Florence Quinn, J. M. Casey, Herman Volmerding and Michael Nee.

There was quite a number of ladies present which shows that they take an interest in the discussion of the issues of the day.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

[Received too late for publication last week.]

The farmers are progressing with their farm work beyond expectation during the fine weather of late.

The shrill whistle of the steam thresher is heard at all points of the compass. The wheat is nothing in quantity or quality to what it was last year, but then the McKinley bill will bring it around all right. There is nothing but what the McKinley bill can do except to prevent death and taxes.

O. Styner & Bro. have shipped one of their threshing outfits west.

Most all the young men of Independence have taken the advice of Horace Greely and gone west.

Mrs. Hollis and Mrs. B. H. Hall drove to Minnetonka yesterday to visit relatives.

Those of Independence who attended the Wright county Democratic convention on Friday of last week were well pleased with the way Wright county conducts her conventions. It was a very pleasant affair indeed. The music was excellent and well appreciated by all.

B. H. Hall went to St. Peter last week to attend the reunion of the Second Minn., held there.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Sept. 23, 1892.

Distingnished Democrats were in attendance upon the National encampment of the G. A. R. which closed today, both as participators and as onlookers, and there is reason to believe that it was largely their presence which prevented the Republican managers attempting to openly carry out the program previously arranged to use the encampment in making a partisan demonstration against Mr. Cleveland—secretely they did what they could by distributing a pamphlet attacking Mr. Cleveland and by talking against him, Among the prominent democrats present who belong to the G. A. R. were Generals Rosecrans and Sickles, Col. Jones, Ex-Lieut. Gov. of New York, Senator Palmer, of Illinois, and Congressman Cheadle, of Indiana, Gov. Pattison and Ex-Gov. Curtain, of Pennsylvania, were also here, and it was apparant to all that the Pennsylvania veterans are very proud of their brainy young Governor.

There were, of course, other things that interfered with the Republican program. Mr. Harrison did not arrive here until Wednesday, and then the very serious condition of Mrs. Harrison, who came back with him, kept him almost constantly at her side; the death of a brother of Gov. McKinley kept him away from the encampment, and Whitelaw Reid, probably thinking that if he made himself conspicuous at the encampment it might cause the republication of some very bitter attacks published in his paper upon the pension system under its present management and do much more harm than his presence here could possibly do good, did not accept the invitation that was extended to him.

The encampment was unquestionably a great success, and the parade the biggest thing of the kind the country has ever seen, or probably ever will see. The day was perfect and there were more than 80,000 men in line exclusive of bands and drum corps, while the crowds that thronged every available foot of space between the Capitol and Twenty-second street is variously estimated as having been anywhere between 400,000 and 500,000 people.

This immense crowd was well cared for by the Washington people, who were glad to show the country how well and how easily the city could care for a large crowd. There was no extortion, and, so far as known, with the exception of a few hundred old soldiers who brought their wives here under the impression that free board and lodging would be furnished them during the encampment, being misled, it is charged, by overthrifty railroad passenger agents anxious to sell as many tickets as possible, every visitor went home well pleased with the treatment at the National capital. The citizen's committee did not promice to furnish food to anybody, but it did furnish free lodging to more than 55,000 men and free hospital service to all, and the old soldiers say that their treatment here was in every respect better than ever received anywhere else; and if they talk at home as they did here, the courtesy of Washingtonians to strangers will soon be known throughout the country, as it deserves to be.

One of the queerest things about the big parade was that a man who only a few years ago occupied the White House for four years and drawn salary as President of the United States, could have marched on foot with an Ohio post over the entire line of march without exciting any further remark or demonstration than an occasional "Hallo, there's Hayes," from some Washington or Ohio man, while Ben Butler, riding in a carriage, should be constantly raising his hat in responce to cheers. Mr. Hays is not a great man, but he is so much better than Ben Butler that his name should not be mentioned in the same paragraph.

The Republicans are becoming very much alarmed over the state of their end of the campaign, which is practically without a head since the dangerous turn in his wife's illness has taken all of Mr. Harrison's attention. From the beginning of his canvas for a second nomination Mr. Harrison has been in sole command, and as he has not designated anyone to take his place since he began to devote his time entirely to his sick wife, the machine is beginning to wobble dreadfully.

Mr. A. G. Porter, who resigned as minister to Italy by direction of his chief, for the purpose of managing the Republican campaign of Indiana, is in Washington, presumably to receive his final orders.

A JUDICIAL authority in New Jersey has lately decided in a suit for divorce that every married woman is entitled to a home where she shall be in supreme control. A boarding-house or hotel, it was held, did not constitute such a home, as another woman regulated the affairs of the household. It is apparent that this profound authority should give another decision as soon as possible to restore anything like the balance of rights. A vague idea has existed that husbands are entitled to something, but what it is must, after this decision, remain in doubt.

THERE is considerable strong common sense in what Sara Bernhardt recently said in Brussels about the microbe and disease. She said that there was probably some truth in the germ theory that physicians and scientists have been talking about so much of late, but that they had allowed their imagination to run away with their reason. For herself, she did not believe in the cold-feet microbe, the bachache microbe or the soft-corn microbe. As to the cholera, she believed that its prevalence in Russia was chiefly due to the conditions of the people, brought about by the famine.

THE statement is made that there are in the United States and Canada 600 men in every 1,000 who have reached the age of thirty and are still single. The article exhorts men to marry, which, they are told, duty and patriotism demand. But it is well to take into consideration the fact that men do not marry from considerations of duty and patriotism. They marry because they love the woman, and not because they love their country. As sentiment declines there is less love-making and fewer marriages, and any amount of appeals to duty and patriotism will not essentially change matters.

A FOOLISH SCARE.

Alarmed by a Cry of Fire a Big Congregation in a Jewish Synagogue in New York Makes a Rush for the Doors—Many Persons Trampled Upon, Four Women Being Killed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Four women were trampled to death and a dozen other persons injured, several of them probably fatally, by a senseless fire panic in a Jewish synagogue Friday morning. The catastrophe occurred in one of the four synagogues located in a dirty and crowded tenement house at 27 Ludlow street. The synagogue is on the third floor, and was crowded with Polish and Hungarian Jews of the lowest type. The panic was the result of a bit of paper catching fire from a candle which was being used in the ceremonies attendant upon the Rosh Hashannah celebration. The worshipers in the room numbered about 300 persons, and they were so closely packed that when a man who saw the paper blaze up cried "Fire!" none of the people could turn to get out, but forced their way over the heads of others. The men led the fight to get to the door, and women and children were trampled under foot. The men made no attempt to save the women and children, but literally fought their way to the passage and struggled with one another on the stairs to get to the street.

One man who could not escape extinguished the blazing paper, and when the cowardly men reached the street and saw no smoke coming from the windows, they sought to return, but by this time the congregations of two other synagogues located on the second and third floors had become excited by the noise of the stampede from the rooms above them and not knowing the cause sought to escape. The wildest confusion reigned and two persons in the synagogue on the second floor were badly injured. The frightened worshipers fled through the streets yelling wildly in their native jargon and attracted a crowd of 2,000 to the scene of the panic.

When the police, who were also attracted by the clamor, went up to the third floor synagogue they found the dead bodies of three women and six groaning women, one child and an old man lying on the stairway in an intricate mass. In the top room were found one dead body and four injured. The bodies of the dead women were concealed by the forms of the injured, who had saved themselves from being crushed to death by forming a mound on the floor with the bodies of the dead for a base. So dense was the crowd that choked up the street that the policemen had to use their clubs to make room for the ambulance surgeons and police employed in removing the victims. It required nearly two hours to accomplish the task.

The congregation on the third floor of the building, where the panic occurred, was that of the Talmud Torah. Its rabbi is Samuel Muller and the congregation numbers 350 persons. About 300 of these gathered at 9:30 o'clock to join in what is known to the faith as second day prayers, following the yom kipper celebration which occurred Thursday. The services, which were of the most rigid orthodox character, progressed for about fifteen minutes without interruption. Rabbi Muller had opened the book of prophets and raised his voice, while the congregation sat with bowed heads praying, when by some accident a candle which stood on the preacher's desk was upset. In its fall it set fire to some flimsy paper drapery on the stand—a piece no bigger than a child's apron. The paper blazed up. A frightened man in the congregation shouted "Fire!" Instantly the whole mass of 300 persons arose and rushed for the door. At the front partition door there was a jam, then a crash, and a part of the board wall gave way. The mass poured, fell, rolled down the steep stairway.

Three times as many persons were attending the services in the synagogues on the lower floors. They heard the disorder overhead, the crash of the rending boards, the shouts of fire and cries of anguish and with a common impulse did what the others had done, ran for the stairs and their lives. At the second floor landing there is a sharp turn. Again the mass stuck for a moment, but worked loose presently, and the first onset occurred. The two blind and maddened human avalanches met, on coming downstairs, the other cutting in under it and trying to get ahead.

A furious struggle ensued. Men and women fought, dumb with the madness of despair, and the weakest went down. The deadlock was broken again and again, only to be renewed with the same scenes of terror. Slowly the solid mass, filling the stairway from wall to ceiling, slid down to the ground floor. Down there it brought up against the rush from the rear room synagogue, the biggest of all, and came to a dead stop. The stairs did not give way. The shrieks of desperate women on the stairs had called help. Patrolman Colton ran in, fought his way through the struggling mass and pulled the front figure out of the solid block on the stairs. It was a woman, Milowitch by name. As she came out the barriers slowly yielded and those above were freed.

Albert Wolfe, of 136 Monroe street, jumped out of the window of a neighboring house in his excitement and was badly hurt. He was picked up and carried away by two policemen.

BATTLED IN A CELL.

A Tennessee Murderer Locked Up with a Brother of One of His Victims.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 24.—Adam Leger, a convict from Claiborne county, who has killed several men, was brought here Thursday on his way to prison. Leger was put in a cell with William Leach, one of the miners now awaiting trial for participating in the late riots. In May, 1881, Leger murdered Leach's brother, and when the men met Thursday they fought desperately and both were fatally hurt, Leger having one eye torn out.

Looks Like a Music Trust.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 24.—A syndicate has consummated a combination of music publishers and musical instrument manufacturers. This city will be the center of business. The capital will be $5,000,000. The interests involved are the John Church Company, of this city, with a New York house at 13 East Fourteenth street; the Everett Piano Company, of Boston; Root & Son's Music Company, of Chicago; the Haward Piano Company, of Boston, and the Royal Manufacturing Company, of this city.

TRADE IS IMPROVING.

The Cholera Scare Vanishes and Business of All Kind Revives.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—The weekly review of trade says:

"The alarm about cholera has vanished, and trade in every direction shows all the improvement that was expected. The south is a little dull because cotton is low in price and late, but a little improvement has been seen during the past week. In a few quarters in the west farmers are holding back wheat for higher prices so that collections are retarded. But the general tenor of advices is exceedingly favorable. The volume of business continues larger than a year ago. Collections are exceptionally good on the whole, and although money is in active and increasing demand at nearly all points, the supply is ample for all legitimate needs. Gold exports have ceased, foreign exchange has declined and the money market is at present without disturbing features.

"Speculation is not on the whole active enough to have a disturbing influence. Wheat has recovered 1⅞ cents, but sales have been only 6,000,000 bushels. Corn has declined 2¼ cents and oats ¾ of a cent. Speculation in cotton has been larger, sales reaching 750,000 bales, and the price has been advanced 3-16 of a cent by the covering of shorts' sales. Pork products are a shade stronger, but oil is ⅝ of a cent lower, and in coffee speculation has advanced the price 1¼ cents.

"General trade at Chicago exceeds last year's for the same week with good prospects. At St. Louis trade increases with large distribution of goods, a free movement of grain and country buyers in larger number than usual. Business is healthy at Milwaukee; very active at Omaha and shows a marked increase at St. Paul. At Denver trade is very satisfactory, but no improvement is seen at Salt Lake. Receipts of cattle and wheat are heavy at Kansas City.

"The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number 211 as compared with totals of 182 last week. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 244."

IRON HALL REORGANIZED.

Somerby Elected Chief Officer and Voted a Purse of $1,000.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 24.—The new Iron Hall was organized here Friday. The old heads ran the meeting and the old officials were reelected. Somerby presided, but as it would not do for him to take the chief office openly he at first declined, and then, being pressed, concluded to accept. He was also voted a $1,000 purse for his trouble. The other officers elected were: J. Albert Clark, Exeter, N. H., past supreme commander; A. H. Hosmer, supreme accountant; Joseph Harris, supreme cashier; Dr. C. H. Baker, of Philadelphia, supreme medical director. Somerby, Hosmer and Harris are officers of the old concern. The financial plan of the new order is to pay $1,000 in seven years for about $450, or $500 in seven years for about $225. Old members going into the new concern sign a warrant giving the supreme accountant the power to draw from the receiver of the old Iron Hall the amount due them, which is transferred into what is explained to be the reserve fund of the new order. Old members will receive new certificates dated at the time of their entrance into the old order.

GEN. JOHN POPE IS DEAD.

The Veteran Passes Away at the Ohio Soldiers' Home at Sandusky.

SANDUSKY, O., Sept. 24.—Maj. Gen. John Pope died here Friday night at the Ohio soldiers' home in the household of Gen. M. F. Force, the commandant of the home. At his bedside were Mrs. Pope, Mrs. Force, sister to Mrs. Pope, and Gen. M. F. Force. The deceased soldier had been with Gen. Force several months, suffering from nervous prostration. A month or so ago his malady was considered fatal, but its termination was scarcely expected so soon.

[Gen. John Pope was born in Kentucky in 1823. Early in the war he had a command in the state of Missouri. In the early spring of 1862 he distinguished himself by successes at New Madrid, Mo., and in the advance upon Corinth, Miss. He was one of the most ardent and aggressive of the division commanders under Halleck. It was he that led in the pursuit when the confederates evacuated Corinth. In the same year he was transferred to the eastern army in Virginia and later was given a command in the northwest. In Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and adjoining states are many survivors of his command at Island No. 10 and at Corinth who will mourn his death.]

POISONED BY DRINKING MILK.

Twenty-Three Persons in Cincinnati in a Serious Condition.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 24.—The health department was notified Friday night that about forty persons in the different parts of the city were suffering from symptoms of cholera. Health Officer Prendergast investigated and found the persons suffering from poisoning due to the drinking of milk. About noon and in the afternoon a number of persons who drank milk were seized with cramps and vomiting. Physicians were sent for and found them in a serious condition. They at once pronounced them suffering from poisoning due to drinking milk. All those seen said the milk was of a bluish white, with a bitter taste. An investigation is to be made of the milk and of the dairies whence it came.

Utah Commission's Report.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—The Utah commission has handed to Secretary Noble the report of the proceedings for the year ending September 1. The commission declares that polygamy still exists in the territory though not to so great an extent as formerly. The development of the territory's resources is going forward rapidly.

Will Sue the Company.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept 24.—Judge Alfred Beers, John M. Hawley and David F. Read, of this city, will shortly institute civil suits for damages against the Hamburg-American Packet Company, due to their detention and the exposure and privations to which they were subjected on the Normannia. They will claim $10,000 each.

Charged with Embezzlement.

SALINA, Kan., Sept. 24.—Ed Olmstead was arrested Friday for stealing merchandise and money from his employer, a dry goods merchant. In eleven years he has accumulated over $19,000. He turned over $3,000 to the firm, was fined a small sum and allowed to go free. His wife owns a large estate in Germany.

He Criticised Diaz.

MONTEREY, Mexico, Sept. 24.—C. C. Hogue, an American merchant of this city, has been expelled from the republic for criticising the administration of President Diaz.

Hanged Herself with a Skein of Yarn.

GENESEO, Ill., Sept. 24.—Mrs. W. P. Cook hanged herself at her home in this city Friday morning, using a skein woolen yarn. She was the wife of ex-mayor W. P. Cook, one of the oldest and most prominent business men in the city. She had been in ill health for some time and melancholia is supposed to have been the cause of her action.

Women May Vote in New Zealand.

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Sept. 24.—The legislative council has passed the woman's franchise bill with a proviso that female voters may be registered without personal appearance at the polls.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

KILLED BY A PANTHER.

A Portion of Barnum's Menagerie Devours Two Children.

Kitty Yancy, aged 12, and Herbert Yaney, aged 10, came to a fearful death, near Warsaw, Rice county. They were killed by a panther which escaped from Barnum's circus about a week ago. They were passing through a wooded region, accompanied by a dog, when, it is supposed, the dog must have aroused the panther. The boy was killed by a blow from the animal's paw, and the girl was bitten in the neck. Near them the dog lay dead. The panther was afterwards killed.

Trouble with His Flock.

Rev. S. Baronowski, a priest of St. Stanislaus' Roman Catholic church in Winona, has resigned, and will leave for Brazil, South America, to take up work there. The cause of his resignation is a disagreement between himself and his congregation arising from the fact that the members attended a Sunday excursion to La Crosse against the father's express command. Rev. Mr. Dormagalski, of Chicago, has been appointed his successor.

For an Old Crime.

Sheriff Grundysen has under his charge at Brockton August Kelle, of East Grand Forks, who is charged by Mrs. H. Halvorson, of that city, of murdering her husband twelve years ago last June. What evidence there is that Kelle is the man who did the deed has not been learned by the general public. The accused waived examination and was bound over to the next term of the district court.

Ask for Restriction.

The Duluth board of health held a special meeting, and as a result Mayor D'Autremont issued a proclamation urging citizens to clean up individual premises, and to report all existing filth to the health department, communications to be confidential. The mayor also telegraphed President Harrison, urging him to restrict immigration for ninety days at least.

Flames at Faribault.

Fire destroyed Hill's opera house and block at Faribault. The losses of the occupants are: A. L. Hill, furniture, $7,500; C. H. Lang, furnishings, $1,000; T. S. Conlin, insurance, $500; A. L. Meyer, lawyer, $500. The outfit of the Gallery Specialty Company, which was in the opera house, was all destroyed; loss, $1,500. Loss on building, $2,500; insured.

Worried to Death.

Mrs. Jerry Plank, who resides near Laird, on the Winona & Southwestern, a few miles from Winona, is dead. A short time ago her two sons, aged 20 and 21, were drowned in the river near Winona, and since that occurrence Mrs. Plank had not been well and practically worried herself to death.

THE ST. LOUIS CARNIVAL.

Increasing Popularity of the St. Louis Fall Festivities.

The Illuminations Witnessed by Large and Enthusiastic Crowds—The Veiled Prophet Pageant.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 22.—Advantage is being taken by residents in a large number of states of the low railroad rates to St. Louis during the carnival, and every day crowds of excursionists visit the city and spend a few days in it enjoying the attractions and the remarkable hospitality of its citizens. The illuminations, covering over six miles of streets, and including over 75,000 gas and electric lights, are calling forth enthusiastic praise from thousands of spectators every evening, and the crowds on the streets to-night were remarkable in every respect. The police force are in hearty sympathy with the Autumnal Festivities association, and they find the crowds so uniformly good-tempered and satisfied that there is little difficulty in preserving order and preventing the unpleasantness which is apt to arise from such an enormous collection of people on the streets.

The electric panorama and pyrotechnic effects naturally attract the lion's share of attention, but the street and side walk illuminations generally are grand enough in themselves to warrant a long journey to see them. An illustration is given of the Grant statue with the flags of Spain and the United States suspended above it, and it may be added that a triumph of electricity has been attained to such an extent that the flags appear to wave during the illuminations.

AN immense number of special attractions are announced. The T. P. A. celebration will be on Saturday, October 1, on which day the Veiled Prophet will arrive by boat on the Mississippi river, and the great Veiled Prophet's parade and ball will take place on Tuesday, October 4. The annual St. Louis fair, too popular and well-known to need description, opens October 3 and closes October 8, with two grand illuminations during the week.

TRIALS OF A PRETTY GIRL.

Some of the Things a Restaurant Cashier Does Not Like.

"Do you know," said a pretty girl who officiated as cashier in a fashionable restaurant, "these men nearly drive me crazy. I don't know why it is, but they all seem to think that because they like my looks I must like theirs, and all the time they're eating they sit and stare and stare and stare. I'm compelled to keep my eyes down continuously. If I chance to look up at a man, whether he's married or single, young or old, he's sure to fix me with a smile. Then of course I must smile back, just so that his appetite won't be spoiled, you know. But when they begin to talk to me I turn them down—down to the ground. I mortified an editor this evening, and I feel rather sorry about it now, because he's a rather handsome young man with a wife and family that he loves too well to forsake for me, I know. But he had no right to start a conversation, any way. He said: "Isn't it too bad for me to have to go back to work again tonight after eating this expensive dinner?' His bill, by the way, was 45 cents. 'Yes, it is,' said I. 'Where do you work?' 'I'm with the Howler,' he answered. 'Well,' I said, 'you printers always do have hard times, anyway.' He blushed. 'Do I look like a printer?' he groaned. 'To be sure you do,' I answered, with a smile, and he walked off without another word. I hope that that's the last I'll ever be troubled with him."—Philadelphia Record.

Be Cheerful at Breakfast.

It often happens that the housekeeper must serve everything, besides pouring the coffee. The best a woman can do under these circumstances is to keep calm, cook and serve a healthful and plain breakfast as cheerfully and well as possible, forgetting herself until her family is served and ready for the day's work. After this, if she be a wise woman, she will eat her own breakfast slowly, resting body and mind, that she might be prepared for the work of the day. Few women realize how much influence this first meal has upon the members of their household. The woman who does her own work, if she be wise, will not often serve more than two courses for dinner. Have the dessert dishes all ready on the sideboard or a side table. Remove the dinner plates, vegetables and meat dishes, butter plates, etc., and then brush the table, if there be any crumbs upon it; then put on the dessert. If there be children in the family they can be trained to change the plates and bring in the other dishes. It is an educating and refining experience for them.—Ladies' Home Journal.

COMFORTED.

I took her hand in mine, and said:
"I pray thee, child, be comforted,
For thine is but the common lot.
And there will come to thee a day,
It may be near, or far away,
When all these trials that dismay
Will be remembered not."

Yet still she wept, the while I sought
With words from holy Scriptures brought
Her wounded spirit to console.
"To the Lord's will be reconciled,
And bear up bravely, now, my child;
By hope and confidence beguiled,
This flood of grief control."

I quoted all the Psalms I knew,
Recited poems not a few,
I hoped would sweet submission teach;
But realized that all I said,
And all the passages I read,
Never once touched or comforted
The heart I longed to reach.

What should I do? In what sweet way
Could I my sympathy convey
To one so overcome with grief?
My prayers but little had availed,
Since she as bitterly bewailed,
And all my best endeavors failed
To give the least relief.

Powerless to mitigate such woe
In meek despair I rose to go,
And, turning, saw her tear-stained face.
It moved my heart with sudden thrill,
My eyes with tears began to fill,
And I was sorrowful until
My steps I could retrace.

I had no thought of prayer or psalm,
Nor voice, indeed, the storm to calm;
So not a single word I said,
But round her waist my arms I threw,
And gave her kisses not a few,
And, ah! by many a sign I knew
That she was comforted!

MY MONEY.

How I Disposed of It and All My Troubles.

I was by several years the youngest of the six children in my father's family. The others left home while I remained to care for our parents in their old age. They both died within a few months of each other, and at the death of my father and the breaking up of that household, Robert urged that we be married at once, instead of waiting as we had planned to do. Immediately after the wedding we went west and began life together. He was honest and industrious, and possessed the love and confidence of the people among whom we lived.

One day, when Robert and I had passed the middle of life and were jogging along the down-hill road, still unconscious that we had started on down hill, he came home looking pale and pinched with suffering. All that winter the pain came sometimes, but not severe enough to convince him that it was serious.

One morning in March he came in looking ill. He would "rest a little before breakfast." In five minutes breakfast was on the table and Janie called him. He did not answer. His hat had fallen over his eyes and his head had fallen upon his breast. When we looked into his face I felt that life had gone and that I stood alone in the world.

The shock was a terrible one to my nervous system, and it was weeks before I rallied so as to be able to look after my affairs. We were counted, by the rural people of our neighborhood, as rich people. We had not thought of ourselves as such, but we had much more than enough for our simple wants. My own inheritance from my father had been prudently invested and allowed to accumulate; while Robert's unflagging industry had made for us a competence. He had long since provided that this should all belong to me at his death, save a few legacies which he bequeathed to the sons of his only brother.

Alas! had my husband foreseen what all this money would do for me I am sure he would never have thus burdened me. I had the misfortune to bear a very mild manner. My husband's nephews mistook this for weakness of will. They each claimed at once the right of caring for Aunt Malviny. Robert, because he was my husband's namesake; Frank, because he was the oldest, and therefore the natural representative of the family.

"Preposterous," I could imagine I heard my husband saying. "You never yet could take care of yourselves. Pretty subjects you to take care of your aunt."

But my husband was not here to say this, and I was too ill to say anything. Both ordered their trunks sent to the house and took possession of the two best rooms in the house.

My faithful Janie worked hard and tried to save me trouble, but one night she came to my room with tears in her eyes. "I guess I'll have to leave you, Mrs. Reed."

I was roused into energy by this. "Janie, leave me!"

"I'm very sorry, Mrs. Reed, but I can't stand the work."

"But, Janie, you have always done the work and had plenty of time to spare. Now, do you want to go when I am left all alone?"

"That's it, Mrs. Reed. I'd be glad to stay with you if you was alone, but the two gentlemen in the house order me about so and make such looking rooms that it takes every minute to get through the work. Mr. Robert says I am to have soup every day and Mr. Frank says 'a man as rich as Uncle Reed should have more than one kind of meat at dinner,' and they've sent in so much victuals that it's just kept me hopping to cook it and then keep it from spoiling. The cellar is full now and things will spoil before they can be half eat up."

"Well! and this is what has been going on while I have been staying in my room trying to realize what has happened. Evidently these worthy nephews have a full and realizing sense of what has happened."

As I sat in the moonlight that night with my window raised to get the coolness upon my heated forehead I heard voices from the porch below.

"I think Noah's ark has about served its time as a carriage and can be kept now as a curiosity. The new carriage will be done next Wednesday. The idea of as rich a man as Uncle Robert driving around in that old ramshackle!"

My dear old comfort, the easy carryall which could carry my poor, sensitive back without a jar, to be "stored as a curiosity!" I began to realize that I had a will. While I had been so tenderly cared for first by my father and then by my husband, it had been allowed to slumber. Now I could feel it asserting itself and it boded no good for the managers below stairs. Still I could not bring myself to turn them out of doors and thus "make talk" in the neighborhood. Instead, I would go away myself, and close the house, taking Janie with me.

It was all arranged with her very quietly that night when she came up to bed. At breakfast next morning I announced my intention of going east for the summer. Both of my nephews encouraged the plan.

"You need rest and change, Aunt Malviny," Frank said.

"Yes, indeed," Robert said, "and we can look after everything here. Janie can do the work with us to manage."

"Janie is going with me and I shall shut up the house. Old Charlie shall go to the pasture and stay until I return. I will put the key in the hands of Janie's mother to look after the house and, therefore, shall not need anyone here."

"But, Aunt Malviny, we have been looking over the place and thought it best to have some changes made in the buildings. The men will be here Monday to begin work. We may not be able to get them again so cheaply."

"I shall have no changes whatever in the place at present and perhaps never. If you have engaged men to come, you had better see them at once and tell them they will not be needed here."

Robert made one more effort. "The improvement on the house can wait, but the carriage house must be built at once to make shelter for the new carriage."

"The barn has always sheltered my carry-all and can still do so. As I have no new carriage, I shall need no shelter for it."

"We ordered the carriage for you because you were not well enough to look after it yourself, and it will be here next week."

"If you have ordered a carriage, you certainly will have to pay for it."

One more effort to keep their footing.

"You should have some man here to look after your interests and keep your business straight."

"I have a good man, Mr. Johnson; he will keep everything straight."

"I am afraid, Aunt Malviny, if you trust your business to these lawyers, you will not have much left pretty soon."

"Perhaps not. At any rate I will try."

Falteringly I had begun, but I felt my courage increase with every fresh attack, and when we arose from the breakfast table I had announced that in three days I would close the house. During the ensuing three days the young men spent the greater part of the time in their rooms, smoking and lounging. Through their open windows I occasionally heard snatches of conversation of which I give a few extracts:

"Wonder what the old hump-back expects to do with her money anyhow!"

"Get married again, most likely. She's just the kind to be looking for a man again in less than six months."

"One thing, I shall charge a good, round price for my services during the month I've spent here."

They took their departure without any demonstrations of affection in their good-by. It hurt me exceedingly to have to take the stand I did, for our home had always been a hospitable one and these young men were my husband's kindred. But there was no other way and I knew Robert would approve.

Janie was a comfort and a help to me in the long journey which I would hardly have dared in my weak state to make alone. She was very happy, too, to be able to visit her grandmother whom she had never seen and who lived only a score of miles from my own relatives.

"Won't grandma be surprised to see me? She sent me a doll last Christmas and writes about little Janie as though I was only ten years old instead of eighteen!"

I was met at the station by my nephew George, who gave me such a welcome that my heart warmed toward him and I felt that it was good to be among my kindred. Of my brothers and sisters all were dead save my oldest sister, and she was hopelessly paralyzed in body and imbecile in mind, but tenderly cared for by her youngest daughter and her husband. Besides this niece there were three nephews with their families living in this New England city. All were employed in some capacity in the shoe factories there, which constituted by far the greater part of the business. Their pay enabled them to live very comfortably, but not to "get ahead any," as John expressed it. They all, therefore, looked upon me with the awe and respect which human nature is apt to have for that which it has not itself yet attained. They seemed to regard me as little less than a Vanderbilt or a Jay Gould, and much as I tried to remove that impression I found it impossible.

Here is a sample remark made to one of the neighbors whom I had met: "Aunt Malviny is rich. I shouldn't much wonder if she was worth half a million. John was out to their house five or six years ago and he says they had farms and cattle and money at interest. Not a chick nor a child in the world neither."

"Pretty good for you folks," was the neighbor's answer. "Better not displease her while she's here."

At first I could not help being amused by these exaggerated ideas, but when I found it impossible to dispel them, and moreover that it was a barrier between me and them which forebade sympathy, I really grieved over it. They were kind and polite and very respectful, but I longed so for their love and fullest confidence which I knew I had not secured.

I went one day to see Janie and almost envied the humble position she held when I saw how completely she had entered into the family circle and been made one of them, sharing all their griefs and helping them in their smallest economies.

The days of June gave place to July and August, with little of the fierce heat for which these months are noted. In September Janie and I were to go home.

Before leaving I wanted to make a few gifts—something that should be a reminder of their western auntie, and also in such a shape that they should not be the poorer for the entertainment they had given me.

George's wife had one black dress—her best one—but it had been made over so many times that I was not puzzled to know what she should have for her gift. A black cashmere of best quality with linings and trimmings and a greenback to pay the dressmaker. Simple gifts for the other members of the family made a good sized parcel which I opened and presented with a happy heart. They all thanked me politely but there was a constraint in their manner which showed me very quickly that I had made a mistake.

When all had retired for the night George and Maria talked the matter over and my acute hearing proved again a misfortune when the words began to reach me.

"I did want a black silk dress," sobbed Maria, "and I thought when she was so rich she would surely get it for me. The girls both cried themselves to sleep because they've wanted gold watches so long and they thought sure Aunt Malviny would get them some. And Johnny's madder'n a wet hen about that necktie."

George, poor man, like most men, could not stand the tears, so he comforted her in this wise:

"Never mind, Maria, Aunt Malviny don't look as though she could stand it long. You and the girls can have your silk dress and your watches bimeby. Just stop crying and go to sleep now."

George's comforting words had their effect upon Maria. Instead of going to sleep she was soon discussing the plan for an enlargement of her house which was to be furnished with a Brussels carpet and a piano.

They also had their effect upon the unwilling listener in the next room whose life seemed opening out into longer vistas than ever before.

The gifts to the other families were of a similar character to those for George, but I was careful to have them delivered after my departure. I could not endure another such pain.

When I came to say good-by they all hoped I would come again soon.

"You might as well spend your money traveling as any other way, Aunt Malviny."

The heat was intense during the entire journey. Nothing like it had occurred earlier in the season. In Chicago I bought a daily paper, and in glancing over the headings this fastened my attention:

"Fierce prairie fires do great damage in Iowa. Village of C—— nearly wiped out by the flames. Many farmhouses, much hay and grain destroyed and even cattle and horses perish before they can be driven to a place of safety. The high winds make it impossible for the inhabitants to do more than to save their own lives."

My home was in ashes, with everything it contained. Indeed, my only place of refuge was Janie's humble home, which was a little outside the track of the fire. My farms were swept clear of everything, buildings, cattle, crops.

The little money which I had loaned was to the farmers in the vicinity, who had lost all their land. I canceled the notes and delivered them to the makers This much I could do. My land when sold would bring me enough to enter an old ladies' home, leaving a small surplus with which to furnish necessary clothing.

And so here I am. There are some painful thoughts connected with these losses, but I am not sorry they have occurred. I am almost glad. At least I can think that "my money" shall no longer be a trouble or a grief to my kindred, neither shall it encourage laziness or extravagance. I wonder if "Whatever is is right." — Emma Thresher, in Western Rural.

NOTIONS ABOUT LUCK.

Burning Shoes to Bring Good Fortune—Hoodoos Removed to Order.

A horrible smell that came in at the library window made the visitor sniff.

"Goodness me!" exclaimed her hostess, disgustedly. "There is Susan burning shoes again!"

"Burning shoes? What does she do that for?"

"She does it for luck, she says, and I have tried in vain to break her of the habit. All of the superstitions of her ancestors she seems to have faith in. She insists that to burn old shoes brings good fortune, and so I am afflicted with this kind of nuisance about once a week."

"How very funny!"

"You may well say so. I had a most absurd conversation with Susan yesterday on the subject of hoodoos. She told me that on one occasion not long ago she was taken quite sick, and a professional 'wise man' whom she called in told her that she was bewitched by a certain woman in the neighborhood. This woman, he declared, had succeeded in getting hold of a part of Susan's spirit and had put it in a bottle, which was thrown into the fire. The only thing to do under the circumstances was to procure some of the ashes from the fire, which were to be found in a heap in the woman's yard. So Susan did as she was bidden—got the ashes by stealth, gave them to the wise man and paid him to remove the spell from her and put it on the enemy. He did so, and, as Susan told me, the person who bewitched her hasn't had a well day since."

"Ridiculous!"

"Poor Susan had to pay the wise man twenty dollars for removing that hoodoo, and she never feels any confidence that she will not at any time be assailed by the mysterious influences which may be invoked against her by ill-disposed persons. As well as I can find out, such wise men and wise women make their living in Washington by going about among the most ignorant of the colored people and informing them that they are victims of magic and spells, which can be counteracted and removed for a money consideration. During the talk I had with Susan yesterday she discoursed at great length on the subject of luck, opposing what she regarded as practical experience to my incredulous theories."

"What did she speak of in particular?"

"Well, her talk was chiefly of what she called 'sharp luck.' She told me that the best way to fetch it was to take two pins, two nails and two needles and stick them in the ground—the needles with their points up and the nails and pins with their points down. Next, I must name the two needles after myself and the friend of whom I was most fond, at the same time naming the pins and nails after four of my enemies. This process was sure to bring good fortune to my friend and myself, and very bad luck indeed to the foes represented by the pins and nails."—Washington Star.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—It is announced that on the occasion of the episcopal jubilee of the pope next year there will be 700 priestly pilgrims from the United States, besides many hundreds from other parts of North America and from South America, attended by numerous bishops and archbishops. They are expected to reach Rome in April.

—There are over one hundred medical missionaries in China, fifty-six of whom are American women. The especially friendly reception given the American representative on an important mission a few years ago was due to the influence of an American woman who had treated with great success several members of the family of Li Hung Chang, the premier.

—The "Gospel Barge" of Bishop Walker (Episcopal) of North Dakota, soon to be launched at Bismarck, will be called the Missouri Missioner, and will be used for Christian work in towns and camps along the Missouri for a distance of more than 500 miles. It is 93 feet in length and 25 feet in breadth. The bishop hopes with this barge church to reach many people who could not otherwise attend Divine service, and it is to be used for general Christian work of every kind that the region calls for.

—The Presbyterian church has taken strong ground against the use of tobacco by ministers, and the number of objectors is constantly increasing. Every applicant for admission to the Methodist ministry is asked if he uses tobacco, and it is almost impossible for one who does to secure admission. The question has been asked by a bishop who was himself a user of the weed, but had acquired the habit before entering the ministry. It is probable that before twenty-five years have passed there will not be a preacher in the Methodist Episcopal church who uses tobacco in any form.

—The 220 evangelical labor associations of Germany have about 100,000 members. The aims and purposes of these societies are five, as follows: First, to arouse and foster an evangelical spirit among the Protestant workingmen; second, to elevate the laboring man morally and intellectually; third, to cultivate a spirit of fidelity to the empire and government; fourth, to establish and maintain a friendly relationship between employer and employes; fifth, to aid and assist the members in case of sickness, want or death. They originated with a working miner named Ludwig Fischer.

LURES FOR POOR FISHES.

Artificial Baits Calculated to Deceive the Wisest Finny Victims.

"These little green frogs are something new for bait," said a dealer in anglers' supplies to a Star writer. "They are made of soft India rubber. Here are earthworms, also of the same material, threaded on hooks. They save a great deal of trouble when real ones are scarce, and young ladies provided with them while fishing do not have occasion to constantly annoy their male escorts with requests that their lines be attended to. Pike and certain other carnivorous fishes very much enjoy a small mouse on the rare occasions when such a luxury is obtainable, and so these little counterfeit mice are supplied to tempt their appetites. Imitations of various kinds of animals for use as bait are becoming more numerous every season. In this box of counterfeit insects are grasshoppers, lady bugs, bronze and black beetles, caterpillars and bees. It is not necessary to mention the hundreds of species of moths and other bugs that are reproduced in the shape of artificial 'flies,' made of bits of feathers and fur, that are gathered from all parts of the world for the purpose. This horrible looking thing represents in a life-like manner a 'helgramite'—the larva of the dragon fly, otherwise known as the 'devil's darning needle.' Here are some artificial shrimps, which serve almost as well for bait as real ones. Another novelty is the 'floating minnow.' It is intended for trolling in shallow waters, where there are lilypads or snags on the bottom which are likely to foul the hook. So long as the boat is going ahead the minnow travels about half a foot beneath the surface; but when the boat pauses the minnow comes to the top instead of sinking and getting caught. Imitation 'sand eels' are a new kind of lure, and 'phantom minnows' are in greater variety this year than ever before, counterfeiting actual live ones with surprising accuracy, as you may see for yourself. All these things are for fresh water fishing. The only kind of artificial bait that will deceive a salt water fish is a gleaming troll such as these mother-of-peal 'squids' which will take the eye of a bluefish better than any live bait that ever was invented.—Washington Star.

IT WAS WEARING ON HIM.

What He Had to Undergo With a Night-blooming Baby.

The lord of the manor slept, although the baby had the cholic and was in no wise disposed to suffer in silence.

"Wah—oop—oo—wah! wailed the infant.

Distracted at the child's distress the mother rushed wildly to the cradle.

"Hush-a-by, hush-a-by," cooed she.

"Gr—a—r—siss—poo," snored the lord of the manor.

The woman made ten quick laps around the room, danced the suffering baby vigorously and performed a great variety of exhaustive antics, popularly supposed to make young children forget their troubles.

"Whoop!" yelled the little one.

"Hush-a-by, baby, on the tree—"

"Gr-r-roo—siss—poo."

The lord of the manor slept.

One by one the sands of time flowed through the hour-glass. Minutes grew into hours. Just as the rising sun was coloring the eastern horizon with a delicate glow the baby fell asleep. With a smile of tender radiance the mother placed her darling in the cradle, and, imprinting a soft kiss upon its brow, turned to her couch.

The lord of the manor stirred and opened his eyes.

"Can I help you, Maria?" he feebly asked with a yawn.

The wife and mother sighed.

"No, John," she wearily rejoined.

They slept.

"I shouldn't be surprised—"

It was the lord of the manor talking to a friend next day.

"If I looked mighty haggard. This being up nights—"

He gasped prodigiously.

"With the baby is mighty wearing on a man."

The lord of the manor looked decidedly dissatisfied with life.—Detroit Tribune.

HOBGOBLINS FOR CHILDREN.

Infants Whose Days Are Haunted By Bogie Men and Bears.

The best results of fiction for the young are to be found in the enrichment of the imagination, not in the cultivation of the moral faculties; and the genuine nursery literature is so clearly imaginative that no healthy-minded child mistakes such moral lessons as may be drawn from it. For my part, I should rather trust the morals of the young to the most improbable nursery tales than to the life-like, hateful narratives of real life in which the daughter-in-law is set against her mother-in-law. Is it worse for an impressionable youth to contemplate the ingenious depravity of the wicked uncle in "The Babes in the Wood" than to imbibe from the latest, most improved fiction the insidious poison which makes him critical of his own parents' disciplinary methods with him, because they differ from those of an ideally charming mamma in a story-book?

To draw upon my own recollections, my childhood was haunted by bears. They were not bears out of books, so far as I can remember, but a childish formula for the dark unknown which is apt to frighten every little stranger who comes alone into this great world of ours. Many an hour have I lain awake in an ecstasy of trembling lest the sonorous breathing of the sister asleep at my side should be loud enough to rouse the dire beasts from their lurking places. Yet those hours did not "embitter my infancy," nor do they now in retrospect cause me poignant grief. What does shame me is the remembrance of other hours of that same period when I was trying to adjust my emotions and actions to an agreement with those of the particular heroine out of fiction who happened to be my nearest acquaintance at the time.

I am aware that there is another side to this subject. There are ignorant nurserymaids capable of embittering any infancy by their manner of introducing hobgoblins to it; but so long as there is mother love in the world there will be mothers wise and eloquent enough to act as the guides and interpreters of childhood in its excursions into Fairyland, and children who will rejoice to their latest day in the goodly heritage they possess in the realm which is ruled by an aristocracy of Red Riding Hood and her peers.—Atlantic.

THE NATIONAL ROAD.

Bumping Along a Kentucky Road of the Pre-Railway Epoch.

The old national road, as it was called, leading from the eastern seaboard to the west and south, and constituting the main public thoroughfare in the pre-railroad epoch, takes part of its way through the hill country of eastern Kentucky, and along its devious route I was jolting and bumping one day in a buck-board when I met a "red brush."

"How are you?" I said to him.

"How d'y'?" he responded.

"Got any worse roads than this around here?"

"Some."

"Where?"

"This un when you git about two miles furder down the crick."

"I thought the old national road ran through this way?"

"It does."

"Where is it?"

"Well, this used to be it," he said, drawling out the words, "but it disappeared durin' the war, an' haint got back yit."

I hadn't the slightest doubt of the accuracy of a portion of his statement, and with a mournful farewell bumped along.—Detroit Free Press.

A Real "Discovery Number"

both in text and illustrations is the October WIDE AWAKE. Its frontispiece is a dainty drawing by Meynelle, "In 1492," and shows a group of children waving their good-bys to Columbus as he sets sail. Elbridge S. Brooks gives a brief narration of the Irishman whose presence in the crew of Columbus has been discovered by Mr. John Fiske. Theron Brown's stirring ode and chorus, "In 1492," fitly introduces this "Discovery Number." These verses have been set to ringing music by Prof. E. C. Phelps for this number also. Copies of the leaflet containing this song are offered free to schools throughout the land.

A characteristic southern story by Richard Malcolm Johnston, "The Bee Hunters;" "A Cane Rush," by Malcolm Townsend; "I Spy," by John Preston True; "The Diver," by H. P. MERCURIAL

Mr. J. C. Jones, of Fulton, Ark., says of S.S.S. "About ten years ago I contracted a severe case of blood poison. Leading physicians prescribed medicine after medicine, which I took without any relief. I also tried mercurial and potash remedies, with unsuccessful results, but which brought on an attack of mercurial rheumatism that made my life one of agony. After suffering four years I gave up all remedies and commenced using S. S. S. After taking several bottles, I was entirely cured and able to resume work. Just What Is Wanted.

Business is alive to a great coming event, and in the hurly-burly of its preparations for the Columbian Exposition in 1893, too much is already seen on the streets of a fanciful or amusing nature, both superficial and catch-penny. There has been observed a void in the line of the strictly useful, combining therewith instructive object lessons and the beautiful in art. Books there may be by the score, but the experience of the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia shows that the mass of these were mere trifles and unserviceable. The horde of visitors were ever at a loss for a handy pocket guide of official stamp, not only reliable, but pleasing and always fit to keep. Just what is wanted of this unique kind has happily already made its appearance, and we have before us "THE OFFICIAL PORTFOLIO OF THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION," illustrated from Water Color Drawings.

This Portfolio is a rare and beautiful exponent of the main architectural features of the Great Exposition at Chicago in 1893. The fourteen magnificent structures are faithfully exhibited, while the Bird's-eye View gives a realistic glance at the lay of the grounds, with their principal buildings, lagoons, etc. The illustrations are exact reproductions, in water color effects, of the original drawings, made especially for this purpose from the official plans, by America's best known water color artist, Charles Graham. A copy of this exceptionally fine production will be sent to any address upon receipt of 10 cents in postage stamps by The Charles A. Vogeler Co., Baltimore, Md.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN.

A genuine sewed shoe that will not rip; fine Calf, seamless, smooth inside, flexible, more comfortable, stylish and durable than any other shoe ever sold at the price. Equals custom-made shoes costing from $4 to $5.

The only $3.00 Shoe made with two complete soles, securely sewed at the outside edge (as shown in cut), which gives double the wear of cheap welt shoes sold at the same price, for such easily rip, having only one sole sewed to a narrow strip of leather on the edge, and when once worn through are worthless.

The two soles of the W. L. DOUGLAS $3.00 Shoe when worn through can be repaired as many times as necessary, as they will never rip or loosen from the upper. Purchasers of footwear desiring to economize, should consider the superior qualities of these shoes, and not be influenced to buy cheap welt shoes sold at $3.00, having only appearance to commend them. W. L. DOUGLAS Men's $4 and $5 Fine Calf, Hand Sewed; $3.50 Police and Farmers; $2.50 Fine Calf; $2.25 and $2.00 Workingmen's; Boys' $2.00 and Youths' $1.75 School Shoes; Ladies' $3.00 Hand Sewed; $2.50, $2.00 and Misses' $1.75 Best Dongola, are of the same high standard of merit.

TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE.

THIS IS THE BEST $3. SHOE IN THE WORLD.

WILL NOT RIP.

Will give exclusive sale to shoe dealers and general merchants where I have no agents. Write for catalogue. If not for sale in your place send direct to Factory, stating kind, size and width wanted. Postage free. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

DELANO DIARY

--A carload of watermellons at 15 and 20 cts. a piece at GREEN'S.

—Pat. McNeeley, of Montrose, shipped 57 hogs and six head of cattle yesterday, from Delano.

—Leonard Roehl, of St. Paul, came up and took the remains of his brother John, who died on Wednesday, to St. Paul for burial.

—Donnelly thumped the Democrats much to the amusement of the Republicans, then he thumped the g. o. p. for the Democrats to laugh at.

—Our village council have ordered four booths and two ballot boxes for the coming election which is to be carried on under the new Australian system.

—John Nieson accompanied the remains of Leonard Gieger, who died at Beardsley, to this place, whence they were taken to St. Michaels to be burried.

—Justice Otto, to whom the change of venue in the case of Shaw vs. Parsons, was sent, decided that Plaintiff should have the five dollars claimed for house rent and the costs.

—The little steamboat that paddled up and down Crow river a couple of weeks ago has been taken to Lake Sarah, where she has more room, and where it is said she makes good time.

—Remember the Harvest Home Fair at the City Hall next Tuesday evening. The hall will be finely decorated. A special invitation is extended to those from neighboring towns.

—Rev. Hector, a colored orator of note is to orate to the Armstrong people, on Thursday evening, October 13. Subject temperance. Mr. H. is spoken of as an entertaining and instructive speaker.

—Rev. Blackhurst, of Litchfield, passed through town last week. He thinks of exchanging pulpits for a Sunday, soon, with Rev. Davies. Our people would be pleased to hear their former pastor again.

—A story was circulated at the County Fair last week that William Ziebarth had been hooked by a bull, and was dead. But on Saturday that gentleman called in while in town and was looking in about his usual health. Bill is not dead yet.

—A large number of people from Delano and vicinity accompanied by the cornet band attended the dedication of St. Michael's Catholic church yesterday. All report a fine church, a big crowd and a pleasant time.

--Rev. Davies preached to a good sized audience on Sunday on the duties children owe to their parents. Quite a few came in from the country to hear him. Roads are good and farmers are getting through their rush and so are able to come to town more frequent than before.

—I. Donnelly spoke to a well filled house, at the City Hall, on Tuesday evening. His speech was the same as he is making all over the country, even to the jokes. Mr. Donnelly is a very fluent speaker, but evidently he looks on the dark side of life and allows his imagination to exaggerate things considerably.

Donnellyisms.

The Republicans are awfully mean. He used to be one.

The Democrats are awfully mean. He once ran for Congress on their ticket.

The biggest potatoes come to the top of the barrel, and the biggest rascals to the top of the heap. Where's he?

The inside of the Minnesota Club House is very fine. Must have observed for himself.

The Democrats with 153 majority in the House of Representatives failed to revoke the McKinley bill. How could they with the Senate and President opposed to doing so?

Harvest Home Fair.

A "Harvest Home Fair" will be held in the city hall, Tuesday, Oct. 4, for the M. E. church. Fancy work, quilts and other articles will be for sale, also house plants, lemonade and confections will be sold in the hall. A unique curiosity and art gallery will be opened in the evening full of many attractions. Supper will be served from six to eight, after which will be the following entertainment:

1. Song, by choir.
2. Tableau.
3. Recitation.
4. Tableau.
5. Song, by Rev. Davis, Buffalo.
6. Tableau.

Personals.

Fred Lindsley was in Minneapolis this week.

Miss Cora McCarter, of Hamline, was in town this week.

Frank Revell, of Litchfield, did business in Delano on Monday.

Earl and George Holsington and J. H. McGary were up to hear Donnelly.

Fred Barrows came up from Minneapolis on Saturday. He is on the sick list.

Mrs. I. H. Grafft, of Hamline, came up on Saturday to visit Delano friends.

Geo. H. Blackwell spent Sunday with his brother and sister, in Minneapolis.

Al Roberts, of Devils Lake, shook hands with Delano friends Tuesday evening.

Wm. Guthrie and Miss M. E. Bennett, represented Woodland at the Donnelly meeting.

Wash Rader and wife returned this morning from the G. A. R. re-union at Washington.

Rev. Fitzgerald, formerly of Watertown, was a west bound passenger on the G. N. on Saturday.

James Finnegan, Walter St. John and Guy Halgren were among Watertown pepole over yesterday.

Dr. and Mrs. P. O'Hair, of Waverly, passed through town on Saturday on their return home from Duluth.

G. F. Wescott, of Fairabault, and Attorney Fifield, of Minneapolis, were doing business in town on Thursday.

Dr. Shrader visited Minneapols on Saturday to see his brother E. E. off for school. Ed. goes to Philadelphia this time.

Mrs. Phelomenia Hawkins who is returning home to the East from a visit to Dakota, is spending a few days with her cousin J. W. Parsons.

County Cullings.

August Greeling, of Rockford, while working for August Haften, on his threshing machine last week, caught his right arm in the wheels crushing it badly. Dr. Gibbs was called, and set the broken bones, which are healing rapidly.—Monticello items, Clearwater News.

The legislative ticket placed in the field, by the adjourned meeting, at Maple Lake on Monday is the same one that constituted the People's ticket last year with the exception of J. J. Rennie, of Annandale, who we believe is as good an addition as could have been made. He is a good, prompt business man, of that thriving village, and his Democracy is not disputed, and he is almost certain to be one of the winners.

The fureur for pink has by no means abated. Whether for dress, or for house or table decorations, couleur de rose reigns supreme. A most charming effect was produced at a resent anniversary luncheon by the use of great double, rose tinted hollyhocks in a silver bowl in the center of the table, and smaller bowls filled with the same flowers, placed at intervals between the places for the guests. The lunch was served on the lawn, under a marquee covered on the inside with garlands of greenery interspersed with hollyhocks. The daughter of the house, a perfect blonde with the face of a cherub, was dressed in palest pink, from her jaunty, broad-brimmed hat of pink mull with its wreath of hollyhocks, to the tips hf her dainty Suede slippers.—From Demorest's Family Magazine for October.

It appears then that the late Democratic convention held here was in fashion, at least with its badges.

Our neighbor up street has a new editorial this week, which, for various reasons, we suspect was written by no less a personage than "Billy Culkin," the chairman of the Republican county committee. The title is quite unique, "NOT STRADDLE OF THE PLATFORM" and the article itself is altogether out of the Eagle's rut. It endeavors to make people believe that Democrats are out of harmony on the tariff. Every man placed on the ticket is supposed to favor Tariff Reform and the talk about not believing in Grover Cleveland's idea on the tariff is rather laughable. When he ran four years ago he received nearly 100,000 more votes than did Harrison on this very question, but they were so distributed that the electoral college gave this office to Harrison. It is quite likely that Cleveland will carry several Northwestern states which with New York and Indiana will give him a better chance this year.

Political Points.

We hear that Lamson has paid his poll tax preparatory to running for Auditor.

Culkin and Searle are making a tour of the county. Where's Committeeman Buckley with his little tin pan?

Wm. Quinn, chairman of the Democratic county committee, was in town last night.

One of the Republican nominees in our county is said to be a gambler.

A woman in Rockford, interested in educational matters enquired the other day if the Democratic nominee for Superintendent of Schools was a man "who if elected, would give certificates quite easily before election, and immediately after election have the examinations very hard." Mr. Collins we think is no such a man as that.

Everybody desiring a second Chicago made of Duluth, in our own Sixth Congressional District, should vote for Major Baldwin who lives in that city and zealously advocates the deep water system. He is for 21 feet of water from Duluth to the Atlantic as soon as possible.

The Eagle carries a columu of plate matter (which sayes money to them, not to typos) telling of the good looks and so forth of Judge Searles. Maj. Baldwin is good enough looking and will fill the Congressional chair just as well as Judge Searle can.

HISTORICAL FACTS.

Pioneer Days In The Region North of Lake Minnetonka.

Written for the BUFFALO GAZETTE, by HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

SOLDIERS.

The following names were omitted in the list of soldiers previously given, viz:

Independence—Thomas Shaw, now a resident of Delano.

Medina—Joseph Butz, now a resident of Traverse county.

Greenwood—Wm. Tignor, died at Andersonville.

It should not be forgotten that the close of the war in 1865 was the occasion of many affecting scenes in the Big Woods. Tears of joy were shed on the return of those who had escaped with their lives through that period of carnage, and of sorrow for those—a father, husband or son, who gave their lives to preserve the nation. With all this sacrifice of life following the Southern and Indian wars, peace once more smiled on the new settlements of the Big Woods.

RAILROADS.

Up to 1864, although clearings of considerable size, enlarged buildings and improved habitations were to be found, the country was still in a primitive condition, and unavoidably so on account of many of the settlers and their sons being absent in the service of their country—some never to return—and other retarding circumstances. There were still but few roads opened being mostly those leading to and from Minneapolis. Township roads as yet had their existence mostly on paper. These roads leading to Minneapolis from Watertown, the Lyle White neighborhood, now Delano, Greenwood and Rockford, were in a fairly passable condition for a horse or an ox team handled with care, requiring constant watching as to corduroy bridges, windfalls and in meeting and passing other teams, so that the matter of marketing produce at Minneapolis was a laborious task to the early settler so he hailed with delight any prospect of a railroad being built in the near future.

It may be further remembered that among the many townsites laid out during the period of ephemeral prosperity next preceeding the money panic of 1857, the only ones having a practical existence in 1864 north of Lake Minnetonka, and on the Crow River branches were Watertown and Hutchinson on the south fork and Rockford, Greenwood, Kingston and Forest City on the north fork. Wayzata had a kind of country cross-roads existence then. Van Valkenburgs ashery had ceased business. The post office was discontinued. Dudley's hotel being burnt in 1860 had no existence then, although the latter proprietor occasionally entertained the travel at his residence and with it carried on blacksmithing, and A. W. Day also entertained the traveling public. These two parties, Dudley and Day and their families were about all their inhabitants then, and their limited operations, one as a hotel keeper and the other as a blacksmith, (the latter more as a matter of accommodation than pecuniary benefit to himself) represented all the business enterprises at Wayzata. The ginseng business inaugurated so auspiciously at that place in 1858-9 had died out during the first years of the war, so that in traveling then from Minneapolis, westward, no thing approaching the ordinary village and its enterprises was to be found before arriving at Watertown, Greenwood or Rockford.

Under these conditions the settlers were awaiting with much interest the outcome of railroad land grants, much of the land in Hennepin and Wright counties being withheld from settlement for that purpose to the detriment of localities, whether after all this delay and inconvenience an early construction of a railroad would result, so that in 1864, when the fact became known that the first division of the St. Paul and Pacific R. R. Co. was taking steps to build their main line the people of Western Hennepin and Wright counties became much interested and began to look forward to a better era.

During the spring of 1864 on decid. ing to construct their main line, the first division of the St. P. & P. R. R. made preliminary surveys for a different route than that adopted by its predecessor in 1857. Instead of following the route by Crystal Lake and Lake Sarah, a route by Cedar Lake and Lake Minnetonka was adopted. The first preliminary line passed through Wayzata and intersected the 1857 line a few miles east of Lake Sarah. Following which a permanent location of the line was made to Wayzata, upon which the process of construction soon commenced. During the fall of 1864 another preliminary survey was made from Wayzata westward passing south of Long Lake and Lake Independence intersecting the 1857 survey near the N. W. corner of the town of Franklin which with some minor variations was the route adopted on the permanent location to Twelve Mile Creek in 1865, on which and subsequent locations. The first division St. P. & P. R. R. Co, constructed its main line during the few years following.

PROTECT YOUR EYES.

PROF. C. G. WINFIELD,
Practical and Scientific Optican.

SPECIAL TO THE CITIZENS OF DELANO.

Prof. C. G. Winfield, of St. Paul, late with Dr. D. L. Alcron, late professor of optics in Chicago Opthalomic College, is here for a short visit, and would be pleased to see any and all suffering from defective vision, caused by an error of Refraction. Having the necessary and latest improvements known to science, together with 20 years experience and practical knowledge of same, I feel confident in saying I can positively correct the most difficult cases, even to the worst forms of Mixed Astigmatism. A thorough test and examination of the eye made with the Opthalmoscope. Improve this opportunity to have your eyes correctly fitted with lenses, each and every special case ground to perscription formula. Many references in Howard Lake, Waverly, Litchfield, Montrose, Buffalo, Annandale and other adjoining towns. One of many testimonials:

OSKOSH, WIS., Oct. 30, 1890.

I am now using glasses fitted to me by Prof. Winfield one year ago, and can say they have done my eyes more good and given satisfaction than any I have ever used. I cheerfully recommend him to any and all as a skillful and scientific optican. None need fear imposition at his hand or dealings.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

D. W. LAWLER.

Minnesota's next Governor.

"Will be no man's man, and wear no man's collar."

FOR COVERNOR.

Prohibs are for Mr. Dean,
They say he's good, and clean.

Populists are for Ig,
In politics, a pig.

Republicans for Knute,
Keep up a toot, toot, toot.

The people are for Dan.
And he's the very man.

He won't "wear a collar,"
If he don't make a dollar.

And he'll be "no man's man.
Will this our valiant Dan.

WITH this issue the GAZETTE begins her fifth year, four years ago, at Buffalo, under the guiding hand of Dr. Geo. C. Barton she first saw the light and for four years has toiled earnestly for free and equal rights to all. We believe in an educational campaign and that voters should cast their ballots according to their convictions and not as commanded by others; that tariff is a tax and should not be levied against the poor to make the rich richer.

VOL. 1, No. 1, of The Little Citizen, a Democratic paper published by J. Adam Bede, of Duluth made its appearance on our table this morning. It is a sprightly little sheet and teems with bright "Bedes".

DAN LAWLER, the Democratic nominee for Governor, appears to receive nothing but praise from all parties. No one accuses him of being an office seeker, or of having belonged to different parties or of having been anything else but a Democrat from principle.

GROVER CLEVELAND has given to the public his letter of acceptance and although Republican leaders are trying hard to make the voters believe he is not in accord with the Chicago platform you have only to read it for yourself to become convinced that Grover still knows and dares to say so that tariff is a tax and the consumer pays his share of it.

LATEST advices are that Judge W. Q. Gresham, of Indiana; Wayne McVeagh, of Pennsylvania, and Judge Cooley, of Michigan, three leading Republicans of national reputation have become convinced that the country would be better off under an administration headed by Grover Cleveland, and run on the principles advocated by him and his party.

If there is no truth in the wheat combine stories why [illegible] is it we do not see independent buyers climbing on to every load of wheat that comes into town and bidding against each other until the farmer receives the highest market price, as was the case a few years ago, instead of having, as he does now, to drive from one elevator to another to learn that the price is all the same with a few variations, according to how it comes in, or how badly it hapens to be wanted.

DONNELLY said in his Delano speech that J. J. Hill procured the nomination of both Nelson and Lawler, and he thought Nelson knew that he was the tool of a ring, but thought probably that Lawler did not realize it. We are of the opinion that Lawler is not a ring man and that he is, and will be when elected Governor of Minnesota, on Nov. 8, just what he said in his speech of acceptance he would be, "No man's man, and wear no man's collar. Let us take him at his word and give him a chance anyway.

THE FARMER'S DREAM.

(Of a Plausible Future.)

Chorus of Buyers—I want your wheat, Mr. Farmer, cash at your own price.
Farmer—Why! Eh! How's this?
Buyers—The combine is busted, the "grade" has gone. Haven't you heard of Gov. Lawler's action in that direction?
Farmer goes into ecstasy blessing Lawler and the Democratic party.

SIX of the Dalton gang of robbers some of whom are said to be related to the James boys and to Cole and Jim Younger who have resided at Stillwater since the Northfield bank robbery, attempted to rob two banks at Coffeeville, Kansas. One of the half dozen got away with his life while the others were shot down in the streets by the citizens. Five of the citizens were killed in the battle. Robbing appears to have become a dangerous business.

THE wheat steal business appears to have kicked up considerable of a disturbance, politically speaking. Mr. Pillsbury is out in a letter asking for some one to complain on him so that he may "substantiate" his letter. To people about here it seens as if there had been battering enough to satisfy almost anyone but John L. Sulivan. If the Chicago Herald, the St. Paul Globe and other papers as well as speakers all over the State are misrepresenting him why don't he "whack up" some of his 30 or 40 per cent dividends with "Bill" Erwin or some other lawyer, to make them stop such work.

THE Albert Lea Enterprise informs the public that Dan Lawler's father used to own a bridge across the Mississippi, and that he "squeezed" several dollars for each car load of wheat that passed over, and says "Of course the railroad companies paid this but eventually it came out of the pockets of the wheat raisers of the northwest" The wheat raisers had already received their pay. What way would the railroad have of eventually getting it out of their pockets? Would not they have to look the other way, in this instance, toward the consumer for their remuneration? Hon. Daniel Lawler is not running for Governor on his father's nor his grand father's record anyway.

Tariff Pictures.

Superintendent Preston's report of increased bank deposits in New York has been followed by a report of the New Jersey Commissioners of Banking and Insurance. The ammount due depositors in New Jersey saving banks increased from $29,094,203

in January, 1892, to $33,807,634

in January, 1892, and the number of depositors from 109,752

to 131,739

in the same time. New Jersey's working people are prospering and saving money under McKinley protection. Will they vote and overthrow that protection? Why should they?—New York Press.

New Jersey has long been counted as safely Democratic and is altogether likely to remain in the ranks for Cleveland. As for the increased amount of savings bank deposits in New Jersey, that may be so. but how many of our readers have increased their bank accounts in the same proportion? As a matter of fact are not the Minnesota bank accounts such as farmers pay interest on, rather than receive interest for?

A COUPLE of very good articles appeared in the Eagle, Herald and Times of last week, headed "A Desirable Representative" and "Deep Water Navigation." The articles in question came out as editorials in each paper. It might seem strange to some of Wright county's newspaper readers that these three papers should see so exactly alike as to have their two leading editorials agree word for word, while they are so diametrically opposed on other things. The pith is all taken out of the stories when we learn that they are plate matter, sent to Republican papers throughout the Congressional district, and when we come to think that Major Baldwin is a resident of the "unsalted city by the zenith sea" and that he would have, at least, as great a desire to have deep water navigation as would his competitor. And as far as desirability is concerned in a candidate it would seem to the average voter that if any one is more desirable than another, the odds would be in favor of the candidate whose political views coincide with those of his fellow-Congressmen when he gets there. This means, in this instance, by a large majority MAJOR W. R. BALDWIN, of Duluth.

LATER—This week's Buffalo Journal has, also, discovered "A Desirable Representative" and the great need of "Deep Water Navigation" in the same old plate editorials, and did not give credit to either of the above papers. It has a picture, too, of the "Desirable Representative" which it will most likely replace, after the vote is counted, by that of HON. MAJOR BALDWIN.

Exception Clause vs. Tariff.

EDITOR BUFFALO GAZETTE,—Much is being said now-a-days, in the papers, about high protection and the McKinley bill. Some fellow will fill his belly with the East wind and then bray like an ass in favor of high protection and the McKinley bill. What meaneth this confusion in the camp of Israel? It is like it was in the days of Samuel; the people wanted a king, and so Samuel anointed Saul king over the people. This people do not so much want a king but want high protection and the McKinley bill to rule the people.

The constitution of the United States provides for a tariff for revenue only, and not a tariff to build up manufacturing industries for individuals only. The party in power tells us a high protective tariff increases the volume of money; gives to the day laborer more employment and better wages. It certainly has not proven so during the present administration for there has been more factories shut down and more men thrown out of employment than ever before; therefore we consider high protection and class legislation unfair, unjust and unconstitutional.

Many will sight you to the prices we paid for goods during and immediately after the war, and then tell you how much cheaper we are getting these same goods now, and give all the credit to high protection and the Republican party. If those men knew why they paid such prices during and after the war they would not bring it up as an argument, let us see. At the beginning of the war our government found they were short of money, and could not carry on the war unless by some means they could get money wherewith to pay and equip these soldiers; so Congress in their wise deliberations passed a law authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to issue $60,000,000 Treasury notes not bearing interest, and payable for all debts public and private. This first $60,000,000 were demand notes and wherever gold went there demand notes could go; even into the coffers of the bond holders; they paid his interest and paid duties on imports. But the bankers and moneyed men of the country took exception to this. So some of the bankers of New York, Boston and Philadelphia held a convention and through their cunning device got Congress, on the 25th of February, 1862, to enact a law putting in an exception clause making greenbacks a legal tender for all debts except duties on imports and interest on the public debt, which from that time forward should be paid in coin, this brought a premium on gold and at one time, made almost three to one, and this is why the people had to pay such enormous price for goods, if the money Shylocks had not hoarded up the gold, and then got Congress to enact the exception clause they could have bought as much with a greenback dollar. There might be more said on this subject but time and space will not admit at present.

JOHN H. MCGARY.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Sept. 30, 1892.

Senator Quay is not at all averse to taking Mr. Harrison's place as boss of the Republican campaign, if Mrs. Harrison's illness continues serious enough to prevent Mr. Harrison giving the necessary attention to politics, to keep himself sufficiently well posted to direct the movements of the figure-head, Tom Carter; and he dropped into Washington this week for the purpose of intimating as much to Mr. Harrison who was profuse in thanks, but he did not accept the invitation to abdicate his political throne in Quay's favor. An Indiana man speaking of this attempt of Quay to regain the reins of political power, said. "Mr. Harrison is a better politician than Quay, and the latter should have known that after the long and in the end successful, fight made by the former to overthrow Quay's power over the republican machine he would never under any combination of circumstances agree to his again taking control." So Mr. Quay got nothing but a little additional humiliation for his offer.

Ex-Congressman Pierce, of Indiana, who is chairman of the republican executive committee of that State, made a flying visit to Washington this week to confer with Mr. Harrison and other Indiana politicians in the city. From the tone of newspaper interview given out by him as soon as he arrived, a person who knew nothing about the subject would suppose the Indiana democrats were falling over each other in their efforts to join the republican party, but that was only a "bluff." When he called on Messrs. Harrison, Dudley, Michenor, Nebeker and other Indiana republican politicians, which he did at the earliest possible moment his talk was very different. He told that the State was in danger and implored their assistance to save the party from the humiliation of having its candidate defeated in his own State. He carried from here a mandatory order upon the National committee for a considerable sum of money, which he said was so urgently needed that he would take the order to New York himself, and he did.

Mr. Clevelands letter of acceptance has caused some dissapointment, but it is among the republicans exclusively. Democrats are delighted with the style of the latter as well as with its language and the belief is general that it will make a convincing sort of campaign document to put in the hands of intellegent doubtful voters. His characterization of the republican cry of free trade as an impossibility in this country was a happy thought, and his remarks on tariff reform, for which the democratic party stands, should be read by every voter in the land. A tariff for revenue will be a necessity but some new method of raising the money necessary to run the Government shall have been devised and put into practical operation, but that is no reason why the present abortion which taxes the consumers of every protected article for the benefit of a few manufacturers shold remain upon our statute books, a disgrace to the intelligence of our National Legislators. Free trade will come some day, but the objective point of the present democratic campaign is fair trade, which can only be brought about by a radical reforming of the present tariff laws.

Representative Mitchel, of Wisconsin, chairman of the democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, says he has good reason for being confident that the electoral votes of that State will be cast for Cleveland and Stevenson, but he fears that the decision of the State Supreme court against the recent reapportionment may give the republicans several congressmen that they would not have elected if the new apportionment had been allowed to stand.

West Virginia is one of the States that the republicans always carry, in their minds before election, or, as Representadive Alderson of that State puts it: "They are always going to carry the state, but they never do." Mr. Alderson, who is fresh from the State, says, "The republicans will not carry West Virginia this year. Down there we are all democrats on the tariff question, but the force bill issue is the one we are most interested in. There are a hundred McKinley bills in that scheme and it involves the rights of our people to govern themselves, and it is going to carry the State against the party that fathers it."

That jingo business with Venezuela did not pan out, as the officials of that poor revolution racked country have informed the officers of our war vessels that they will do whatever is required of them by this Government. This is disappointing to the administration, which counted upon sufficient opposition to bring out a few spread eagle orders, calculated to work up the enthusiasm among first-voters.

CORRESPONDENCE

WAVERLY WISDOM.

Waverly, Minn Oct 5. 1892 Mrs. Henry Dodring and son, of Woodland, visite with relatives in St Paul last week.

This is the soberest and most sensible Presidential campaign that the country has witnessed in a great many years. The sobriety and freedom from noisy excitement with which the contest is conducted is an unmistakable evidence of political evolution and progress. The Demoorats, whose appeal in behalf of Cleveland and tariff Reform is addressed to the calm judgment of an intelligent people, have good reason to rejoice over the spirit that is manifested in the campaign. The people are thinking for themselves.

Mr. and Mrs. John O'Leary, of Buffalo, spent Sunday in our village. The Colonel is just as bright and jolly as ever and is a general favorite in Waverly.

Mr. Thomas Burns and Miss Mary Burns of Hollywood, visited with acquaintances in town Tuesday.

The four months old child of Dan O'Connell died, Monday and was buried Tuesday in St. Mary's cemetery; also a child of John Holtby, about three months old, died on the same day and was buried Tuesday in Howard.

Prof. John F. Collins was in our village Sunday, Mr. Collins has a great many friends here who are sanguine in their support for him for Superintendent of schools.

The Democratic rally at Howard Lake last Friday evening was a grand afiair and the large audienee that turned out to hear the speakers were enthusiastic in their applause. Owing to the illness of Mr. Campbell Mr. Benton, of Minneapolis, who was the speaker of the evening, did yeoman service in the cause of Democracy Mr. Benton spoke for about an hour and was logical and convincing throughout his whole discourse. He was roundly applauded and made some telling points. Mr. Wm. Quinn also spoke, and his effort is pronounced by those present as and able and honest exposition of the tariff. Mr. Quinn is working hard for the success of the ticket, and we confidently hope that his efforts will be successful.

Mr. Graves, of Howard, was in town Monday.

Messrs Wm. Quinn, John Kelly, James F. McDonnell, T. F. Kelly and Wallace King attended the Democratic rally at Howard Lake Friday night.

Messrs Sampson and Swonson, of Cokato, were trying to gv up the broken down fences in Waverly Monday. This is a poor missionary field, from a political standpoint, as Waverly intends doing herself proud on the 8th day of Nov. The people here know what they are going to do, and you bet they are going to do it.

Messrs Riggs of Monticello, and Harwick, of Sherburn Co. were in town Sunday.

Hon. P. E. Barrett, of Huthinson, well and favorably known here and a brother of M. Barrett, of the Merchant's Hotel, was nominated by acclamation, at the county convention of McLeod Co., for the Legislature.

LONG LAKE.

Rev. H. Cullen left here last week for his new charge at Freeport, Illinois, taking with him his blooded horse stock, of which he had several head, shipping them by rail.

This community laments the loss of Mrs. Belle Stuart, whose death occurred on the 27th ult. Being a modest and kindly disposed lady, she held the respect of the community. She was the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eleazer Dickey.

Edward Egan of Oseo, Democratic candidate for County Commissioner was around last week interviewing the voters of this locality.

Mr. Williams and wife, of Villard, were visiting their relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Parrish, of this place.

Sorghum making has commenced in this locality.

THE mines of New Zealand have alone produced $250,000,000 worth of gold.

THE last census shows that while 33,163 lawyers received $35,000,000 every year in fees, 37,000 ministers got only $6,000,000.

HERE is a new definition of the word straw. An observing young woman says it is a hollow thing with a tenicent young man at one end of it and a fifteen-cent drink at the other.

A NEW YORKER has made a clock from 34,000 pieces of wood, comprising over 300 varieties. For sixteen years he has had sailors bringing him rare woods from every quarter of the globe.

THE following is a copy of a bill posted on the wall of a country village: "A lecture on total abstinence will be delivered in the open air, and a collection will be taken at the door to defray expenses."

QUEEN VICTORIA'S Hindoostanee does not come to her without hard digging. She has a Hindoo secretary, a fact unknown to her American admirers. His name is Munshi Hafir Abdul Karim, and if his pupil were not a queen he would be called a tutor.

THE free lunch eaters of New York city consume daily two tons of potato salad, a ton and a half of beans, 250 gallons of beef stew and a hundred weight of caviara, not to mention the large quantities of cheese, Frankfurter sausage, pickles, olives, corned beef, macaroni, etc.

GOV. PATTISON, of Pennsylvania, while rambling in the suburbs of Philadelphia, ventured to sit on a rustic bench beneath a tree on private grounds, whereupon a child informed him that he was trespassing upon her father's property, and politely escorted him off the domain.

THE use of the camera in hospitals for photographing different phases of disease has been productive of valuable results abroad. Pictures are taken of patients at various stages of disease, and a comparison of those with photographs of others similarly afflicted discloses phenomena of great interest and value to medical science.

C. E. SPAGNOLETTI, said to be the father of railway telegraphy and the inventor of numerous electrical appliances for working the block system on many home and foreign railways, recently resigned the appointment which he had held for over thirty-five years, as chief electrician and telegraph engineer of the Great Western Railway Company of England.

MLLE. VIRGINIE MENVIUS, who died recently at Nancy, aged 95, was the oldest schoolmistress in France. She was not allowed to learn to read till she was 18 years of age. Her own schools, a few years later, were declared by the government to be "normal and model schools." Mlle. Menvius gave 40,000 francs for the erection of a hospital at Nancy.

A FRIEND of the late Gideon Wells, of Maine, who was known as the cattle king of that state, estimates that during his long life he paid the farmers for horses, cattle, sheep, hay and wool upwards of $50,000,000; and yet, so exact was he in his dealings that, although he was uneducated and trusted largely to his memory, he never figured in a lawsuit either as plaintiff or defendant.

YOUNG and diffident orators will take fresh heart when they learn, if they do not know it already, that so accomplished and self-possessed a speaker as George William Curtis suffered greatly from stage fright on the occasion of his first lecture, and began by saying: "Ladies and gentlemen, the pitomless bott," with a solemnity which was changed to confusion when he perceived his error. Of course, he had meant to make an allusion to the bottomless pit.

BUSINESS "gets down fine" in certain localities in Chicago. Not a great distance from the Polk street depot an Italian stands behind a glass case on the sidewalk and dispenses thin slices of watermelon at one cent apiece. The class of customers is varied and curious. There are the children of the neighborhood, many of them colored, an occasional trampish-looking person and an occasional woman who seems to be buying the thin slice of watery sweetness for some one else. It is all odd.

THE Paragraph club of Newark, N. J., is unique in the collection of women's clubs. It has neither president, vice president, secretary, nor treasurer; at its meeting no chairman presides and no gavel falls. The members gather, and presently some one says: "It is time to begin," and that is the beginning. It is decided at one meeting what will be the subject discussed at the next, and every member comes prepared to contribute at least a paragraph to the general fund of talk, which obligation explains the name. The club has a numerous membership, and includes some very bright women.

ONE of the most remarkable phenomena exhibited in the United Kingdom is the growth of wealth in Scotland during the very period that Ireland has been declining. Its population is increasing, though great numbers are constantly moving to the United States and Canada. Wealth is increasing faster than population and the manner of living is improving. The people are better housed and clad than they were ten years ago. It is reported in every county that houses are being erected or enlarged. But in Scotland, as in this country, there is a tendency to move from the rural districts to large towns.

NO SUICIDE has been committed in Montenegro for fifty years, the people regarding it as a cowardly act and evidence that the victim had led an unworthy life or had been implicated in some crime. Recently a merchant who had been harassed by his creditors attempted to end his career with a revolver, but the bullet did not kill him. Prince Nikito called to see him and rebuked him for his unmanly act. On his recovery the prince paid his debts, but banished the offender. He then issued a decree that the dead body of any suicide should be exposed to public gaze on the gallows for twenty-four hours.

A GREAT FESTIVAL.

Principal Features of the Programme for the Coming Columbus Celebration at New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—This city, spurred on by the lavish preparations of Chicago to celebrate the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America, is going to make a creditable showing next month and will attempt to give the people who come to see it a really fair idea of the magnitude of the Chicago end of the celebration.

The event will take the form of a four days' festival. The general scope will take in every interest of civilization. For instance, the church will have a field day, that of October 8, the first of the celebration in which to commemorate by religious services the discovery of America. On the following day, which is Sunday, the church will continue the celebration, and for the first time, probably, in America secular entertainments will be countenanced by the state. It is not definitely decided just what form these entertainments will take. These two days of ceremony will be preliminary to the actual demonstration, which will begin on Monday, the 10th, and will be continued over Thursday, the 13th. For the religious services, special ceremonies have been arranged by almost every church in New York. All the notable preachers in the east will take part and elaborate programmes of music will be features.

The plans for the four days following the religious end of the celebration include a grand allegorical pageant representing scenes in the life of Columbus and the discovery of America; a naval display in the harbor, which will be, perhaps, the most notable event of the celebration; a military and civic display embracing industrial and educational interests, and a grand banquet on Thursday night. The cost of the celebration will be about $150,000, of which the state of New York has appropriated $50,000.

The big event for Monday is the school and college parade, and more than 30,000 public school pupils and college students will march in the line. The school parade will be notable because every religious and secular educational institution in New York will be represented. Every pupil in the line will carry the stars and stripes.

On Tuesday will occur the biggest event of the celebration—the naval parade. The government will send about forty vessels to participate in it, there are to be 160 vessels of the merchant marine, and craft of every description, from a naphtha launch to an ocean greyhound, will be on view. The naval reserves and a detachment of government sailors and marines of every grade will be assigned to duty in the great fleet. The merchant marine and vessels of other descriptions than government war boats will form parallel lines from the entrance to the harbor to the Battery, 5 miles in length, through which the fighting crafts of the nation will pass in review.

The municipal event of the afternoon of Tuesday will be a great athletic carnival at the Manhattan fields, which will be participated in by famous American athletes. In the Seventh Regiment armory, in the evening, 6,000 members of German-American singing societies will hold a musical festival at which several original compositions will be rendered.

On Wednesday the great military parade will take place, and it is expected that 100,000 uniformed men, including government and New York state troops, will participate. President Harrison will review the line, and the leading military commanders of the army, marine and state troops, the G. A. R. and unattached military bodies will be at the head of their various commands. It is expected that 7,000 government troops will be sent here to participate.

A civic pageant will follow the dedication of the Columbus statue monument which was presented by Italy to the United States. These ceremonies will occur Wednesday afternoon. The parade at night will be in the nature of those given during the Mardi Gras celebration at New Orleans and the Veiled Prophet festival at St. Louis. Floats representing scenes in American history, the progress of commerce and development of industrial interests will be features, and electricity will serve to illuminate the streets After the parade there will be pyrotechnic displays in various parts of the city, the principal one of which will be on the Brooklyn bridge.

On Thursday there will be several entertainments of a semi-official character, and in the evening the grand banquet will occur at the Lenox lyceum, which will be attended by 1,200 persons.

Preparations for decorating the city are now going on. The art committee is receiving suggestions for street displays, and the work of tacking up bunting and stringing electric lamps will begin on Monday. Reviewing stands have already been erected in Broadway and in the parks where ceremonies will be held. The most prominent features of the street decorations will be the Columbus arch at the entrance to Central park and an arch of triumph in Fifth avenue, opposite St. Patrick's cathedral.

Columbian Series of Stamps.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Postmaster General Wanamaker has decided to issue what will be known as the Columbian series of postage stamps under a contract signed Thursday. The new stamps will be of the same height as the present series, but twice as wide, the increased size being thought necessary in order to properly display the illustrations. These are intended to commemorate the discovery of America by Columbus. It is expected that the entire series will be put on sale January 1, 1893, and during the succeeding year will entirely supersede the present series.

Inquest Over Canaday.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—An inquest has been held over the body of the late William P. Canaday. The jury confined itself to establishing the cause of death and did not go into the relations between Canaday, his partner Houghton and other persons. The burden of the testimony with reference to Mr. Canaday's allegations that burglars had tied him, while necessarily not positive, was all against the truth of the statement. The verdict was that William P. Canaday came to his death from a pistol wound in the brain, inflicted by his own hand.

MORE RECORDS SMASHED.

At Terre Haute Mascot Paces a Mile in 2:04, Flying Jib, in 2:05 3-4, but Both Lose the Race to Guy, Who Also Makes Fast Time.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Sept. 30.—Three times Thursday afternoon the pacing race record of 2:07 was beaten, and the best time now for a mile in a contest is 2:04. Mascot, a bay gelding with an unbeaten record up till now, earned the honor of reaching the some mark as Nancy Hanks. But he did not win the race. Neither did Flying Jib, though he forced Mascot out with first heat and then defeated him for the next one in 2:05¾. The waiting or laying tactics enabled Guy, the famous gray stallion from Mississippi, to come in and get the next three heats in very creditable time, but nothing like what the geldings showed. Guy paced the third heat in 2:06¾, and could have gone faster if Flying Jib had not given it up at the distance. Two miles slower than 2:08 then disposed of the two flyers, though the victory of Guy could not have taken place had he been compelled to go on and fight as the other two did.

Mascot was in the outside place and outfooted Flying Jib at the pole for the first heat, Guy dropping back at once. The geldings kept up the fight, Mascot going to the quarter in 32½ seconds and the half in 1:03½. Then the clip increased and the next quarter was in 29½ seconds, just a fraction below what Nancy Hanks did Wednesday over the same ground. Coming home George Starr urged Flying Jib under rein and whip, but he could only get to Mascot's saddle as the latter finished in 2:04. There was a larger audience than that which saw the queen of trotters do her mile Wednesday, but the latest marvel in the way of speed did not cause much enthsiasm. Something faster was looked for, but the pace told so much that neither gelding could repeat the time of the first mile, though they had another lively battle for the second heat, Flying Jib carrying Mascot to the half in 1:03¾ and then outfinishing him when he tired in 2:05¾.

Guy was evidently out for the third heat, and taking the pole at the first turn was not headed. Mascot clung to him most of the way, Guy doing the third quarter in 30 seconds, but there the champion fell back and left Flying Jib to do the fighting. The latter was also weary, while Guy danced by and passed the wire in 2:06¾. The other two heats were won by Guy in 2:08½ and 2:08¼.

Mascot is a bay gelding 8 years old by Deceiver, a son of old Hambletonian, dam Miss Delmore, a mare of no traced pedigree. He is therefore short bred and trotting bred. W. P. Taylor, of Buffalo, owns him.

UNFORTUNATE MINERS.

Thirteen of Them Buried Under a Mass of Fallen Rock at Ishpeming, Mich.—Rescuers at Work.

ISHPEMING, Mich., Sept. 30.—At 5 o'clock Thursday morning thirteen men were buried under an enormous fall of rock in No. 8 shaft of the Norrie mine, which employs 2,000 workmen. Nine of the men were miners, three trammers and one was "skip tender."

The names of those known to be in the mine are: John Johnson, Peter Johnson, Abraham Thompson, Frank Danielson, Samuel Danielson, John Peterson and Gustaf Olson. The names of the others have not yet been positively ascertained.

An investigation of the ground showed that an immense amount of rock had fallen into the slope where the unfortunates were working. The chances are that all, or nearly all, were instantly killed, but men have been rescued alive after forty-eight hours under masses of rock, thousands of tons in weight, which have so wedged as to protect them from smaller masses of rock.

The alarm was at once given, and before the cloud of dust arising from the shaft had cleared away volunteers were descending, careless of their own lives, but anxious to save those of their imprisoned comrades. It was decided that it would be necessary to drive a new drift to the fifth level, where the imprisoned men are. The best miners volunteered by hundreds, mindless of the terrible danger menacing them from a further fall of the ground. Only four men could work at one time in the narrow drifts. Four brawny miners with clinched teeth and determined brows stepped forward. Their eight-pound hammers plied like pistons of an engine upon the steel drill. Other men shoveled the iron ore as though it were cornmeal. At the end of five minutes, their shirts dripping with perspiration, these men dropped their tools, which were grasped by other men equally strong and brave. So it has gone all day without the loss of a second's time. The hammer heads fall ceaselessly upon the drill; shovels and picks are plied as only they can be by men who know that upon their efforts may depend the life or death of thirteen fellow-workmen.

The Norrie mine is operated by the Metropolitan Iron & Land Company, with head offices at Milwaukee. The mine was first wrought in 1885, when in entered the shipping list with 15,000 tons. In 1890 it reached the enormous output of 900,000 tons, and this year it will exceed the million mark. The mine has been operated on the safest possible lines and it is looked upon by miners as the safest large mine to work in the Lake Superior district.

Fatal Explosion in a Mine.

WALSENBURG, Col., Sept. 30.—Wednesday afternoon while D. E. Muir and William M. Holt were making an examination of the Watson mine an explosion took place that killed the two almost instantly. They were burned very badly and their clothing was torn into shreds. Mr. Muir was the superintendent. Both men have families.

The Exposition Ended.

The Minneapolis exposition for 1892 has closed. The attendance throughout the entire season was large, and it is the opinion of Secretary Byron and Manager Brackett that the exposition this year has come out ahead financially. The figures show a larger average attendance daily than that of any preceding exposition except in 1889. In fact, the success of the big show has been such as to encourage the directors not to omit it next year.

Charged with Embezzlement.

Stephen Rosenbaum, a St. Paul merchant, was arrested on a charge of embezzlement. Rosenbaum was the treasurer of local branch No. 1,375 of the order of the Iron Hall and it was claimed that he had appropriated several hundred dollars of the funds of the society. The complaint was made by Philip Steinburg, and alleges that the embezzlement was committed September 5. Rosenbaum was remanded for preliminary examination.

New Enemy of the Farmers.

Prof. Luggar, entomologist of the state university, has been in Crookston investigating the causes that have led to the destruction of so much wheat while in the ripening process in Polk and Marshall counties. He finds the wheat has been ruined by what is known to entomologists as the frit fly. Until the professor's visit to that locality it was thought that the injury to the wheat was due to the hailstorms of the past summer.

Will Find Rich Ore.

Dr. M. S. Cann has just returned to Duluth from a prospecting tour of the western portion of the Mesaba range. He reports that a body of rich iron ore is sure to be found on the Homestead Iron Mining Company. Already fine ore has been found and as the work progresses the quality of the ore improves. It promises to be a rich hematite similar to that of the other partially developed properties on the western Mesaba.

A Plague of Frogs.

A plague of frogs appeared at Little Falls, the reptiles abounding in such numbers as even to interfere for some hours with railroad travel, the rails being made slippery by those crushed beneath the engines. No reason was given for the remarkable visitation. The reptiles were all hopping in a northwesterly direction; hardly a one could be seen going any other way.

"August Flower"

"I am happy to state to you and to suffering humanity, that my wife has used your wonderful remedy, August Flower, for sick headache and palpitation of the heart, with satisfactory results. For several years she has been a great sufferer, has been under the treatment of eminent physicians in this city and Boston, and found little relief. She was induced to try August Flower, which gave immediate relief. We cannot say to much for it." L. C. Frost, Springfield, Mass.

THE LITTLE FOXES.

It is the little foxes that tear down the vines, says Solomon. It is the little things that count in life. It is the little colds that count. It is sending the children to bed with wet feet that brings on the croup. It is catching a little cold and neglecting it that brings disease and sickness. It is catching sore throat and then going about unprotected that ends in diphtheria and death. Watch these little sources. It does not take much time but it is the little safeguards that count in the battle of life. When you get sore throat or cold take Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure. It is the best thing in the world for every form of disease that arises from a cold. Statistics show that nine-tenths of the entire human race perish from this cause. It follows therefore that if you will avoid taking cold your chances for long life are doubled. This great remedy does not only stop your cough but it restores your circulation to its normal condition and thus enables the system to throw off the malady. Get this great remedy of any dealer.

DELANO, Wright Co., - MINN.

"HANG it all, Marier, I'm sick an' tired of this everlasting palaverin' about women's work never bein' done, an' sich nonsense! I'm blamed if I see why a right smart woman can't git her work done, an' have an easy time of it half of her time. Now, if I was a woman, I'd have some spunk about me, and I'd do like—"

"Now, John Phlatkins, you needn't go about tellin' me how your mother used to do, an' all that, 'cause I've heard the old lady say herself them very same words, as is: 'A woman's work is never done tell she's in her grave.'"

"Well, anyhow, Marier, I'm mighty sure that if I was a woman I could do your work an' have a good, easy time every day of my life."

"I s'pose, then, Josh, you wouldn't mind tryin' it awhile, bein' a man?" asked the wife, pausing in washing the breakfast dishes, and glancing cynically to where her spouse sat smoking a corncob pipe, and looking through a last month's paper.

"Eh?" asked Josh, looking up.

She repeated her question.

"I've thought of that same thing myself," he replied, "only I didn't know how you could git along with my work."

"Oh! you needn't worry yourself about that, Josh. I kin do your work if you'll do mine."

Mrs. Phlatkins felt safe in promising this, for when Joshua was seized with his semi-annual "rheumatiz," she had had the whole thing to attend to many a time. Josh seemed to forget this, in his sudden solicitude for the welfare of his business.

"You'll have to hitch up, and be keerful with that off colt, 'cause he's skeery of the railroad crossin'. Be sure an' water them at Smith's well; an' don't let 'em drink too much. Take that butter to Squire Rubin's, an' the punkins to Jones', an' the corn to Shear's warehouse; an' don't forgit to order a bar'l of salt, Marier, an' some bolts for that machine."

"Oh, I'll remember everything," said Mrs. Phlatkins. "And now I'll tell you your work for the day. You jest want to finish these dishes first; then wash out that basket of clothes an' hang 'em out to dry; scrub the floor an' churn that butter; it orto come quick to-day, 'cause the cream's just right. By that time the bread'll be ready to bake; an' you might put on some beans and squash an' taters to cook at the same time, for you and Dan's dinner. After you get the dinner things done you can can them two buckets of plums; then, while you're resting, like, you might mend that basketful of socks, and put a patch on Dan's everyday pants. Then you kin git supper, an' I'll try to be back in time to eat it, an' I'll tell you what to do next."

After giving these explicit directions, Mrs. Phlatkins proceeded to do her husband's errands in the town; while Joshua began most systematically the tasks that were to be as play to his superior tact.

The washing was done in no time, and the clothes all hung on the line in good array. To be sure, he did not rinse nor wring them; but these operations were only consumers of time, anyway; and they looked beautiful as they waved their bright blue (albeit striped) folds in the sunlight.

It seemed all foolishness to let the bread stand around so long when it might just as well be in baking.

"I'll just put it in now, with the other things, an' build up a good hot fire, an' by the time I git this butter churned the whole bakin' will be done, an' everything," thought Josh; so he built a roaring fire, and went merrily to his churning. After bobbing the dasher for fifteen minutes, Joshua peeped into the churn to see how things were progressing in there.

At that exact moment there arose a dreadful screeching in the back yard.

"That blamed hawk after them chickens again!" muttered Joshua, dropping the dasher and making a dive for his old smooth bore, which contained a good charge of fine shot, for use on such occasions.

Pushing toward the barn yard he espied a large hawk just rising with one of his most promising young pullets, while all the other P. Y. P.'s were rending the air with their shrieks and "ker-daweuts."

Bang! Down dropped the pullet with a thud and a "kuck!" which was her last word to her sisters. Down went Joshua with an "Oh!" and I-didn't-know-it-was-loaded sort of expression on his phiz. Up went the hawk to circle in the air, hungry as ever, but none the worse for his great scare.

In the barn there was an old gray jackass who had been noted as a kicker in his younger days, and had never outgrown the propensity entirely. Now Mrs. Joshua Phlatkins had neglected to give Jack his measure of corn and oats that morning. Jack had been on his good behavior for several days, and was nearly ripe for a good old-fashioned kick, but had refrained from indulgence for lack of sufficient cause. When the hours went slowly by and no corn appeared Jack's ears moved forward viciously; but still he refrained from rash actions, as a good old mule should. When, however, that "bang!" came, Jack's youthful vigor began to return.

"Slash! Crash!"—with every successive kick a board flew from the barn into space; slabs, boards, studding, everything went down before his righteous fury. Not until everything within his reach was kicked out of reach, did Jack stop to rest and condescend to eat the corn which his master forwarded.

A litter of young pigs that had been shut in the barn went squeaking through the newly-made door, and Joshua spent much valuable time getting them penned up out of reach of an old hog, who was jealous of them and deemed it his duty to devour them.

Thus it was that, when Joshua returned to the house, he found the fire waning; after renewing it, he recommenced his churning.

"Wonderful! I never heerd Marier say that butter would churn itself!" muttered Mr. Phlatkins, peering into the churn, where the cream was in a state of strange weird agitation. Reaching in with his hand to see what might be the cause of the odd phenomenon, his flesh came in contact with a splinter. After fishing a few moments, he drew forth the strangest looking specimen of butter ever churned. This roll of butter said, in a queer, gurgling voice: "Me-youw!" It was Mr. T. Cat—in disguise so complete that his own mother could never have recognized him. Poor old T. Cat! He loved cream; but this time he had even more than he would. Josh placed him outside the kitchen window, when he began a process of cleaning which to this day he has never ended.

Josh was wiping up the cream as well as he could when Dan came in.

"Gosh! Pop, what kind of a animal is that out in the yard?"

"Dan'l," said Mr. Phlatkins, severely, "Dan'l, keep your mouth shet; an' if you say a word about this, I'll tan you within an inch of your life!"

Upon trying the bread, which was beautifully brown outside, but heartbrokenly sad within, Mr. Phlatkin said:

"Dan'l, dinner's goin' to be late today, an' you had better go over to Aunt Sally's for somethin' to eat, or you'll be tardy to school."

"All right, pop," said Daniel, marching off obediently.

Owing to a dearth of eatables, Mr. Phlatkins dined on cob pipe and meditations.

For supper he toasted a little dry bread, and made a cup of tea by the time his wife drove up to the barn and had attended to the horses.

After supper Mrs. Phlatkins said:

"Well, Josh, after you git the dishes done you kin go an' milk the cows. I've got a few papers and things I want to look over this evening."

When Joshua had returned from doing this, she remarked:

"Josh, I don't see the bread nowheres. Wasn't it good for nothing?"

"Never see nicer bread in your born days," he affirmed, boldly.

"That's queer!" muttered Mrs. Josh. "No one could ever bake decent bread without turnin' that damper to heat the oven." Then she added, in a louder tone: "And the butter, Josh, where is that?"

"That was awful fine, too," replied he, from behind his newspaper.

Just then the cat rose from where he had been lying by the kitchen stove and Mrs. Phlatkins' quick eye caught sight of the grease spot with which he had decorated the floor.

"Gracious! Josh, what on earth is the matter with Tom? Just look a-here!"

"Pop, he—" began Dan, who sat in the corner making little satans on his slate.

"Dan'l," interrupted Mr. Phlatkins, harshly, "Dan'l, have you carried in enough wood?"

"Guess so, pop."

"Well, go and carry in some more; it's going to be colder to-morrow."

"Joshua," said Mrs. Phlatkins, when Dan had dragged himself out to the wood-shed, "what have you done with the bread an' the butter?"

"Fact is," said the truthful housekeeper, "some poor people come along in a covered wagon—gypsies, I guess—an' I gave all the things, an' the squash an' taters I had cooked, to them for their dinner. Awful big family they had."

"Well, Joshua, if they ate the bread that you cooked in that cold oven, they must be dead by this time, sure. But what did you give them all that butter for?"

"Oh, they seemed so fond of good butter I could not disappint 'em."

Just then Tom followed Dan in with his load of wood. Poor, sticky Tom! He walked as if his once sleek fur had been converted into a water-proof, skin-tight coat; and he had the most dejected air ever seen in the countenance of a respectable farm-cat.

"Why, whatever can be the matter with Tom?" asked Mrs. Phlatkins. "He looks like he had fell into the soap grease."

"I guess he fell in th—"

"Dan'l!" roared Mr. Phlatkins. "Dan'l, go to bed!"

The next forenoon, as Mrs. Phlatkins was digging some potatoes for dinner out in the little garden patch, she noticed Growler, the dog, pawing industriously near the woodshed.

"What is it, Growler?" asked his mistress.

Growler growled an answer and kept on digging.

"Must have a rabbit or a rat in a hole," thought the lady. "Guess I'll help him git it out."

Suiting the action to the words, she began to hoe up the rather loose dirt. Presently she uncovered what looked like an immense cream puff. Growler licked the puff, bit it, then went and lay down in the shade of an ash barrel, with a disgusted look on his face.

"I thought so!" said Mrs. Phlatkins, softly. "Good bread! Uh! Huh! very nice bread! Nice raw squash an' 'taters, too," raking out a few vegetables as she soliloquized: "Delicious butter! Ya-es—poor family in covered wagon."

At the dinner-table Josh knew that trouble was brewing because his wife was so quiet. After Dan had started for school, she said:

"Well, Josh, I found the place where your poor family ate their dinner yesterday. Ain't you ashamed to lie like that, a-settin' sich a example to Dan'l."

Being cornered, Josh made a clean breast of it from beginning to end. Nowadays, when Mrs. Phlatkins feels particularly vicious she remarks:

"Joshua, I have to go to town to-day an' I'm goin' to leave you to do my work."

Joshua grits his teeth and smiles.—Farmer's Tribune.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

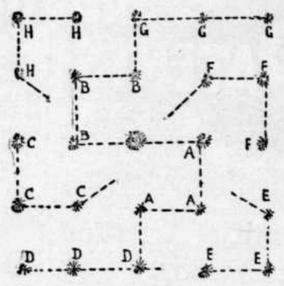
HARVESTING CORN.

Value of a Regular System in Cutting Each Shock.

While the inventors of harvesting machines are making successful progress in constructing machinery drawn by horses for cutting the corn crop, the great majority of the corn fields in the country at large are still harvested by means of hand labor, when not allowed to go to waste. It is important, therefore, while millions of dollars are expended in labor by the cultivators of this crop, that every facility should be afforded, and the labor reduced as far as practicable. The suggestions we offer on this subject are not only intended to abridge labor, but to prevent much of the existing waste by the needless exposure of the corn fodder.

The practice of planting corn in "hills" is still very largely pursued throughout the country, and when the crop is ripe enough and the grain has well hardened, it is cut by hand and secured in shocks. These remain several weeks till the season arrives for husking and stacking, during which time the shocks are exposed to weather and storms, and a portion of them are commonly beaten down and prostrated, soaked with rain and rotted so as to be of little value for fodder.

A reason for this prostration and waste is the one-sided way in which the shocks are built. Instead of placing the shocks in an equal circle around the center, they are often placed nearly all on one side, pressing them more or less out of the center, giving the shocks a one-sided tendency, and entirely prostrating a portion of them. This waste could be prevented by taking the necessary care to build them with equal additions on every side, and by thus giving them a firmly erect position. A regular system in cutting each shock may be adopted, saving time and labor, which the accompanying figure may fully explain. The field is cut by taking five rows of hills at a time, and placing the shocks in the center one. Twenty-five hills will make one shock, the center being first taken; all the others are cut and placed around it. If the corn is of a large variety, three hills will be as much as the operator will hold in the grasp of his left arm while he cuts them with his right hand and places them against the forming shock. In the figure, the shock is larger and in the center; and the first three hills are those indicated by the letters AAA, carried to the shock on the dotted line. The next three are BBB, cut and placed beside the others. Each successive three are marked by the letters CCC, DDD, EEE, FFF, GGG and HHH; and being taken and cut in this regular order they will be placed in separate positions equally all around the shock, and the laborer can hardly avoid making it equally upright. The regular system will abridge his steps, and make the work much easier than cutting at random. As every shock requires the same order, the operator soon becomes accustomed to it and works rapidly. The same general course will apply to larger shocks, or to those made of smaller corn. With slight modification, it will apply to corn in drills. The arrows show the direction for the operator to work. In making a single shock, if the hills are three and a half feet apart, it will require about ten rods walking, and for a field of a hundred shocks, more than three miles; while with an irregular mode, without system, several miles would be required. Saving the fodder would be still more important, making all the difference between such as is fresh, green and uninjured, and that which is destroyed by prostration and rotting with rains.—Country Gentleman.



WATERING WORK-HORSES.

Give Them Water Frequently, But in Small Quantities.

At this season the watering of the horses is a feature of their care which causes much anxiety. It is a common practice when bringing horses in from the field to let them stand in the stable until they cool off before they are given a drop to slack their burning thirst. It is right to say that a heavy drink of cold water, say a pailful fresh from the well, will in most cases produce founder. But that does not one whit justify the practice of the person who never gives his horses any water until they are cool. What does the term cool mean? Nothing. A horse in health is practically always at the same temperature. If his blood increases or lowers two degrees in temperature, it at once indicates that the horse is unhealthy. A horse without any disease is practically as warm when he stands without a drop of sweat upon him as when he perspires. The office of the blood is to keep his temperature even, for it is the evaporation of the water from his body that cools him and lessens the temperature. And if any time a horse needs a drink it is just when he is losing most sweat. It is the evaporation of water from his body that cools him, just as it is the evaporation of the sprinkler water from the floor that cools the room. But, it may be asked, will it not cause founder? says the Live Stock Journal. Yes, if unlimited quantities of cold water are given. The cold water, meeting the warm lining of the digestive apparatus, produces inflammation there, and as that lining is the same as that which lines the inner surface of the hoof, the latter, too, becomes affected. The inflammation is there confined in a horny box, and it produces excruciating pain. It is a safe practice to give your horse at any time four or five swallows of cold water. It is not in the least dangerous, while the common sense of anyone will prompt him to concede that it is at least humane. There is not a more pitiful scene to be observe on the farm than to see the farm team languishing for water, standing mutely over their uneaten hay, humbly waiting until such time as their master shall consider it proper to give what nature rarely denies.

IMPURE WATER SUPPLY.

Disease and Death Caused Among Farm Animals of Every Kind.

It is as important that our stock should be supplied with pure water as it is for mankind. Many farmers have been careless in this matter. It is a mistake even to allow cattle to drink merely muddy and black swampy water. The cleaner and better the water the better for the stock. This is especially important for dairy cows. But that positive disease and death resulting should come from the drinking of bad water few farmers have been prepared to believe. It is, however, a well-established fact. As giving light on this subject may be mentioned some experiments and examinations by Dr. Stalker, veterinarian of the Iowa experiment station. During the latter part of the summer of 1890 he was called to investigate a severe outbreak of disease. Horses, cattle and pigs were all affected alike—swelling and partial paralysis of the upper air passages, painful and difficult breathing. Death ensued about two days after the attack. The doctor could not classify the disease and set about to find the cause. He found everything all right but the water supply, which came from a winding creek, which in the dry weather had ceased to run. He found that it had been the custom on the farm to throw the carcasses of animals down the steep bluffs into the bed of the stream; that during the summer chicken cholera had prevailed on the farm and a large number had died and been thrown over the bank; that the hog cholera had caused the death of a considerable number of swine, the carcasses having been treated in similar manner. The several yards occupied by horses, cattle, pigs and barnyard fowls were on the hillside with abrupt drainage into the creek.

In addition, large heaps of fermenting manure were deposited about the foot of the hill near the edge of the stream, where the animals went to drink. A few of the animals on the farm had not access to the stream, but had been watered from a well. None of these showed signs of sickness, though they had been in contact with those that had their water from the pools in the bed of the stream, and ever with some of the sick.

A number of farmers had built their homes along the banks of this stream, and had been accustomed to make use of it in much the same way as the farmer above referred to. On no less than four farms situated on the banks of this stream animals had died showing symptoms identical with those on the farm first investigated. On another occasion where a high rate of mortality had prevailed among the cattle running on the open prairie, he was able to trace the cause to contamination of surface water. An animal dead from anthrax had been drawn into a basin on the open prairie. Later the rains filled the basin with water, and about one thousand cattle on the range had access to the pond for water supply. The result was that about ten per cent of all the animals having access to the impure water died from anthrax.—Farm, Field and Stockman.

GROWTH OF WEEDS.

It Pays to Destroy Them Just as They Are Coming to the Surface.

Cultivators who have tried both ways know the several advantages of destroying weeds just as they are coming to the surface. The ground is then rendered mellow and clean with a tenth part of the labor required to destroy large weeds; the crop has not been retarded in growth nearly to its entire failure. The estimate is made that weeds after growing a fortnight and becoming a foot high, contain by cubic measure one thousand times as much substance in growth, or more, than when first making their appearance at the surface, and with this great difference it is easily understood why they retard or destroy growth. Take as an illustration the common turnip crop. If the weeds are not allowed entrance, the turnips will appear like those in Fig. 1. If the weeds are rampant, the turnips will make no headway, and will resemble those in Fig. 2. Late in the summer is the season when so many weeds steal a large growth.—American Cultivator.

DAIRY SUGGESTIONS.

IF you have a sportive cur that likes to chase the cow, sell the cow or kill the dog.

BUTTER that is made as our grandmothers made butter is not the butter that brings the highest price. Improved methods produce the butter that sells at top prices.

THE farmer who sticks to old methods, regardless of improved ways of doing things, is a big loser. The dairy man who follows that course is a still bigger loser.

THE advice that is frequently given that milk is a whole food and consequently suited to every stomach is absurd. Some people cannot digest milk. Yet many who cannot—and who may be dyspeptic—would be greatly benefited by drinking it with pepsin in it.

THE milk of a cow that is kept confined in a place scarcely large enough to hold her is not fit for consumption. In all our large cities the government should forbid the keeping of cows. That would be in the interest of consumers and of farmers and dairy men.—Farmers' Voice.

Ducks and Corn Fodder.

Ducks will greatly enjoy green corn fodder, if it is cut fine, and especially the suckers. A few rows of corn with the seed very thick in the rows, may be cut and cured for ducks when the corn is about two feet high. If the fodder is cut very fine in winter and sprinkled with bran and cornmeal the ducks will highly relish it. The blades of corn fodder may also be stripped, cut fine and scalded for them. It is best to always scald their dry food at all seasons.

THE VEILED PROPHET.

Final Arrangements for His Majesty's Annual Visit.

Arrival by Water and Military Parade on Saturday—Grand Parade and Ball on Tuesday—Fair Week Attractions.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 29.—The Veiled Prophet will arrive the day after tomorrow, and every one is now discussing the details of his grand entree and of the magnificent festival, parade and ball of next Tuesday. For fourteen years in succession the mystic monarch has visited the city, arriving every year in a secret manner, and not making his appearance until the parade. But this year the carnival at St. Louis is so much grander than anything which has preceded it, that His Majesty has decided to make a formal entree, and he will accordingly arrive by boat on Saturday afternoon. He will be met by the First regiment N. G. M., and by a large delegation of influential citizens. The Prophet will hold a reception at the Exposition in the afternoon and will then retire to his "den," from which he will emerge on Tuesday afternoon.

The Veiled Prophet.

The parade on Tuesday will be a magnificent spectacle, unusual trouble and expense having been incurred in preparing the floats and moving spectacles, while from the 75,000 gas and electric lights brilliant rays of countless shades will add to the splendor and magnificence of the scene. Enormous crowds will view the parade from points of vantage along the route, and excursion trains will be run to the city from various locations. Specially low rates for the carnival will be made by the various railroads next week, and it will be possible to secure round-trip tickets for one fare from nearly every depot in this section.

Advatage should be taken of this opportunity, for the attractions next week are so numerous that fresh enjoyment can be found every day. The exposition, with its four concerts daily by the grandest band in America; the fair, with special attractions in the ring every day, to say nothing of the Veiled prophet and of the magnificent illuminations of Tuesday and Thursday, will combine to make the first week of October, 1892, a week never to be forgotten by residents in, or visitors to, the great western and southwestern metropolis.

DONT'S FOR HUSBANDS.

Bits of Advice for the Head of the House to Heed.

Wives who have disagreeable husbands should cut this out and place it under hubby's plate on the tea table tonight. It will do him good.

Don't sneer at her opinions. Her judgment will always be better than yours on many subjects.

Don't hang around the kitchen offering advice and suggestions. You have more business in your office or counting-room.

Don't ask what she has done with the dollar or two dollars you gave her yesterday or a week ago.

Don't marry a woman who hasn't common sense enough to spend a dollar wisely without your interference in the matter.

Don't reprove her or dispute her word or speak sharply to her before your children or servants.

Don't talk about how well off you might have been if you had never married her and had three, or four, or five, or six children. The wives and children of husbands who do this are just as unfortunate as you are.

Don't reserve all your sullen, pouting spells for your own fireside. Distribute some of your hatefulness around in other places, where others will tell you just what they think of you for such unchristianlike conduct.

Don't smoke 40 cents' worth of cigars a day and eat $1 dinners downtown and then go home and rant around about how "we simply must economize."

Don't try to make your wife feel that she ought to get down on her knees and grovel in grateful humiliation before you every time you get her a new dress or bonnet. Most wives earn more gowns and bonnets than they ever get.

Don't be so very, very saving of your praises of your wife. Be just as recklessly extravagant in this direction as you choose, no danger of bankrupting your stock of affection or hers, either, by such a course.

Don't compare her to other women to her disadvantage, and don't, don't speak of her failings to any other person on the earth. Men who talk about their wives deserve and receive the contempt of all respectable persons.

Don't swear at her or look at her as if you would gladly slay her when she tells you that the flour barrel is empty. You have helped to empty it and it is your duty to fill it cheerfully.

Don't tell her how she ought to dress her children or herself, and don't forget to tell her when you see her looking prettier than usual.

And don't forget certain little promises and solemn vows you made to her on your knees in the days of your courtship and at the marriage altar. They are registered on high, and you may some day be reminded of them to your infinite sorrow.—N. Y. World.

Excited Lady (on the beach)—Why isn't something done for that ship in distress? Why don't some of you——

Coastguard (hurriedly)—We have sent the crew a line to come ashore, mum.

Exeited Lady—Good gracious! Were they waiting for a formal invitation?—Once a Week.

"Of Two Evils," Etc.

"I don't think I'd like to live in your country," remarked the eastern man to the Kansas farmer on the train.

"Why not? It's a fine country," protested the Kansan.

"Maybe so, after you get used to it; but I would not like the idea of having my house blown over by one of your cyclones."

"But we don't have any trouble like that."

"Why," exclaimed the easterner in surprise, "I've seen any number of instances reported in the newspapers."

"Some years ago, p'raps; but now every one of them is lies," asserted the Kansan, "sent out by eastern banks and capitalists. We've got all our buildings so loaded down with mortgages that the cyclones gave up in disgust, and there hasn't been one around these parts for three years. I guess I know what I'm talking about," and the eastern man withdrew from the discussion.—Detroit Free Press.

Too Slow

in making clothes, this was. It had to go. And yet people thought it a pretty good thing in its day. Some of them couldn't believe, all at once, that there was anything better. Just so with every improvement. The old way always has some benighted ones who cling to it to the last.

Too Fast

in ruining clothes, un-making them—that's the trouble with the washboard. But it's going now and going fast, to join the spinning-wheel. Women find it doesn't pay to rub their clothes to pieces over it. They can wash better with Pearline. Less work, less wear, no ruinous rub, rub, rub. That's the modern way of washing—safe, easy, quick, cheap. No wonder that many women have thrown away the washboard.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 373 JAMES PYLE, New York.

IT IS A DUTY you owe yourself and family to get the best value for your money. Economize in your footwear by purchasing W. L. Douglas Shoes, which represent the best value for prices asked, as thousands will testify.
TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3 SHOE FOR GENTLEMEN, THE BEST SHOE IN THE WORLD FOR THE MONEY.

A genuine sewed shoe, that will not rip, fine calf, seamless, smooth inside, flexible, more comfortable, stylish and durable than any other shoe ever sold at the price. Equals custom made shoes costing from $4 to $5.
$4 and $5 Hand-sewed, fine calf shoes. The most stylish, easy and durable shoes ever sold at these prices. They equal fine imported shoes costing from $8 to $12.
$3.50 Police Shoe, worn by farmers and all others who want a good heavy calf, three soled, extension edge shoe, easy to walk in, and will keep the feet dry and warm.
$2.50 Fine Calf, $2.25 and $2 Workingmen's Shoes will give more wear for the money than any other make. They are made for service. The increasing sales show that workingmen have found this out.
BOYS' $2 and Youths' $1.75 School Shoes are worn by the boys everywhere. The most serviceable shoes sold at these prices.
LADIES' $3 Hand-Sewed, $2.50, $2 and $1.75 Shoes for Misses are made of the best Dongola or fine Calf, as desired. They are very stylish, comfortable and durable. The $3 shoe equals custom made shoes costing from $4 to $5. Ladies who wish to economize in their footwear are finding this out.
CAUTION.—Beware of dealers substituting shoes without W. L. Douglas' name and the price stamped on bottom. Such substitutions are fraudulent and subject to prosecution by law for obtaining money under false pretences.
ASK FOR W. L. DOUGLAS' SHOES.
If not for sale in your place send direct to Factory, stating kind, size and width wanted. Postage free. Will give exclusive sale to shoe dealers and general merchants where I have no agents. Write for Catalogue. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

DELANO DIARY

—Go to J. B. Plattner's new cash store for Dress Goods and Fur Coats. 52tf

—To-morrow will be Delano's Monthly Fair Day.

—Councilman Wiese has picked his Winter pumpkins.

—Corey is making sorghum. Joe Merriman does the feeding.

—Jim Young got thrashed yesterday about 400 bushels of fine oats.

—Young's Hotel appears to hold its own under the new management.

—Will Jacobs has moved into the John Peterson property on 4th St.

—Mr. Maynard, the baker, had a man lodged in jail over night for stealing $31, from him.

—Rev. H. A. Noyes, of Buffalo, will preach at the Presbyterian church, at 3 P. M. next Sabbath.

—A couple of Colorado Cowboys have been disposing of some Western horses, in this vicinity lately.

—Knute Nelson is billed for Buffalo Oct. 10; and Lieutenant Governor Ives for Annandale, the 12th.

—The Eagle proudly proclaims that she has been pluming her nest. But "Fine feathers ner'e make fine birds."

—Drawing has been added to the studies in the public school. This is a branch that may be made useful to many of the scholars.

—Editor French, of Monticello wears one of those little tin pans, said to be of American make. Wonder if he has been made a committeeman?

—Hunt up your 1890 Law Supplement and carefully study the new election law and see how you have to vote this year. Don't fail to be registered.

—The Eden Valley Journal, of Meeker county appeared last week among our exchanges. It is an addition to the country press fully up to the average.

—Mrs. Catherine O'Leary has sold her farm to Mr. Knabe, of Maple Plain. Real estate; about here, seems to be rather more in demand since the two last year's crops.

—We understand that Peter Campbell has sold out his business at Watertown, and contemplates making Delano headquarters in future. There is plenty of room here for several more enterprising citizens.

—Jonas Johnson, wife and seven children arrived this week, from Sweden. Mr. Johnson is stopping, for the present, with his brother-in-law Erick Erickson. He expects to buy a farm near here and locate.

—Be at Armstrong on Thursday evening if you wish to be Hectored in first class style on the Temperance question, by the man that got one of General Sherman's boots blacked in time for the battle but couldn't keep the General long enough to black the other one.

—George H. Blackwell left on Wednesday morning for Appleton, where, with his brother and another man he will embark in the Democratic newspaper business by establishing the Tri-County Argus. Success George, for yourself, and for your paper.

—Mr. Jonas Johnson latel arrived from Sweden indignantly denies that he and his family were quarantined for about three weeks. He has health certificates from Montreal and from Sault dt St. Marie, and O. K'd at Minneapolis, stating their freedom from Cholera infection.

—We understand the Democrats of Independence are preparing for a grand rally at Armstrong, in the near future. J. W. Lawrence, candidate for Congress for the Fifth district is expected to be present and speak. They say Mr. Fletcher takes a man along with him to do that part of the business.

—Valentine Eppel has been helping thresh this week, he does not propose to neglect his neighbors for office. If any of you are short a man when you see him round electioneering press him into service and you will have a good one. He is an excellent all around man, has been a good wheat buyer and will make a good Sheriff.

—Col. W. C. Plummer of North Dakota and Hon. D. B. Searle, of St. Cloud, are billed to speak in the City Hall to-morrow night. They will, doubtless dilate upon a desirable delegate to represent the Sixth district, which extends from Delano to Duluth, and deserves deep waterways and other measures which Major Baldwin will be a good man to secure from a house friendly to him and which he, being a Duluth man will know the need of.

—Cash paid for butter and eggs at Green's.

—Adam Horsch has embarked in the lumber business.

—The addition recently made to the City Hall is being brick veneered to accord with the former structure.

—There will be no services at the M. E. church on Sunday evening on account of the absence of the pastor at Conference.

—The M. E. church fair and supper passed off pleasantly. A good sized crowd was present. Gross receipts are given at $70.

—A. W. Wittman has been appointed a member of the county committee for the 3d Commissioner District. An excellent appointment.

—Hon. B. F. Christlieb, of Long Lake, is purchasing brick for his new store, of E. F. Ziebarth, of this place, who shipped some last week.

—A couple of Delano schoolmams positively assert that west bound G. N. evening trains do not stop at St. Albans. They speak from experience.

—Charles Eppel got more grain by about 400 bushels than he expected at one time. That's the way with lots of these farmers, they feel better after they have threshed.

—Prof. Dewey is arranging a programme for Columbus Day, Friday, Oct. 21. The school with a few friends will furnish the exercises while everybody is invited to be present.

DIALOGUE BETWEEN DELANOITES.

SAM PAPE—How is it Van that Gresham, Cooley and McVeagh are all leaving the G. O. P?

VAN EMAN—Oh! That's all right. We get General Sickles and he's worth all of them.

SAM PAPE—What! One Democrat worth three Republicans?

Personals.

Mrs. Gleeson, Mrs. Rochl, and Maud Sherry were among Delanoites returning from the city Saturday evening.

Messrs H. W. Roll, and H. C. Bull, of Cokato were looking after their respective interests here on Wednesday.

County Cullings.

It is iaid that Joseph Van Eman has accused Mr. Powers of being a Democrat.

Hon. J. W. Willis will speak at Buffalo, to-night. He is a rustler and well worth listening to.

We are thanktul to the Howard Lake Herald for assigning to us the first and leading place in its proposed Editorial football team.

The Cokato Commoner accused us last week of seeing ghosts etc., concerning our opposition to fusion. The Alliance people seem to have beheld the same apparition and to have banished it from sight by the traditional method of crying out against it. Consequently we did not need the prescription so generously suggested by the Commoner.

From the educational column of the Wright County Times, conducted by Prof. B. F. Remington, we are pleased to learn that there is at least one Wright County teacher who has faith in "Mental Arithmetic." We had feared that this highly useful, and much neglected study had been dropped from the curriculum; destined to take its place among "lost arts" and "forgotten sciences" We hope the Professor will not stop until he succeeds in re-establishing the good old way in every school in the county.

Political Points.

Nominees for county offices are thick. Most everywhere now-a-days.

Judge Gresham, Judge Cooley and Attorney McVeagh are coming over to the Cleveland crowd for the same reason that many others, all over the country, are; because they are tired of Republican tariff, Force bill, and civil service reform and promiscuous pensions.

General Sickles excuse for leaving the Democratic ranks and going over to the Republicans because he does not like the war records of the leaders nor the vetoes to pension bills which the Republican party might have passed at most any time during the last quarter of a century seems just a little late and rather lame.

We are creditably informed that the editor-in-chief of the carniverous bird up street has been dickering with a Democrat with a view to giving the People's party candidate for Governor two votes in Delano. If Donnelly finds it out he may have another lawsuit to keep the Eagle from picking his bones after the Republican State Central Committee have done with him.

That plate story about the good looks of the Republican Candidate for Congress, in our district, Judge Searle, appeared in the Herald and Times about the same time as it did in the Eagle. Wonder if the Judge wrote that himself? Anyway Major Baldwin sounds as well as Judge Searle, add he is quite a fine appearing man, and this is no stereotyped plate matter that you can look for, in all the balance of the county papers.

It looks now as if the powers that be intend running but three men on the Democratic Legislative ticket as the Legislative committee had not yet been appointed yesterday, to fill vacancies, and one or more vacancies on the ticket are said to have occurred. This way of manipulating things don't suit the people any more, and the new system of voting will not allow voters to be manipulated. And the 38th Legislative District Democrats are entitled to a full ticket selected by their own delegates when assembled for that purpose. This manipulating business don't give satisfaction to anybody.

Hennepin County Politics.

Hon. Edward Egan, of Osseo, the People's candidate for County Commissioner for the 5th Hennepin Co, district, will be elected on the 8th of November next, and by a majority too, that will make the heads of his opponents swim, notwithstanding the fact that they are making a desperate fight. I thus prophetically write, for I know the people of Hennepin county. The high character and distinguished ability of Mr. Egan alone would warrant such a prediction, but there are other circumstances which foretell the election of Mr. Egan. His opponent on the Republican ticket, Mr. Smith, is, and has been for many years, the business partner of George Savage, the well known politician, through whose influence Mr. Smith secured the nomination. These men have been taking county road contracts for years back, and whether their intentions be good or bad, a very general suspicion prevails throughout the county that they have put their heads together to get the commissionership for what there is in it, and very loud denunciations of them are heard on every hand. Republicans, and Republicans of great prominence and influence, as well as temperance people, are declaring for Mr. Egan every day. Mr. Favro, of Wayzata, a very clean Republican, was Mr. Smith's opponent in the convention and it was a fatal mistake the Republican party made the day they threw him overboard for a road contractor, distinguished only for his business relationship to a scheming politician with whom he has lived and fattened for years back on funds from the public treasury.

Mr. Lydiard, of Long Lake, was defeated, several years ago, when he sought the Republican nomination for commissioner, by dishonorable means, and as the same men who knifed Mr. Lydiard are foremost in the fight for Mr. Smith, the friends of Mr. Lydiard are up in arms against them.

An impression also prevails that the Republican convention was too much of a family affair to represent the wishes of the party. Mr. Henry, the nominee for School Superintendent, is a brother-in law to that same George Savage. Henry's brother, too, sought a nomination for commissioner, I am told, and George Savage himself tried for the legislature. Not being able to get all the offices, they determined to dictate who should have them, and they did. The action of the convention will defeat the party as sure as sunrise. Mr. Egan is the regular Democratic nominee, but, because of his wide acquaintance and popularity among the people of the county of all parties, he is called the People's candidate. He will be the People's commissioner too.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

Republican Rally.

The Republicans had a rally and torch-light procession, at the City Hall, on Saturday evening. It did not pan out quite as expected. They are not shouting for Jim Blaine this season, and many of their best shouters were absent or uncomonly quiet. There were but 56 torches in line, counting the Cornet Band, hired for the occasion and a couple of Cokato candidates a man or two from Hennepin county and a good percentage of small boys. The commander on reaching the hall and finding a few old soldiers there made them a short but very enthusiastic address, in which he was not very choice of language, so long as it bore down on dereliction of duty in not helping swell the procession to some respectable size.

Judge Searle was billed for a speech, but was absent. Mr. Ferguson, of Minneapolis took his place, commencing at 8:45. He proved to be fully as dry as the Judge could have desired. He confined his speech mostly to the tariff question and the platforms of the Democratic, Republican and Alliance parties, ignoring the Prohibitionists. He evidently agreed with the GAZETTE that Major Baldwin would attend to the "Deep Water Ways" as well as his competitor could, as he was silent on the subject. He admits that "tariff is a tax" as he said we must raise money by this means. He claimed the Republican doctrine was to put tariff on goods such as are made here sufficient to cover the difference in labor. If this is the Republican theory why don't they act on it? He did not attempt to tell why woolens and cottons are taxed, as some of our local politicians boastingly say, more than their cost; or that the tariff on calicoes and woolens is more per yard than we can buy them at home for. If our local Republicans are right what ails Mr. Ferguson? The difference in labor cost certainly can't amount to more per yard than we can buy the goods for in this country. But then these Republicans appear to have many different views on this subject. He thought there was about 12,000,000 employes in factories that would be turned out of a job by free trade. That would be about one factory hand for every family of five and a half people in the United States.

How many think this proportion will hold good? How many think in case it does that it needs protection after these many years? Or, how many families would willingly tax themselves on nearly everything they buy to keep one member of the family wealthy? The Walker tariff bill of 1846 he said was followed by hard times in 1857! Just think of it eleven years after its passage! Why not as well say the Revolutionary war, of 1776, was the cause of the stagnation in trade? Or, this being the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America, the speaker lost a good opportunity to have referred to that important event, as one having still further than the Democratic tariff of '46, preceded the hard times of '57.

After music by the band Chairman Ingerson introduced Col. Plummer of South Dakota. This the Colonel resented and gave the audience to understand that his political affiliations were not with the dominant party in that State, but that he hailed from N. Dak. The Colonel is constructed, physically, something like the Donnelly mode of Architecture. His "gift of gab" is quite good. He can, when he says "con-sti-tu-tion-al" a word he has evidently, at some period of his life, and for some purpose, given considerable of his time and talent to, make the audience laugh, nearly every time. His words impressed one with the idea that they were similar to ribbon being measured off for so much a yard, the style and color to suit the customer, the tariff being all the same. He said he used to be a Democrat, and from some things he said we presume he trained, for a while, with the Whigs. His familiarity with, and minute discription of some of the old timers, and ther political methods would lead one to infer that he used to be one of the boys.

Some of the Republicans heaved a sigh, as if they would like to clutch the throat of some poor "pauper laborer" of "free trade" England for his presumption in daring to make crockery to send to this country; or give the Democrats a good going over for belonging to a party which would be guilty of allowing people to, while asking the blessing, face, on the bottom of their plates, the British lion and unicorn, while the Colonel was portraying, in his best style this fact. If those sighing members of the G. O. P. would turn their plates over and offer thanks to the Giver of all good, for the blessing of prosperity in our land instead of implicitly believing that it is due to the McKinley bill, they would behold on the bottom of their plates, after this more than a quarter of a century of the protection party rule, a part of it McKinley bill tariff, the same old British lion and unicorn as of yore. He who doeth all things well, in spite of man's unwise, or unjust laws, finds a market, in America, for European plates, and at the same time furnishes the American with an abundance of eatables, some of which, he gladly gives, even though a large percentage goes for taxes to aid in running the Government, in exchange for dishes from which to eat. While he looks at the marks on them he is reminded of the land from whence came his forefathers, or from which he but recently emigrated; or, perhaps where his relatives and friends are toiling now at the only trade their surroundings permit them to labor at, in order to exchange with us. This state of affairs applies as well to other industries, and other countries as to those mentioned. As we are all foreign born or descendants of those that were why is it necessary to prohibit ourselves from buying even our dishes from those who remained at home? The speaker appeared to be a little flustrated when he discovered that he had attributed to the Walker tariff bill the fact that "we children went barefooted early in the spring and late in the fall" and immediately afterwards told the audience that his father lost $800.00 that he had stored away, by the bursting of wildcat banks. He tried to smooth this break up but succeeded only in making it look rougher than before by saying "this was not all gotten at once but was the earnings and savings of years." Probably eleven years, taking Mr. Ferguson for authority. He said our paper money travels with the flag around the world. But he did not say that most of our American vessels are keeping near shore nowa-days. The Colonel complained of the Democrats for bringing a speaker from Milwaukee into the State to lecture. Possibly he is as creditable an importation as that of the Republicans from North Dakota, and as firm a believer in tariff for revenue.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Oct. 7, 1892.

Attention democrats; standby your guns, night and day, and see that replenish what argument based upon actual existing facts cannot do. Republican trickery has been hatching in this town, and it will be sprung upon you during the closing days of the campaign. Be prepared for it, and whatever its nature, there will be no stampede in your ranks; keep your powder dry and your guns will not be silenced at a critical period in the battle. It was no little thing that brought two members of the republican National executive committee Clarkson and Hobart—to Washington at this time. It was to confer with Mr. Harrison about the details of a move by which they hope to arrest the mighty torrent of sentiment now sweeping Clevelandwards, in the time to avert defeat. It is not possible at this time to give the nature of this intended trickery, but the mysterious rumors of European interference with our commercial relations with San Domingo and the pan-American nations, which are already floating around, make it probable that it will be something to appeal to the patriotic impulses of young thoughtless voters and intended to convince them that Mr. Harrison's re-election is necessary for the preservation of our National honor. Be on your guard; let no such "rot" influence a single vote. Whatever the jeopardy of our commercial interests, there can be no danger in electing a democratic president. No democratic president ever betrayed the National honor, and none ever will. Impress this upon the minds of young democrats and all the republican trickery that can be hatched between now and election day will not prevent a democratic victory.

More than one Secretary of the treasury has literaly wroked himself to death, but the Ohio gentleman at present holding the position is not built that way; he prefers play to work any day and he gets his preference generally. Secretary Foster took a long vacation in the summer, in fact, he has really done no work in his office since Congress adjourned, and now he has gone away again, not to return again untill after election. He has gone east, and will divide his time between stumping and fishing until about a week or ten days before election when he will go to Ohio to help in manipulating the closing of the republican campaign in that State. By the way, democrats here are not staking anything on the Ohio rainbow; it's very pretty to look at, but they doubt its stability.

The returns from the Florida and Georgia State elections form an object lesson to those who have allowed themselves to believe that the unholy alliance between the republicans and the peoples party would result in carrying any Southern State against the regular democratic ticket. They know better now. So long as there is any danger of National legislation in the nature of the notorious force bill, the South will be solidly democratic. Home rule is always and at all times the greatest of all issues in any community.

No one can doubt that tariff reform is marching on when such eminent gentlemen, formerly republicans, as Judge Gresham, of Indiana; Judge Cooley, of Michigan, and ex-Attorney General Wayne McVeigh, of Pennsylvania, announce their intention to vote for Mr. Cleveland on the tariff issue.

Mr. Harrison has about given up the idea of attending the New York Columbus celebration next week, owing to the alarming turn Mrs. Harrison's illness has taken. The action of the convention of the National Association of Democratic Clubs, in passing the resolution of Sympathy for Mr. Harrison's family affliction was most happily taken. Everybody here speaks well of it, and, I know that Mr. Harrison accepted in the same spirit which actuated the convention in unanimously adopting it. The dangerous illness of Mrs. Harrison, who as the lady of the White House is deservedly popular, is the one touch of nature which makes the whole world kin.

Congressman W. L. Wilson, of West Virginia, is not one of the democrats who consider that State doubtful. He passed through Washington this week and being asked what he thought of the situation said: "I am perfectly confident that we will carry the State. The neutral immigration has not injured the democratic prospects. The only danger will come from the Kanawa mining section where thousands of negroes have been brought to take the place of white miners. The employment of these negroes was unquestionably for the purpose of making the State republican, but it will not, in my opinion succeed."

EDITOR V. C. Seward, of the Stillwater Messenger was shot and killed by a former employe supposed to be of unsound mind, on Tuesday.

NOTHING like being lucky. At the choosing of places on the State ticket the populists won first place the Democrats second, the prohibitionists third and the Republicans fourth. The list will be headed I. Donnelly, followed by D. W. Lawler, S. E. Dean and Knute Nelson.

CORRESPONDENCE

ROCKFORD RECORDS.

The farmer cannot complain of the season being short this fall. They have had ample time for gathering in the harvest.

Geo. Guptil now drives the stage for Mr. Pitt, who is still confined to the house with sickness, but who, we are glad to note is improving.

Frank Thomas who has been on the sick list is convalescing.

The I. O. G. T. Lodge of this place gave a Box Social in the G. A. R. Hall, last Thursday evening which was a grand success in every way. They received $16.25.

Harry Young our enterprising sawyer took a trip to the cities Monday, returning the same day.

C. M. Johnson Sundayed in Delano.

D. R. Thompson went to Buffalo Tuesday, to attend the meeting of the Wright County Commissioners.

Politics begin to wax warm and there will probably be a number of political rallies here in the near future.

Mrs. Walker (nee Miss Florence Ames) is visiting her father Dr. C. B. Ames, a few days this week.

The 5th District Lodge I. O. G. T. including members from four or five counties, will meet at Rockford Oct. 19 and 20. The first night will be open Lodge. All are cordially invited to attend. A short entertainment will be given free to all.

We are pleased to announce the marriage of Mr. Henry Conzet, of Greenwood, to Miss Ina Dugan, of Delano, Monday, Oct. 10th. Both are well known in this vicinity. Their many friends join in wishing them a happy and prosperous journey together through life.

C. W. Haynes has almost completed the addition to his dwelling.

John, brother of Martin Conzet, has rented the Masonic building and will start a tinware store and repair shop at once.

The Garvin family gave an entertainment in the G. A. R. hall, Wednesday night.

There will be a Democratic mass meeting in Rockford, Friday, Oct. 14th. The speakers will be Hon. H. H. Hawkins and J. Adam Bede and Major W. R. Baldwin. The Republicans will have a rally the same night, at Greenwood.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

This is fine weather for doing up fall work and the farmers are improving it as best they can.

A good refreshing shower would be a benefit to plowing, lay the dust, and make every one feel better.

James W. Lawrence of Minneapolis next Congressman for the fifth Congressional Dist was in Independence yesterday. He is expected to address the citizens of Independence soon on the live issues of the day. The great Afro-American Hector Prohibition lecturer at Town Hall Armstrong Thursday evening of this week.

The war between the Israelites and Amalekites has begun but who will carry of the laurels of the Waterloo will not be determined until the 8th of next November.

All the political candidates are now in the field mustering up recruits for the great conflict.

The Republican meeting at Armstrong on Friday evening of last week was not largely attended, owing to neglect in having a notice of the meeting sufficiently circulated. Mr. Peterson of Iowa was the speaker of the evening and gave the few that were there a very good talk in favor of his side of the question on Tariff, free coinage, etc., Many of the farmers think the protective duty on eggs is one of the grand features of the McKinley bill, it is even an inducement for the hens to lay.

The frost on Friday and Saturday night of last week came too late to hurt anything, everything was out of the way.

Elder J. N. Potter, of Rockford, is moving to Armstrong this week.

Quite a number of farmers were making hay last week it is not often that hay is made in October.

Mrs. Beyer, who has been quite sick for several weeks. Is reported as convalescing.

Hennepin County Politics.

Hon. Edward Egan, of Osseo, the People's Democratic candidate for County Commissioner for the 5th Commissioner District, has been a resident of Hennepin county for more than thirty years, and enjoys, perhaps, the widest individual acquaintance and the greatest personal popularity among the people, of any of the distinguished gentlemen whose names addorn our ticket this year. I have been about the county a great deal of late, and have heard so many good things said of Mr. Egan by Republicans, Prohibitionists, and people of every other party, as well as Democrats, that I could not, for a single moment, doubt his election, even if he were doing no work at all. But Mr. Egan has had his coat off ever since the hour of his nomination, working with an untiring energy characteristic of the man, not for himself alone, but for the success of the Democratic party, which, I predict, will one day honor him highly for his unselfish services. Mr. Egan is probably the only man on the ticket, too, whose character the Republicans have not yet dared to assail in some way with lying insinuations. It pays to have a good name, and one who is personally known to the people has a great advantage in the race for public office when he happens to be a man of good character.

Judge James R. Corrigan is a steady, sober, industrious, painstaking official, and if it were left to those who have had personal observation of his work to say who is to be our next Judge of Probate, Judge Corrigan would be re-elected by a unanimous vote. But Judge Corrigan happens not to be personally acquainted in the rural districts, and the Republicans are stealing a march on him, by sneaking around in localities where he has never been and prating about his marriage into a family of fabulous wealth, making the farmers believe he is an aristocrat who would not recognize them on the street. Judge Corrigan would not resort to such tactics to gain his own election, even if there was something really bad that he might truthfully say about his opponent; and if the Republicans can say nothing worse of him than that he married a daughter of Anthony Kelly, I think our people can safely conclude that he is a very worthy man. I knew Judge Corrigan many years ago. I happened to meet him at the Court House, when he first landed in the State, without a dollar and without a friend. We happened to be together a good deal that winter, and I know how bravely he faced the trials of life. We talked a great deal and I had an excellent opportunity to learn his history and weigh his character. Poverty was no new experience to him. He had been born poor and worked for his bread from early boyhood. He loved to work, and wished for nothing that he could not earn honestly, and he has gained all that he has by his personal merits, including his wife, I dare say. If any one imagines that Judge Corrigan scorns those who work in the fields, or believes that he is in the least puffed up because he is the husband of Anthony Kelly's daughter, that person's credulity has been imposed upon. I believe Judge Corrigan will be re-elected, and by a handsome majority. If he is defeated, it will be by chicanery and fraud.

Hon. B. F. Christlieb, of Long Lake, Democratic candidate for re-election to the house of Representatives from the 34th Legislative district, can hardly be defeated. He, too, has been a resident of the county for more than thirty years. During the first few years of his residence here, he became acquainted with nearly all of the pioneers while engaged in his occupation as a surveyor, and I observe that many, very many, of the old settlers, have a warm affection for him and they intend to vote for him without regard to party. If Judge Corrigan would go around with Mr. Christlieb to the farmer's houses, for the next four weeks, and abandon his speech-making tour, interesting though it is to the people, his re-election would be much more certain. The political work that is done quietly is the kind that counts the most and costs the least.

Prof. James A. Lewis has returned from Iola, Wis., and is seeking a re-election to the Superintendency. He is the right man in the right place, and stands a good show for re-election.

David Lydiard is not proclaiming his Republicanism from the house tops this fall. For many years he had been a great Republican and always supported the ticket. Instead of honoring him for this, some of the ring-leaders came to regard him as a political slave, who had not the moral courage to oppose the candidacy of any body the party chose to place upon its ticket. But to their sore disappointment Mr. Lydiard is taking a rest. The people of Hennepin county have not forgotten, nor will they soon forget, the dirty schemes practiced on Mr. Lydiard by a number of those who are the most anxious for the success of the Republican party this fall, when he sought the Republican nomination for Commissioner, several years ago.

In one hundred years $500 worth of pennies would only be worth $250, so quickly does copper money wear away.

Dreker, the Vienna brewer, is reported to be worth $40,000,000 and to be increasing his fortune at the rate of $2,000,000 a year out of the profits of his business.

The gulf stream flows at an average speed of three miles an hour. At some places, notably in the straits of Bemini, the current attains a velocity of fifty-four miles an hour.

The three longest rivers in the world are: The Missouri, from its source to the mouth of the lower Mississippi, 4,575 miles; the Amazon, 3,944 miles, and the Nile, 3,500 miles.

A strange custom is followed by Mexican farmers. They use oxen of one color in the morning and another color in the afternoon. They do not know why, but they know that it must be the right thing to do because their forefathers did it.

Mars must think this earth is full of peeping Toms. It is rather an outrage when a respectable planet cannot come within 35,000,000 miles of us without being stared at all the time. No wonder it makes him warm and causes his snow-caps to melt.

The only known lady chime-player, it is stated, is Miss Bertha Thomas, assistant organist of Grace church, New York. She doesn't have to climb into the steeple to play the chimes, which she handles from below by the aid of an electrical device.

A London policeman grappled with and upset a bicycler who he thought was going at an unlawful rate. The policeman arrested the wheelman for fast driving, and the latter had the policeman up for assault. The magistrate had the summons withdrawn in each case, and now wheelmen and policemen don't know what their rights and duties are.

The highest velocity ever given to a cannon ball is estimated at 1,626 feet per second, being equal to a mile in 3.2 seconds. The velocity of the earth at the equator, due to its rotation on its axis, is 1,000 miles per hour, or a mile in 3.6 seconds. Therefore, if a cannon ball were fired due west and could maintain its initial velocity it would beat the sun in his apparent journey around the earth.

The present style of alarm clock will soon go into disuse if there is any truth in the story that a Swiss clockmaker has invented an alarm clock with a phonographic attachment. In place of the unmeaning clatter of the present clock, a man can have himself waked up by the repetition of one of his favorite poems, or by strains of dulcet music. In fact the possibilities of the thing are unbounded.

John Obermeyer, a barber, and his wife, Margaret, committed suicide together in their home in New York by taking chloroform. They were 68 years of age and had been married forty-eight years. They came from Hamburg many years ago. They left letters in one of which it is stated that on account of old age, the loss of friends and no work they had found life useless. They leave three children, two in Germany.

Berlin has a "gold club" made up of rascals who operate somewhat after the manner of "gold brick" swindlers in this country, the difference being that the Berlin rogues sell pretended ore in the rough instead of bricks. It is said that the combination has made millions. It has been supposed that our own criminals were the shrewdest in the world, but the trickiest class of them have been apparently outdone by these novel operators in Berlin.

There is at least one obliging and accommodating boarding-house keeper in New York city. She does not exact her pay in advance, neither does she send a bill to her boarders every week. Her name is Jane B. Reid. Most of her customers are "regular" boarders, and she recently sent a bill to one of them for $9,772.66. This was for board and lodging since January 1, 1861. As he "wanted time" to arrange to meet the bill, which he acknowledged was in the main correct, she brought suit against him, and obtained judgment for the full amount and costs. This is a story hard to believe, yet true.

Mrs. Barber, of White Oaks, N. M., must, if all accounts be true, be a wonderful woman. She lives on a large ranch and manages it entirely. She owns 8,000 cattle, buys, sells and transfers them, directs the men who work the farm, and found herself, in prospecting, a valuable silver mine on her property. She lives in a beautifully furnished adobe house which she built with her own hands. Besides these sterner accomplishments, she is said to play the piano and guitar, to sing delightfully, to paint and embroider, and she entertains a great deal. She has been married twice and is now a widow.

The women of Virginia have adopted an ingenious plan to raise $15,000 with which to reproduce Washington's Mount Vernon home at the Columbian exposition. They have prepared 15,000 engravings of the old home and of Washington's tomb, which they are selling as souvenirs at $1 each. By a variety of entertainments they hope to raise $10,000 more, and this fund will be used to furnish the building and operate it in the Virginia style. The building is to be an exact representation of the Mount Vernon home of Washington in appearance and dimensions, and is to be furnished with antique furniture.

Destructive prairie fires are raging in Oklahoma. A railroad bridge and several houses have been destroyed.

NEW YORK IS GAY.

The City Elaborately Decorated for the Week's Columbian Festivities—Services in the Churches.

New York, Oct. 10.—After many months of preparation the great New York celebration of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus was ushered in Saturday by special services in the various synagogues of this city. The city in many quarters displays profuse decorations, and it is believed that by Monday hardly a house in the city will be without some semblance of decoration in honor of the great event.

Save for the elaborate displays of bunting and booming of the big gun on the Governor's island in honor of the arrival of the French war ships there were few visible occurrences to mark the opening day of the Columbian celebration which will reach over next Thursday.

The Spanish and Portuguese congregation, the oldest congregation of Hebrews in this city, held special services in the synagogue at Fifth avenue and Nineteenth street. Rabbi Pereira Mendes officiated. This congregation was formed 200 years ago by descendants of the Hebrews driven out of Spain in the famous expulsion of 1492, and the services were out of the ordinary in consequence of the dual anniversary. The ancient ritual was read with traditional chants, and the music consisted of melodies dating back prior to the expulsion. The rabbi delivered a special sermon.

The services in all the Hebrew temples were distinctively patriotic, differing only in this, that the synagogues adhering to the rigid ceremonials of the orthodox faith permitted no interior decorations to interfere with the severe simplicity of the services incident to the Feast of the Tabernacles.

At the handsome temple "Emanu-El," Fifth avenue and Forty-first street, which possesses the largest congregation of the Reformed Jews in the United States, the pulpit was festooned with United States flags and bunting and the fruits of the country, lavishly displayed, symbolized the Feast of the Tabernacles.

In some of the synagogues the customary intonation in Hebrew of the Psalms appointed for the day (the ninety-fifth and ninety-sixth Psalms) was replaced by patriotic hyms. In all the temples the children were made participants and sang in honor of the country and the flag.

Special services were held in most of the churches. The choirs in some of the churches were assisted by orchestras, and elaborate musical programmes were given. The pulpits and altars were adorned with flowers. All of the discourses were prepared with special consideration for the children, so that the youngest attendant could appreciate the importance of the services.

Sunday evening the Italian colony, under the auspices of Minister Baron Fava, began its Columbian celebration at the Lenox lyceum with a concert and a discourse by Dr. Luigi Reversi on Columbus. In the afternoon many people visited the Italian transport Garigliano, which brought over the Columbus monument.

The city hall is the most elaborately decorated building down town, although many of the newspaper offices about Park row are using a great deal of bunting arranged in graceful designs. On the city hall American, Italian and Spanish flags are looped everywhere in an endless chain covering the front of the building and strung from the many flagstaffs to the roof. The coat-of-arms of the United States and New York are displayed at the cornices, framed in Italian and Spanish flags. A large gold-framed oil painting of the Santa Maria, Columbus' flagship, will show above the center of the balustrade. The United States coat-of-arms, draped with the American colors and topped by an American banner, will surmount the painting. An oil painting of Columbus 5 by 8 feet is set in a drapery of flags of America, Spain and Italy, topped by a United States shield and banner, directly over the center of the main entrance of the building. The cost of decorating the building was about $1,200.

The trellis arch at Twenty-second street, Manhattan club building and the residence of ex-Secretary Whitney were visited by thousands Sunday. Along Fifth avenue from Madison square to Thirty-fourth street there were a series of standards, 100 in number, from which depended pointed gonfalons and Venetian flags bearing the arms of Ferdinand, Isabella, Columbus and others. The standards are surmounted by gilt eagles and decorated at their basis by civic shields. Broadway is now a kaleidoscope of changing colors. All the large wholesale houses in the dry goods district are artistically draped with gay bunting. The center piece in most cases is a painting of Columbus on one side and of Washington on the other.

In addition to the big stands at the city hall and in Union square, Madison square and Washington park many smaller ones have been put up. Seats on all of the stands will be free for the school and college parade to-day, with the exception of a few hundred seats already sold. The stands in Madison square, City Hall park and Union square are free only to women and children.

It is estimated that over 1,000,000 people will witness the parade this week.

STILL SMASHING RECORDS.

Wheelman Windle Does More Fast Riding on the Hampden Park Track.

Springfield, Mass., Oct. 10.—William Windle had another "go" at the records here Saturday, and as a result he holds the world's time for a mile at the standing and flying start. The former was done in 2:06 3-5, the quarter in 35 2-5; half, 1:06 3-5; three-quarters, 1:36 2-5. The previous record was held by Harry C. Tyler, at 2:08 4-5; the half mile (flying) was made in 57 4-5 seconds; the quarter being done in 28 2-5, or at the rate of a mile in 1:53 3-5. Windle previously held the record at 59 4-5.

Sacrilegious Robbers.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 10. — Burglars pried open the doors leading into St. John's Collegiate Catholic church Saturday morning and broke open two safes containing the church plate and jewels. Articles to the value of upward of $1,500 were stolen or destroyed.

Murdered in His Store.

Fresno, Cal., Oct. 10.—A young man named Good, who kept a small store at Tarpey Switch, 9 miles northeast of here, was found dead in his store Saturday morning. He had been murdered by unknown persons, evidently for the purpose of robbery.

STEAMSHIPS COLLIDE.

An Awful Disaster off Port Townsend, Wash.—Five Lives Lost—Many Persons Hurt.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 10.—The Canadian Pacific Navigation Company's steamer Premier was struck by the steam collier Willamette in a dense fog off Whidby island, about 10 miles south of Port Townsend, at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Four men were killed, one drowned and seventeen badly injured. The steam tug Goliath has arrived here with three of the dead, all of the wounded and the other passengers. The dead are:

Johannas Moe, of Tacoma, aged 40, motorman on the electric line; Frank C. Wyncoop, 13 years old, son of D. J. Wyncoop, Tacoma; John Rankin, waiter, Seattle, aged 25; unknown passenger, man about 40, still in wreck; unknown passenger, jumped overboard and drowned.

The Premier left Port Townsend about 1:30 for Seattle, in a heavy fog. She was blowing her whistle continuously. When off Point No-Point another vessel sounded close by, and almost immediately afterwards a terrific crash was heard. The fore cabin of the Premier was smashed to splinters and the prow of the Willamette was found jammed right into the bow of the Premier.

The Willamette was laden with coal and was on her way from Seattle to San Francisco. There were several men in the Premier's cabin, one of whom was killed, together with a boy. A steward who was in the saloon eating his dinner was instantly killed. Several other passengers were jammed in the debris. Some of them were seriously wounded and all more or less bruised. The stem of the Willamette was so deeply imbedded in the Premier that the passengers scrambled over the broken woodwork and on the collier. The women were handed up first, followed by the wounded as fast as they could be moved. Men with broken limbs, and both men and women with bleeding faces and bodies were helped up. It was soon seen to be impossible to draw of the Willamette without sinking the Premier, so Capt. Anderson determined to forge ahead, driving before him the steamer spiked on his bow. He forced her back on the beach and was so tightly wedged that he could not back off without dragging the Premier with him. The tug Goliah, towing out a schooner, was hailed and she took off the passengers, bearing them to Seattle. The receding tide left both vessels stranded and still interlocked.

CRESPO REIGNS.

The Victorious Leader of the Revolutionists Made Provisional President of Venezuela.

Caracas, Oct., 10. — Gen. Joaquin Crespo was accorded an enthusiastic reception upon his triumphal entry into Caracas Sunday. He marched into the capital at the head of the remainder of his army, 3,000 men having taken possession of the city Saturday.

A council of his officers and advisers was held and the result was the proclamation of Crespo as provisional president of the republic. He is to hold office only until the regularly elected congressman shall have had time to meet again and proceed to the election of a constitutional successor to ex-President Raimundo Andueza Palacio.

Crespo then issued a proclamation naming the following cabinet:

Minister of foreign affairs, Pedro Ezequiel Rojas; minister of the interior, Leon Colina; minister of finance, Senor Pietro; minister of war, Guzman Alvarez; chief of police, Gen. Victer Rodriquez; chief of telegraphs, Leopoldo Baptista; minister of public works, Munoz Tebar; minister of instructions, Silva Gaudolphy; general in chief, Ramon Guerra; governor of Caracas Senor Andrade.

These are all well-known Venezuelans who have aided the cause of the legalists by active service in the field or by financial contributions. The provisional cabinet gives general satisfaction. It will restore order throughout the distracted republic. The rumors concerning the escape of the de facto president, Villegas-Pulido, and his ministers are confirmed. They managed to get a vessel bound for Martinique. It is said to be their intention to proceed to France.

PRAIRIE FIRE IN DAKOTA.

Thousands of Acres of Land Burned Over —Many Farmhouses Destroyed.

Huron, S. D., Oct. 10.—A terrible prairie fire started 7 miles northwest of this city Sunday afternoon, burning over a stretch of country 10 miles wide and 20 miles long. The towns of Broadland and Hitchcock narrowly escaped destruction. Citizens turned out and fought the fire till dark, aided by a large force of men from this place. The country burned over is thickly settled by prosperous farmers, many of whom have lost everything. This country was devastated by prairie fire last fall. The fire originated by men burning a fire break about a timber claim. Up to 8 o'clock p. m. the fire was still raging, though less fiercely. The wind blew at a velocity of 40 miles an hour, driving the flames before it at fearful speed.

Tennyson's Funeral Sermon.

London, Oct. 10.—The prince of Wales will represent the queen at the funeral of Tennyson. Lord Salisbury is expected to be present at the poet's interment. According to promise, the lord bishop of Westminster preached the funeral sermon in the Haslemere church Sunday. He referred to the dead laureate in eulogistic and feeling terms and his remarks made a deep impression on the large crowd that attended the services.

Failure in Omaha.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 10.—The Omaha Barbed Wire Fence and Nail Company failed Saturday for $39,000, a chattel mortgage of $23,000 being given to the Omaha national bank and one for $16,000 to the Washburn-Moen Manufacturing Company of Chicago. Mr. Tiffany, the principal stockholder, says creditors will be paid in full, while stockholders will lose all. The reason assigned is that the barbed wire trust has been crowding the smaller factories closer and closer and has cut prices where it was impossible to compete with it.

Irishmen Honor the Memory of Parnell.

Dublin, Oct. 10—The people who took part in Sunday's demonstration in honor of the late Charles S. Parnell equaled in number those who attended his funeral a year ago. Thousands of visitors came to this city from Cork, Galway and the north of Ireland. Floral tributes in the form of wreaths, harps and other designs were received from political bodies throughout the country, and completely filled the memorial car and two carts. The procession to Parnell's tomb was accompanied by bands and corporations of Dublin and Cork.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

FOUGHT TO KILL.

Two Farmers Engage in a Deadly Duel in the Moonlight.

Alex Gravel and August Artman, well-to-do farmers, fought to the death with pitchfork and knife 3 miles west of Little Falls. Gravel and his father, Narcisse Gravel, with a young Italian, were on their way home to Gravelville when Artman overtook them. A quarrel ensued and Alex Gravel, a young man of 22, grappled with Artman, the former using a knife and the latter a pitchfork. Artman was stabbed in twenty places, the fatal wound being made in the left thigh. The father of Gravel, a cripple, was unable to leave his vehicle to separate the combatants. The Gravels and the Italian are under arrest.

Hail at St. Paul.

A hailstorm passed over St. Paul, doing much damage to vegetation and buildings. The hailstones were fully 1 inch in diameter and a great many pedestrians were injured before they found shelter. For half an hour business was suspended all over the city, travel on the streets being perilous and almost impossible, while the noise of pelting hail prevented indoor labors. Trees were almost denuded of leaves and great numbers of window lights were broken. Telephone wires were badly damaged by being broken down, and much loss results.

No Perjury After All.

In the case of Edmund Brouilette, who was arrested at Crookston for perjury and had a hearing before Judge Spendley, the judge dismissed the case after the first witness had been heard on the ground that the clerk of the court who issued the marriage license, and before whom it was said that Brouilette had sworn that his intended wife was of age when she was only 16 years old, had not asked him to swear as to the age of the young lady in question, and therefore the state had no defense.

It's a Sorry-Go-Round.

A crusade has been commenced by the pulpit and Transcript newspaper in Little Falls against a steam merry-go-round which has been running there for some time. The daily receipts of the machine have amounted to over $50. Immoral tendencies are charged against it. Rev. George De Bolt, Methodist minister, would commence criminal proceedings against the proprietor for running on Sunday and an injunction was secured against it as a public nuisance.

AT ITS HEIGHT.

The Carnival at St. Louis a Glorious Success.

A Crowded and Happy City—Elaborate Arrangements for Taking Care of the Crowds—Six Miles of Brilliantly-Illuminated Streets—A Host of Other Festivity Attractions.

St. Louis, Oct. 6.—This is "Fair Thursday," and it is unfortunate for the city that the census can not be taken to-day, for it would certainly reveal the presence in it of over a million people. The streets are thronged with sight-seers, and there are over 125,000 people who have spent a happy day at the fair. The exposition also has been crowded all day, and Gilmore's "One Hundred," the greatest band on earth, has had to respond to encore after encore at each of the four concerts in the great music hall.

The Exposition remains open until October 22, and any who have not seen it should arrange to attend at least once before the great doors are finally closed for the season. This is the ninth consecutive annual season, all records for annual expositions having been easily broken, and as the displays have been getting better and better every year, the combined attractions are positively irresistible this fall. The music is the very best that can be provided, regardless of expense, and the art gallery is one of the finest on the continent. There are also innumerable displays in which the blending of color and the triumphs of mechanical art are combined, and there are also fish, electric, carriage, and other departments. The expense of running an exposition of this kind is of course enormous, but the attendance is so uniformly large that it is only necessary to charge 25 cents for admission. This trifling payment includes all the departments, as well as a seat at the great Gilmore concerts, which are alone worth far more than the cost of a ticket.

The beauties of the street illuminations increase as the season wears on. The illustration is of the Santa Maria arch, one of the series of set pieces designed to illustrate the discovery of America and the great achievements of Columbus. To the visitor it appears as though the World's fair were already in progress, and the cheers which greet the world's discovery panorama every illumination night are remarkable. Over seventy-five thousand lights are used, the majority of them electric, and the effect is best described as dazzling.

The season is drawing to a close and procrastination is no longer permissable. All the railroads are making low rates to the city of St. Louis, and prompt inquiry should be made of the nearest station agent for details. There will be grand illuminations on the evening of the 13th and 20th, and visits should be arranged so as to take in these nights. There need be no fear as to finding accommodations at reasonable rates, for the merchants have organized a hotel and boarding bureau, which will engage rooms or board for visitors without charge and guarantee regular rates.

THE FIVE GREAT LAKES.

When and How They Got the Names They Now Bear.

The names of the five great lakes of America are all traceable to Indian origin. The early discoverers of Ontario called it "St. Louis," and later the French called it "Lake Fontenac," in honor of their governor. The English, when they first claimed dominion, called Ontario "Lake Katarakui;" Michell called it "Catarakui" and Pownell did the same.

Huron was named from an Indian tribe that formerly inhabited its shores. In 1766, Homans, in his description of that region, always called Huron "Lake Michigan," so did De L'Isle twenty-three years later. As early as 1688, Father Hennepin called it Huron or Karegnondi, and Coxe, who comes in between the time of Homan and De L'Isle, never called it any thing but "Karegnondi," except in one chapter where he says: It should be remembered by the educated reader that some have called this body of water "Lake Michigan;" others, "the Lake of the Hurons." Washington's journal calls it "Lake Quatoghi" or "Huron."

Lake Michigan was known to nearly all early travelers and geographers as "Lake Illinois." It was known to white men nearly one hundred years before Sener first called it by the name of Michigan.

Champlain, the first topographer of Lake Superior, called it "Grand Lac." That wonderful relic, "the Jesuit map," calls it "Lake Tracy or Superior." Coxe and Sener both referred to in their writings as "Lake Nadoussian," which was one of the aliases by which a certain tribe of Sioux were known.

Lake Erie received its name from the Eries, a tribe of Indians. This tribe was also known as the Cat nation; thereupon some of the early writers call the lake "Felis" and "DuChat." Sener called it "Lake Cadaragua." Washington's journal, Michell, and Pownell and several other writers called it "Lake Okswego."

MY MOTHER'S BIRTHDAY.

Days of mingled joy and grief,
Days of toil and sweet relief,
Days of languor sore, and pain,
Days of smiling rest again:
All have passed, and now to-day,
Time pauses on his hurried way,
Smiling with meaning gravely sweet,
And lays a birthday at your feet.
Much the years have brought to thee:
A tender, boundless charity,
A calm and gracious womanhood,
The strength which wraps the truly good,
A charm of manner like the scent
Of violets with breezes blent,
Life, from his treasures manifold,
Hath poured on you his purest gold,
And underneath the strain of care,
Like chords of music quaint and rare,
Soft breathings of affection come,
And fill with melody the home.
Sweet heart! Those dear hands of thine
Are made for ministries divine;
For soothing weary ones to rest,
For clasping children to thy breast,
For true love's service, simple, sweet,
Leading souls to the Master's feet,
All life is richer, deeper far
Because of thee; like a gleaming star
Thy quiet life will brighten all
The darkened way where sad hearts fall.
Oh, sweetest, dearest truth divine
That love's pure light will ever shine!
All life will ever live and move
Sustained by the Eternal Love.
Thy earnest soul will live to bless,
With precious stores of tenderness,
With never-failing charity,
Through cycles of eternity,
The children in the Father's home:
Helping the weakest one to come
And leaning on the Father's breast
Find everlasting peace and rest.

I LIKE to visit Uncle Si Low and his good wife, Aunt Furbay Low, for both of them are jolly old people, and Aunt Furbay Low's penchant for match-making is the source of a great deal of amusement for all her friends. Before she married Uncle Si she was the widow Furbay, the lamented Furbay having died at the age of fifty, leaving his widow to arrange a match for herself, a thing that she was fully capable of doing, as was proven by the fact that she was led to the altar by Uncle Si in considerably less than a year after Mr. Furbay had "gone over," to quote the somewhat non-committal language of the pastor who ministered to the spiritual wants of the members of the little country church of which he had been a member. In view of the fact that Uncle Si had been a widower for nearly ten years before he fell victim to Cupid's arrows and the charms of Aunt Furbay, there were those in the neighborhood who meanly intimated that in this case the lady had done the courting, but that does not interfere with the fact that they were a good old couple to visit, and, if the story were a true one, it has not the remotest connection with the one I have to tell.

It was last fall that I went, according to promise, to visit Uncle Si and his "companion." I had written them when I was coming, and as the little river steamer bumped up against the wharfboat at Ripley, I saw my old friend on the lookout. That portion of his face that was not hidden by his full beard, and the twinkling of his bright gray eyes, assured me that my welcome was a cordial one, and in a few minutes we were spinning up the road toward his home. Uncle Si asked me so many questions about myself that I had no time to inquire about his people further than to get the assurance that Aunt Furbay was "sort o' middlin'," which was Uncle Si's way of saying that she was in perfect health. I did ask about about John Furbay, Aunt Furbay's son, and Uncle Si told me he was married, in a very matter of fact way, and when I asked to whom, I received the very indefinite information that his bride had been a "gal up our way." From the scantiness of the information given me I suspected there was something unpleasant connected with his marriage, and dropped the subject without further remark than to express surprise, when I did not feel the least symptoms of that emotion.

As we drove up to the gate in front of Uncle Si's home, Aunt Furbay came down to meet us and tell me I was as "welcome as the flowers in May" and ask me more questions than I could have answered in a week, but as she did not pause for an answer to any of them I added to my reputation with her of being "being a sensible young man who never tries to cut a person off when they're talkin'." Uncle Si went on to take care of the team and I followed Aunt Furbay into the house and was shown into the sacred and solemn gloom of the "spare room" which was only opened to the most welcome guests. I soon escaped from the prison-like order that prevailed and wandered down to the kitchen. Here I found a blooming lassie whom I had never met before. I supposed she was the hired girl and probably the daughter of some neighbor who had a surplus of daughters. She blushed prettily as I walked into the room. I spoke to her in the idiotic manner that is in vogue when two are obliged to speak without a formal introduction, and stepped out on the porch where I could see the grand old hills that loomed up in the purpling shades of the coming evening. I could not help speculating about John Furbay's marriage, and I concluded that one of Aunt Furbay's matchmaking efforts had miscarried.

Presently Uncle Si and Aunt Furbay came in and while she and the girl I had seen were putting the finishing touches to the supper table, which had been waiting my coming, Uncle Si came out on the porch to tell me that his tobacco crop was of excellent quality and much heavier than usual. In a short time we were called to supper, and Aunt Furbay introduced me to the youdg lady by saying: "This is Netta."

After supper Uncle Si and I went back to the porch and he lighted his corncob pipe, while I drew deep breaths of the cool breeze from the river and the dim Kentucky hills beyond.

"Yes," said Uncle Si, presently, as if continuing a conversation that had been recently broken off, "John's married and he's got a nice little wife too, if I do say it myself."

"Where did he find her?" I asked, thinking I had been laboring under a mistaken idea and rather at sea.

"Right here in the neighborhood," answered Uncle Si. "You see it was one of mother's plans, an' I allow she never had one on 'em work out to the better satisfaction o' the parties interested than this one did. Mother's a master hand at gettin' up matches an' she's sort o' proud o' her record in that direction. Long in June there was a mighty fine gal came up from Cincinnati to stay a spell with Nellie Bradley. The Bradleys have connections in Cincinnati an' thit gal, whose name was Jeanette Herbert, was one of 'em. She was calculatin' to stay all summer, an' Nell brought her over one day to introduce her to us. I'd heard o' her afore she come over an' I supposed she would be sort o' uplifted an' carry her head pretty high while she was in this neck o' woods, but she was just the nicest little gal I ever laid eyes on, an' mother nearly fell on her neck the first thing. We knew her father was rich as mud, an' we was considerably surprised when we found that she could cook an' do any other kind o' work as well as if she had to work for a livin'.

"'Twasn't a week afore mother begun to hint around that Miss Bradley would make a mighty good match for our John, and I knowed he was good enough for anybody, for he's had a good deal o' money spent on him a-givin' him an eddication up to Lebanon, an' to Delaware, an' it did seem as if he orter get a wife from the pick o' all the gals in creation. John ain't my boy, you know, but seein' I never had none o' my own, I set a good store by him an' wanted him to do well; so I sort o' fell in with mother's plans, an' when I see that the two on 'em was a-gittin' along mighty well together, I kind o' patted myself on the back over the way things was a-goin'. Nellie an' John had allus been good friends, an' it wasn't long afore the boy got to goin' over every whipstitch on some errand or other, an' mother an' me we knowed the thing was as good as settled an' nade our plans accordin'.

"About this time John got a letter from an old schoolmate tellin' him that he might look for company any day, an' sure enough in a few days along comes as fine a-lookin' feller as you could wish to see. When he first came he allowed he'd stay a week, but he kep' lingerin' along till fiually mother she said she believed Phil—Phil Hunt was his name—was more'n half in love with our hired gal.

"I'd noticed myself that he was sorter hangin' round where she was, but bless you, I hadn't mother's keen scent for that sort o' thing, an' never gave it a second thought. Nellie Bradley an' Miss Herbert seemed to have a great likin' for the gal, too, an' very frequently they'd run over an' talk to her in the evenin' an' then John an' the gal would go home with them across the fields, an' I never see a lot o' young folks get along more friendly together, an' when young Tom Harkness come home an' begun to pay a good deal of attention to Nellie, mother was jest wild, for there was a chance to make three matches to once, an' you might say, kill three birds with one stone.

"Mother said our girl would make a splendid wife for anybody, and she'd been real scared that John would fall in love with her, cause no one on airth could say a word agin her, an' she wanted John to marry a little higher in the social speer than to take a farmer's daughter. Mother, you know, is a leetle inclined to be aristocratic on some p'ints.

"Wall, things went on in a perfectly satisfactory manner for more'n a month, an' mother an' me had it all fixed, how we was a-going to set John up in business. He had a little property from his father, an' mother she's got quite a passel o' money one place an' another, an' I've got a little down to the bank at Ripley that Cashier Shoemaker takes care of for me, so puttin' this an' that together we could gather up a right tidy sum on a pinch.

"As I was a-sayin', things was goin' on at a merry pace. John an' Phil an' the hired gal they went over to Bradley's every night, or else Nellie an' Miss Herbert an' Tom they come over here, an' mother kep' me awake half the night every mortal night tellin' me how tickled she was that John was a-goin' to do so well, an' she even got up a plan to have three weddin's all at one time in the church down to Ripley, an' she 'lowed that she would do the best she could with the hired girl, whose mother was a widder an' not very well off in this world's goods. Phil wasn't very well fixed himself, only his eddication an' his position as a book-keeper in Cincinnati to keep a wife on, but the gal was a good housekeeper, an' savin', an' jest the gal for Phil to a T. She calculated on givin' her a good settin' out, for she thought a sight of her an' her mother before her, and she was so tickled to think that John was not goin' to marry her that she felt pretty tol'able liberal toward her.

"I listened to mother so much that I swow I got interested in the business, an' most of the time I was a-workin' some scheme or 'nother to help her along."

Just then Aunt Furbay came out on the porch and Uncle Si settled back on his chair and began to stroke his whiskers in a meditative manner.

"You'd better finish the story I've been tellin' Harry," he said to her, as she bestowed herself in a capacious rocker.

"What was you a-tellin' him?" queried Aunt Furbay.

"I was jest a-tellin' him about how you made some matches among the young folks an' got John married off," was the answer.

"Now Simon Peter Low," said Aunt Furbay, "if you ain't the biggest born idiot I ever see. You can't never keep your mouth shet about anything, an' you go an' blab everything you know the first chance you get.

"I might as well tell you the straight of it," she continued, turning to me, "for I know pap can't never tell a thing jest as it is. How much did he tell you?"

"I jest explained to him how John fell in love with Miss Herbert an' Phil Hunt with the hired girl," interposed Uncle Si, chuckling as if he had perpetrated a joke.

"Oh," sniffed Aunt Furbay, "you did, did you? I'll tell the rest of it then."

"They ain't much to tell," she began, ignoring Uncle Si and addressing me, "only one day the young folks went off over to the Kentucky side to spend the day a-philanderin' through the country. At the last minit the hired girl didn't want to go and John took her to task for wantin' to spoil the fun, an' they had a long talk out on this very porch, and finally she cried, an' John he said he wouldn't go 'less she did, and then she got ready, an' afore she started she come an' kissed me as if she didn't never expect to see me agin, an' I felt real sorry to see her feelin' so blue over the trip.

"I had a sort o' queer feelin' all day that something was a-goin' to happen, an' I was skeered o' my life for the youngsters, an' you may be sure I felt a mighty sight better when I see the whole lot o' them a-comin' in' safe an' sound.

"They all come up the road laughin' as if there wasn't no such thing as sorrow in the world, but they kind o' quieted down afore they got to the house an' they came in lookin' sort o' queer an' skeered like. When they'd all got in John he kind o' blushed up an' turnin' to Phil an' Miss Herbert, said: 'Mother, this is Mr. and Mrs. Hunt; they were married to-day accordin' to the laws o' Kentucky.'
